§ 767. Generally.—Statutes in most jurisdictions make the driving of a motor vehicle by an intoxicated person a criminal offense,[10] and statutes of this kind have generally been recognized as a valid exercise of the police power.[11] Such statutes are variously phrased. One form extensively adopted is to the effect that whoever shall drive a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor shall be guilty, etc., while another form frequently used provides that whoever operates a motor vehicle while in an intoxicated condition shall be guilty, etc.[12] Some forbid the driving of an automobile by a person "while intoxicated or in any degree under the influence of intoxicating liquor."[13] Others add the element of causing injury to person or property in operating a motor vehicle while in an intoxicated condition.[14]

In most states the offense is defined as a misdemeanor,[15] but in a few it is declared to be a felony.[16]

§ 768. Construction of Statutes.—Notwithstanding the fact that criminal statutes are as a rule strictly construed,[17] the courts have in some instances said that statutes prohibiting the driving of an automobile while intoxicated should be liberally construed to effect their purpose,[18] and even where the

---

[8] Brimhall v. State, 31 Ariz. 522, 255 P. 165, 53 A.L.R. 231.

[9] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1499, s. 49 A.L.R. 1392, and 68 A.L.R. 1356; 12 B. R. C. 142.

[10] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1499, s. 49 A.L.R. 1392, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

A statute providing that "any person driving a motor car . . . who is apparently under the influence of intoxicating liquor may be apprehended without warrant by any member of the police force and charged with an offense against this act" merely authorizes the arrest of a person driving a car who is apparently under the influence of liquor, and does not by itself create any offense. Doyle v. Harvey, [1923] Vict. L. R. 271, 12 B. R. C. 137.

[11] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1499, s. 49 A.L.R. 1392, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

Where the main purpose of a statute is to raise a general highway fund, the inclusion of provisions making it unlawful to operate a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor renders the act, pro tanto, unconstitutional as embracing matters not germane. Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1393, s. 68 A.L.R. 1357.

But the inclusion in "an act in relation to motor vehicles" of a provision making it unlawful to drive or operate a motor vehicle while drunk or intoxicated is not a violation of a constitutional provision prohibiting the passage of an act containing provisions not fairly included within its title. Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1393, s. 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[12] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1500, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[13] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1500, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[14] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1500, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[15] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1500, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[16] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1500, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[17] See Statutes [Also 25 R. C. L. p. 1081, § 301].

[18] State v. Tacey, 102 Vt. 439, 150 A. 68, 68 A.L.R. 1353.

Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1499, s. 49 A.L.R. 1392, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

In State v. Tacey, 102 Vt. 439, 150 A. 68, 68 A.L.R. 1353, the court holds that such statutes should be so construed as to accomplish their intended purpose.

An Iowa court has observed that the law providing for the punishment of one operating an automobile on a public highway while intoxicated is a salutary one, and needs vigorous application, owing to the large number of automobiles and the large volume of traffic on the public high-courts have not expressly said so, they seem generally to have proceeded upon the assumption that such statutes should be liberally construed to carry out the purpose for which they were enacted.[19]

§ 769. Conflicts between Statutes and Ordinances.—The view has been taken that the act of driving an automobile upon the streets of a city while intoxicated is punishable under the state statutes making it a felony for an intoxicated person to drive an automobile upon a public highway, though there is a municipal ordinance, enacted within the powers of the municipal corporation, making such an act committed within the confines of the city a misdemeanor, as a municipal ordinance must yield to a state law enacted for the general welfare of all the people of the state.[20] If the state in prohibiting the driving of a motor vehicle upon the public highways by one under the influence of intoxicating liquor, provides that the act shall apply generally throughout the state, and that no political subdivision shall make or enforce any regulations imposing fines other than those prescribed by the statute, a municipal corporation has no authority to enact an ordinance forbidding the driving of motor vehicles upon the city streets by intoxicated persons, and fixing a higher punishment than that provided by the state law.[1]

c. ELEMENTS OF STATUTORY OFFENSE

§ 770. Generally.—The language of the various statutes differs greatly; as a general proposition it may be said that the elements of the offense consist, first, of the driving of an automobile; second, driving it on a public highway; and third, intoxication of the driver.[2] In some states, additional elements are provided; for instance, in some the driving must be such as to endanger the lives or the safety of the public; in others, the accused must have driven in such manner as to have caused injury to person or property.[3]

§ 771. "Driving" or "Operating" Motor Vehicle.—"Driving" an automobile within the meaning of statutes prohibiting driving while intoxicated or while under the influence of intoxicating liquor undoubtedly means that the car must be moving along a street or highway, or such place as falls within the contemplation of the statute, by virtue of the acts of the intoxicated person. Merely starting the motor of a car, or attempting to start it, does not constitute "driving" within the terms of such acts.[4] However, the fact that the car moved only a few feet does not justify a holding as a matter of law that the accused was not driving.[5] ways, and that the court was so disposed to uphold it, to the end that the general traveling public might be protected against reckless and careless driving by persons in an intoxicated condition; Annotation: 68 A.L.R. 1357.

---

[19] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1499, s. 49 A.L.R. 1392, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[20] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1499.

[1] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1499, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

A city orddinance prohibiting any person in an intoxicated condition from driving a motor vehicle is invalid under an express declaration in a statute that no ordinance "in respect to or limiting the use or speed of motor vehicles" shall have any force or validity. Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1393.

[2] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1500, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[3] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1500, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[4] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1501, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1358; 12 B. R. C. 142.

A person is not guilty of the offense of driving a car while intoxicated where he entered the car, which was standing in the street, and started the engine, but was prevented from setting the car in motion by the intervention of a constable, who arrested him on the charge of being under the influence of intoxicating liquor while driving a motor car. Doyle v. Harvey [1923] Vict. L. R. 271, 12 B. R. C. 137.

[5] Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1393, s. 68 A.L.R. 1358.

A person may be guilty of an attempt to drive a car while intoxicated where he, while intoxicated, inserted the ignition key and put his foot upon the starter with intent to drive upon a public highway, although he was prevented from carrying the attempt into full execution.[6]

To constitute "operating" an automobile while intoxicated, within the meaning of motor vehicle acts, it is not necessary that the vehicle be in motion.[7] Starting the motor and allowing it to idle in neutral,[8] or steering a car as it is being towed to a place of repair, has been held to constitute "operating" within the meaning of such acts.[9]

§ 772. Driving "Motor Vehicle."—To constitute the offense of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated the instrumentality used must be such as to constitute a motor vehicle within the meaning of the statute. In some jurisdictions a motorcycle is regarded as a motor vehicle within the meaning of regulations.[10] An automobile unable to proceed under its own power, which is being towed, is a "motor vehicle" within the meaning of a statute making it an offense to operate a motor vehicle while intoxicated, and providing that the term "motor vehicle" shall include all vehicles propelled by power other than muscular power.[11]

§ 773. Driving on Public Thoroughfare.—To constitute the offense of driving or operating an automobile while intoxicated it is generally necessary that the car be driven or operated upon a public street or highway,[12] though there is authority to the effect that under the provisions of some statutes, that is not necessary. Thus, under a statute prohibiting the operation of a motor vehicle while in an intoxicated condition, it is not required, and is not an element of the offense, that the driving be done on a public highway.[13]

§ 774. Intoxication—Generally.—While the statutes or ordinances forbidding the driving of a motor vehicle while intoxicated generally do not define the terms, a few statutes prohibit one from driving who is only slightly or to any degree under the influence of intoxicating liquor.[14] The phrases "under the influence of an intoxicant," and "in an intoxicated condition," mean substantially the same thing.[15]

§ 775. —Tests of Intoxication.—The courts have adopted various tests in construing the terms "intoxicated" or "under the influence of intoxicating liquor."[16] In general, however, they have construed such terms to mean that the driver must be so under the influence of liquor that his capacity to operate his automobile is impaired,[17] or that he had drunk intoxicating liquor to the extent that he had lost the normal control of his body and mental faculties.[18]

---

[6] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1501, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 L.R.A. 1358.

[7] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1501, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393, and 68 A.L.R. 1358.

[8] State v. Webb, 202 Iowa, 633, 210 N. W. 751, 49 A.L.R. 1389.

Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1393, s. 68 A.L.R. 1358.

[9] State v. Tacey, 102 Vt. 439, 150 A. 68, 68 A.L.R. 1353, where it appears that the statute involved provided that the words "operate," "operating" or "operated" should include an attempt to operate and should be construed to cover all matters and things connected with the presence and use of motor vehicles on the highway whether they were in motion or not.

[10] See supra, § 761.

[11] State v. Tacey, 102 Vt. 439, 150 A. 68, 68 A.L.R. 1353.

[12] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1502, s. 49 A.L.R. 1394, and 68 A.L.R. 1359; 12 B. R. C. 144.

[13] Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1394, s. 68 A.L.R. 1359.

[14] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1503, s. 49 A.L.R. 1394, and 68 A.L.R. 1359.

[15] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1503, s. 49 A.L.R. 1394, and 68 A.L.R. 1359.

[16] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1503, s. 49 A.L.R. 1394, and 68 A.L.R. 1359.

[17] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1503, s. 49 A.L.R. 1394, and 68 A.L.R. 1359.

§ 776. Punishment.—The statutes which in varying language define the crime ordinarily known as driving while intoxicated provide various penalties for violations thereof. In some cases it has been held proper to consider the extent of the damage resulting from the conduct of the accused as a factor in determining a suitable punishment for the particular offense.[19] In other cases the courts have taken the view that the offense of driving an automobile when intoxicated is of such nature as to justify a punishment as for an aggravated offense, although in the particular instance no injury was caused by the act.[20] Where a statute provides a minimum punishment, but does not fix a maximum, the punishment which may be given in a particular case rests in the sound discretion of the court. An indeterminate penitentiary sentence not to exceed one year is proper where the statute prescribes the alternative of such sentence or a fine and imprisonment in the county jail.[1]

3. DRIVING WITHOUT OPERATOR'S PERMIT OR LICENSE

§ 777. Generally.—Driving an automobile without an operator's license is made a crime by statute in many states.[2] And if a person drives a car in a jurisdiction where his permit has been revoked he is subject to a penalty. This is true even though he has become a resident of another state and has there procured a motor vehicle registration and automobile license tags, which he is using when he is apprehended.[3]

4. FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH REGULATIONS RELATING TO LIGHTS

§ 778. Generally.—Various penalties are prescribed for failure to comply with certain regulations as to lights while driving or operating an automobile.[4] Such regulations relate primarily to the number of lights required on automobiles, front and rear, the nature of the lights, and the time when they must be used.[5] Penalties are provided for failure to use lights which will not glare and for failure to have lights inspected.[6]

---

[18] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1504, s. 49 A.L.R. 1394, and 68 A.L.R. 1361.

[19] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1512, s. 49 A.L.R. 1399, and 68 A.L.R. 1371.

[20] State v. Giles, 200 Iowa, 1232, 206 N. W. 133, 42 A.L.R. 1496.

[1] State v. Giles, 200 Iowa, 1232, 206 N. W. 133, 42 A.L.R. 1496.

[2] See McMahon v. Pearlman, 242 Mass. 367, 136 N. E. 154, 23 A.L.R. 1467.

[3] District of Columbia v. Fred, 281 U. S. 49, 74 L. ed. 694, 50 S. Ct. 163.

[4] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1226, s. 78 A.L.R. 815.

An automobile standing on a city street after dark with engine at rest is within a statute prohibiting the operation of automobiles on the streets after dark without lights. Com. v. Henry, 229 Mass. 19, 118 N. E. 224, L.R.A.1918B, 827.

In Jaquith v. Worden, 73 Wash. 349, 132 P. 33, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 827, the court decided that an automobile, when stopped or left standing in the highway, did not cease to be "driven" within the meaning of a statute providing that "every automobile or motor vehicle, when driven on any public road," between certain hours, should have "at least one lighted lamp, showing white to the front and red to the rear."

However, the view has been taken that an automobile left standing on the street with its engine stopped is not within the contemplation of an ordinance providing that motor vehicles "operated or driven" upon the street should, during certain hours, display two lighted lamps on the front and one on the rear, and that the rays of the rear light should shine upon the number plate in such manner as to render the numerals thereon visible for a stated distance "in the direction from which the motor vehicle is proceeding," and that the front lights should be visible for a stated distance "in the direction in which the motor vehicle is proceeding." Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1228.

[5] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1226, s. 78 A.L.R. 815.

[6] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1226, s. 78 A.L.R. 815.

A headlight on an automobile, even

It is not a valid objection to an ordinance or statute that it penalizes driving without certain lights, for instance, rear lights, without making knowledge or intent an element of the offense.[7] The legislature or a municipal corporation may make the person in charge of an automobile absolutely liable for failure to maintain a rear light, even though it may have gone out without his knowledge,[8] though there is some authority to the contrary.[9] To be valid, such statutes are in most instances required to be definite and reasonable.[10]

Statutes requiring lights on an automobile traveling a public highway after dark have no application to a vehicle on a private way.[11]

5. Failure to Register

§ 779. Generally.—Statutes variously worded provide penalties for failure of a dealer, or of the owner, chauffeur, or manufacturer of a motor vehicle operated upon the public roads or highways, to file or cause to be filed annually an application for registration, and noncompliance is generally punishable as a misdemeanor.[12] The view has been taken, however, that the operation of an automobile without the requisite number plates is not a crime when due solely to official delay in furnishing the plates.[13] Various related or incidental acts are also penalized. Knowingly making a false statement in an application for the registration of a motor vehicle is a criminal offense.

An ordinance requiring the registration of automobiles, when properly adopted, may be enforced by a fine.[14]

6. Failure to Stop, Give Information, etc., after Accident

a. In General

§ 780. Generally.—A requirement universally incorporated in motor vehicle acts is that the driver of an automobile shall stop his car, in case of an injury to a person or property due to his culpability, or to accident, and furnish certain information, such as his name and address, the number of his driver's license, the registration number of the motor vehicle; and in some instances to render assistance.[15] Failure to comply is generally a felony.[16] though it does not produce a dangerous glare, may be unlawfully used where it has not been tested and sanctioned as required by statute. Re Hinkelman, 183 Cal. 392, 191 P. 682, 11 A.L.R. 1222.

---

[7] Hays v. Schueler, 107 Kan. 635, 193 P. 311, 11 A.L.R. 1433.
Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1436.

[8] Hays v. Schueler, 107 Kan. 635, 193 P. 311, 11 A.L.R. 1433.
Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1227, s. 78 A.L.R. 815.

A city ordinance regulating the operation of motor vehicles on the streets of a city, which requires a red rear light to be displayed between certain hours, may impose a penalty for its violation without making a specific intent or a guilty mind an essential element of the misdemeanor. Hays v. Schueler, 107 Kan. 635, 193 P. 311, 11 A.L.R. 1433.

[9] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1227, s. 78 A.L.R. 815.

[10] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1227, s. 78 A.L.R. 815.

[11] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1229, s. 78 A.L.R. 815.

[12] People v. Smith, 156 Mich. 173, 120 N. W. 581, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 41, 16 Ann. Cas. 607.
As to the applicability of motor vehicle acts to motorcycles, see § 761.

[13] State v. Gish, 168 Iowa, 70, 150 N. W. 37, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 135.
Annotation: Ann. Cas. 1917B, 145.

[14] People v. Schneider, 139 Mich. 673, 103 N. W. 172, 69 L.R.A. 345, 5 Ann. Cas. 798.
Annotation: 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 221.

[15] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1426, s. 66 A.L.R. 1229 and 101 A.L.R. 911.

The object of the provision, "knowing that injury has been caused to a person or property due to the culpability of the said operator, or to accident," in a statute which provides that such a one shall be guilty of a felony if he leaves the place of such injury or accident without first stopping and giving his name, residence, etc., is to make the statute more clearly applicable to all cases of accident, however caused, than would be apparent if these words were omitted. People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161.

For discussion of the various phases of the statutes, see infra, §§ 781 et seq.

[16] Ule v. State, — Ind. —, 194 N. E. 140,

Such requirements are designed to prohibit drivers of motor cars from seeking to evade civil or criminal liability by escape before their identity can be established, and from leaving persons injured in collisions in distress or danger for want of proper medical or surgical treatment.[17]

The word "causing," in a statute defining the offense, "whoever knowingly goes away without stopping and making himself known after causing injury to any person or property," is used in the ordinary sense of the word, and does not mean "who was legally responsible for the death."[18]

A statute providing that any person operating a motor vehicle, who, knowing that injury has been caused to a person or to property, "due to the culpability of the said operator or to accident," leaves the place of the injury or accident without stopping, giving his name, residence, etc., shall be guilty of a felony, does not provide for the punishment of two offenses, or of one offense which may be committed in two different ways.[19]

b. Construction of Terms

§ 781. Knowledge of Accident or Injury.—Knowledge on the part of an automobile operator that an accident or injury has been caused by him is ordinarily made a prerequisite to the duty to stop and give information, or to do other affirmative acts.[20] Knowledge of the injury, however, does not mean an absolute, positive knowledge. It means that the driver must be aware that harm has been done; it must be present in his mind that there has been an injury; and then, with that in his mind, he must deliberately go away without making himself known.[1] If an injury is inflicted under such circumstances as would ordinarily superinduce the belief in a reasonable person that injury would flow, or had flowed, from the accident or collision, then it is the duty of the operator to stop his vehicle.[2]

§ 782. Requirement that Operator Stop.—The statutes requiring the driver of an automobile to stop after an accident either expressly require him to stop immediately, or have been construed to mean that he must do so.[3] Simply stopping the car, looking back, learning nothing of what has been done, and then driving on, leaving the victim without help, do not constitute a compliance with a statute requiring a driver in such circumstances to stop and offer assistance. Such statutes require the driver to stop as soon as reasonably possible, return to the scene of the collision, and do, or offer to do, all the acts required by a motor vehicle act.[4]

§ 783. Requirement that Operator Make Himself Known.—A requirement

---

101 A.L.R. 903; Ex parte Kneedler, 243 Mo. 632, 147 S. W. 983, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 622, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 923; People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A. (N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161.

Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1426, s. 66 A.L.R. 1229, and 101 A.L.R. 911.

[17] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1428, s. 66 A.L.R. 1229, and 101 A.L.R. 911; Ann. Cas. 1917E, 588.

[18] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1425.

[19] People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161.

[20] Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682; People v. Curtis, 217 N. Y. 304, 112 N. E. 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 586.

Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1437; Ann. Cas. 1917E, 590.

[1] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1425, s. 66 A.L.R. 1228, and 101 A.L.R. 913.

Under a statute providing for the punishment of any person who, in operating an automobile, "knowingly went away without making himself known after injuring any person or property," the word "knowingly" imports a perception of the facts requisite to constitute a crime. Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682.

[2] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1425, s. 66 A.L.R. 1228, and 101 A.L.R. 913.

[3] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1426, s. 66 A.L.R. 1229, and 101 A.L.R. 915.

[4] Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1233.

is generally incorporated in motor vehicle acts that the driver of an automobile which causes injury to a person or property stop and make himself known;[5] that is, he must give his name and the place where he may be found. It is not sufficient compliance for the operator to furnish someone with the number of the car, since the operator may not be the owner and the information may not be sufficient for the purpose of ascertaining his identity as the person wanted.[6] Some statutes require the operator to give his name, address, and the number of his operator's license.[7] Delegating to another the duty of disclosing the driver's identity may be a sufficient compliance with the statute, though such other fails to deliver the information.[8]

§ 784. Requirement that Operator Render Assistance.—In many jurisdictions the statutes require that the operator of a motor vehicle shall, in case of accident, stop immediately and, among other things, render such assistance as may be reasonable or necessary, and such statutes have been given a common-sense interpretation in view of the fact that it would be futile for the legislature to undertake to be specific in stating what aid should be rendered,[9] though in some instances such statutes have been held invalid for vagueness, indefiniteness, and uncertainty.[10] A statute providing that in case of accident the driver shall stop and render assistance, including the taking of any injured persons to a physician or surgeon for medical treatment, if such treatment is required, or if such assistance is requested, by any occupant of the vehicle struck, does not make a driver guilty of a criminal offense in refusing to transport a person to a surgeon who is not in fact injured.[11]

c. CONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTES

§ 785. Generally.—Statutes requiring the operator of a motor vehicle on the highway, or one assuming control over the operator, to do certain affirmative acts after the happening of an accident, i. e., to stop, to furnish information and means of identification, to render assistance, and, in some cases, to report to the proper authorities, are a valid exercise of the police power.[12] They do not constitute an infringement of the constitutional guaranty of due process,[13] nor do they violate the constitutional guaranty against compulsory self-incrimination.[14] Such statutes do not require the operator of a motor vehicle to state the circumstances of the occurrence tending to show his responsibility, but merely to stop and identify himself.[15] Undoubtedly, however, they do require him to make known a fact which will be a link in a chain of evidence to convict him of crime, if in fact he has been guilty of one, but since the legislature may prohibit altogether the use of automobiles on the highway, it has authority to declare the use of a motor vehicle in such a way as to injure any person or property, a crime.[16] Such statutes, because of the uncertainty of the language used, are not unconstitutional as delegating to courts and juries legislative power to define the offense charged.[17]

---

[5] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1428, s. 66 A.L.R. 1230, and 101 A.L.R. 916.

Such a statute imposes active and positive duties upon the operator of the automobile. It is not satisfied by his stopping at some remote, obscure, or inaccessible place, nor by his mere passive willingness to answer inquiries; it requires him to tender on the spot, and immediately, explicit and definite information regarding himself, of a nature which will make it easy to identify him readily. This information must be furnished to those whose person or property has been injured, if reasonably possible, and, if not, to someone representing their interest, or to some public officer or other person at or near the place at the time of injury. Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682.

In People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161, the court stated: "The statute does not require the operator of the motor vehicle to state the circumstances of the occurrence tending to show his responsibility, but merely to stop and identify himself."

[6] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1428, s. 66 A.L.R. 1230, and 101 A.L.R. 916.

[7] Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1230.

[8] Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682.

[9] Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1231; 101 A.L.R. 916.

The word "required," in a statute providing that an automobilist who strikes a person shall carry him to a physician or surgeon for treatment, if such treatment is "required," means "necessary." Scott v. State, 90 Tex. Crim. Rep. 100, 233 S. W. 1097, 16 A.L.R. 1420.

A statute requiring an automobilist who strikes a person to stop and render to him all necessary assistance requires the motorist to render all the aid which would reasonably appear to him, as an ordinary person, at the time to be necessary. Scott v. State, 90 Tex. Crim. Rep. 100, 233 S. W. 1097, 16 A.L.R. 1420.

[10] Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1231; 101 A.L.R. 916.

[11] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1428, s. 66 A.L.R. 1229.

[12] State v. Razey, 129 Kan. 328, 282 P. 755, 66 A.L.R. 1225; Ex parte Kneedler, 243 Mo. 632, 147 S. W. 983, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 622, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 923.

Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1234; 101 A.L.R. 918.

In Ex parte Kneedler, 243 Mo. 632, 147

d. Defenses

§ 786. Generally.—The absence of an essential element of an offense is, of course, always a good defense. Hence, lack of knowledge of the striking

---

S. W. 983, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 622, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 923, the court said: "The statute is a simple police regulation. It does not make the accident a crime. If a crime is involved, it arises from some other statute. It does not attempt in terms to authorize the admission of the information as evidence in a criminal proceeding. The mere fact that the driver discloses his identity is no evidence of guilt, but rather of innocence."

[13] Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1234; 101 A.L.R. 918.

[14] State v. Razey, 129 Kan. 328, 282 P. 755, 66 A.L.R. 1225; Ex parte Kneedler, 243 Mo. 632, 147 S. W. 983, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 622, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 923; People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A. (N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161; Scott v. State, 90 Tex. Crim. Rep. 100, 233 S. W. 1097, 16 A.L.R. 1420.

Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1234; 101 A.L.R. 918; Ann. Cas. 1913C, 925, s. Ann. Cas. 1915A, 165.

A highway law providing that any person operating a motor vehicle, who, knowing that injury has been caused to a person or to property, due to the culpability of the operator or to accident, leaves the place of the injury or accident without stopping and giving his name, residence, and license number to the injured party or to a police officer, shall be guilty of a felony, is not invalid under Const. Art. 1, § 6, providing that no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; since, because of their size and weight, great power and speed, and the fatalities caused by them, the legislature might absolutely prohibit the use of a motor vehicle on a public highway, and, therefore, assuming that the statute impairs the constitutional privilege, the legislature had power to require a waiver of that privilege as a condition to the use of the highways by a motor vehicle, at least to the extent to which it has required such waiver. People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161.

A statute which makes it a crime for a person who has caused injury to another person by the operation of a motor vehicle on a public highway to fail to stop, give his name and residence and motor license number, give pertinent information to the injured person or some other person thereabout, and to report the matter to the sheriff or the nearest police officer, does not violate the constitutional guaranty of § 10 of the Bill of Rights against compulsory self-incrimination. State v. Razey, 129 Kan. 328, 282 P. 755, 66 A.L.R. 1225.

A statute providing that any person operating a motor vehicle, who, knowing that injury has been caused to a person or property, leaves the place without stopping or giving his name, residence, and operator's license number, shall be guilty of a felony, is a valid police regulation, not in violation of the constitutional provision that no person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal cause, the statute, at most, only affording a means of identification which might be used in a subsequent criminal prosecution; and so, even if, in a particular case, the constitutional privilege warranted the withholding of the information, that privilege might be set up as a defense to a prosecution under the statute, although it would not generally invalidate the statute. Ex parte Kneedler, 243 Mo. 632, 147 S. W. 983, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 622, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 923.

[15] People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161.

Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1236.

[16] People v. Rosenheimer, 209 N. Y. 115, 102 N. E. 530, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 977, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 161.

[17] Statutes providing certain requirements of the driver in case of accident, such as stopping, and punishing a failure to do so as a misdemeanor, have been held not to be unconstitutional on the ground that by the uncertainty of the language used, there was delegated to the court and jury legislative power to create or define the offense charged, contrary to the provision of the Constitution that the legislative power is vested in the Senate and House of Representatives. Annotation: 87 A.L.R. 555.

is a defense to a prosecution under a statute requiring an automobilist who strikes a person to stop and render him necessary assistance.[18] However, a person is not relieved from the duty placed upon him to stop, be ready to give his name and address, and render necessary assistance, by the fact that the person struck was made unconscious,[19] or instantly killed.[20]

7. HOMICIDE

a. IN GENERAL

§ 787. Generally.—Although it was a crime at common law to cause the death of, or injury to, a human being by doing a lawful act without the exercise of the proper degree of care to avoid the danger of injury to others, or by doing an unlawful act,[1] yet, in view of the frequency of tragedies in connection with the operation of motor vehicles, legislation on the subject has been deemed desirable, and the crime is now generally defined and made punishable by statute ordinarily as manslaughter, though sometimes as murder. These statutes seem to contemplate only unintentional killing or injury, but, of course, if the driver of a motor vehicle should intentionally strike a person with his car with intent to kill, and should thereby kill him, it would be murder independently of the statutes relating to the operation of motor vehicles. It is generally held, under either such statutes or general principles of criminal law, that the driver of a motor vehicle may be guilty of homicide for causing a death through the operation of such vehicle in a negligent or reckless manner, or in violation of law;[2] and this is true although the person who is

---

[18] Scott v. State, 90 Tex. Crim. Rep. 100, 233 S. W. 1097, 16 A.L.R. 1420.

[19] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1427, s. 66 A.L.R. 1228.

Although a person injured by being struck by an automobile is unconscious, and no other person is present, the driver, if he leaves such person without having seen someone who may demand the information, is guilty of violating a statute which provides that any person operating a motor vehicle, knowing that injury has been caused to a person, shall forthwith bring his motor vehicle to a stop, return to the scene of the accident, and give to any person demanding the same his name and address, the number of his driver's license, the registration number of his motor vehicle, and the name and address of each occupant thereof. Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 1427, s. 66 A.L.R. 1228.

[20] Annotation: 66 A.L.R. 1230.

[1] See HOMICIDE [Also 13 R. C. L. p. 858, § 161].

[2] District of Columbia v. Colts, 282 U. S. 63, 75 L. ed. 177, 51 S. Ct. 52; Story v. United States, 57 App. D. C. 3, 16 F. (2d) 342, 53 A.L.R. 46, writ of certiorari denied in 274 U. S. 739, 71 L. ed. 1318, 47 S. Ct. 576; State v. Goetz, 83 Conn. 437, 76 A. 1000, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458; State v. Campbell, 82 Conn. 671, 74 A. 927, 135 Am. St. Rep. 293, 18 Ann. Cas. 236; People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902; People v. Harris, 214 Mich. 145, 182 N. W. 673, 16 A.L.R. 910; Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495; Ex parte Liotard, 47 Nev. 169, 217 P. 960, 30 A.L.R. 63; State v. Cope, 204 N. C. 28, 167 S. E. 456, citing R. C. L.; State v. Stansell, 203 N. C. 69, 164 S. E. 580, citing R. C. L.; State v. Palmer, 197 N. C. 135, 147 S. E. 817, citing R. C. L.; Keller v. State, 155 Tenn. 633, 299 S. W. 803, 59 A.L.R. 685; Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605; State v. Hopkins, 147 Wash. 198, 265 P. 481, 59 A.L.R. 688, writ of certiorari denied in 278 U. S. 617, 73 L. ed. 540, 49 S. Ct. 21; State v. Whatley, 210 Wis. 157, 245 N. E. 93, 99 A.L.R. 749; Clemens v. State, 176 Wis. 289, 185 N. W. 209, 21 A.L.R. 1490.

Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 756; 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 458, s. 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, and L.R.A. 1918B, 954; 18 Ann. Cas. 239; Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1146.

See infra, §§ 788, 789, for particular discussion of homicide caused while operating automobile in a negligent manner or in violation of law.

One who drives an automobile recklessly, carelessly, and negligently, and at a rate of speed forbidden by the statute, upon the public streets or highways, and thereby causes the death of another, is guilty of criminal homicide. Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

One causing death by driving an automobile on the highway at night without the lights required by statute, and at a speed in excess of that permitted by statute, may be found guilty of manslaughter in the fourth degree under statutes making every killing by the act or culpable negligence of another, which is not justifiable or excusable, or which is not by statute declared to be some other degree of crime, manslaughter in the fourth degree, and defining excusable homicide as that committed by accident and misfortune in doing any lawful act by lawful means, with usual and ordinary caution, and without recklessly driving the machine, as soon as he sees a pedestrian in danger, uses every effort to avoid injuring him, provided that the operator's prior recklessness was responsible for his inability to control the car and prevent the accident which resulted in the death of the pedestrian.[3]

§ 788. As Result of Unlawful Act.—If a person drives his automobile in such a manner as to violate the laws in respect thereto, and while so doing strikes another and causes his death, he may be prosecuted for murder or manslaughter—in most cases, the latter.[4] Under statutes providing that the killing of another in the doing of an unlawful act not amounting to a felony is manslaughter, a person who, while driving an automobile in violation of a statute or ordinance regulating speed or prescribing precautions to be observed by automobile drivers, and as a result of such violation kills another, is guilty of manslaughter.[5] The rule applies to one driving while intoxicated, or at excessive speed, or in any manner violative of law.[6] The violation of a statute forbidding a speed in excess of a definite rate may render the operator guilty of manslaughter if it is clearly shown that such unlawful speed was the proximate cause of death.[7]

§ 789. As Result of Negligence.—A person causing the death of another

---

unlawful intent. Clemens v. State, 176 Wis. 289, 185 N. W. 209, 21 A.L.R. 1490.

In Keller v. State, 155 Tenn. 633, 299 S. W. 803, 59 A.L.R. 685, it is held that driving while intoxicated is an act malum in se supplying intent.

[3] State v. Campbell, 82 Conn. 671, 74 A. 927, 135 Am. St. Rep. 293, 18 Ann. Cas. 236; People v. Camberis, 297 Ill. 455, 130 N. E. 712, citing R. C. L.; State v. Stansell, 203 N. C. 69, 164 S. E. 580, citing R. C. L.

Annotation: 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 459; 18 Ann. Cas. 239.

[4] People v. Seiler, 57 Cal. App. 195, 207 P. 396, citing R. C. L.; People v. Camberis, 297 Ill. 455, 130 N. E. 712, citing R. C. L.; People v. Falkovitch, 280 Ill. 321, 117 N. E. 398, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1077; Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

Annotation: Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1082.

The unlawful act relied on by the state as the basis for a charge of manslaughter may fall under more than one statute, and in such a case it is error to compel the state to elect upon which statute it relies for a conviction. State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

[5] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902; State v. Sudderth, 184 N. C. 753, 114 S. E. 828, 27 A.L.R. 1180; State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137; Keller v. State, 155 Tenn. 633, 299 S. W. 803, 59 A.L.R. 685; State v. Hopkins, 147 Wash. 198, 265 P. 481, 59 A.L.R. 688, writ of certiorari denied in 278 U. S. 617, 73 L. ed. 540, 49 S. Ct. 21.

Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 756.

One who, while driving an automobile at from 25 to 30 miles an hour on the wrong side of a street on which he sees many children playing, kills a three-year-old child while crossing the street at a regular crossing, is guilty of manslaughter under a statute defining manslaughter as the unlawful killing of another, without malice, either on a sudden quarrel or unintentionally, while the slayer is engaged in the commission of an act made unlawful by a valid statute, and under another statute prohibiting the operation of a motor vehicle at a speed greater than is "reasonable or proper having regard for width, traffic, use and the general and usual rules of such road or highway or so as to endanger the property, life or limb of any person." State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

In People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902, it was held that the driving of an automobile while intoxicated, in violation of a statute, was "an unlawful and culpably negligent act," and a conviction of manslaughter was sustained on proof that the death of a person riding in the automobile as a passenger resulted proximately therefrom.

In Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495, the court held that one who drives an automobile wilfully and recklessly at an unlawful rate of speed on a public street, and thereby causes the death of another, is guilty of criminal homicide.

[6] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 756.

In State v. Sudderth, 184 N. C. 753, 114 S. E. 828, 27 A.L.R. 1180, it appeared that the prosecutor's car was struck by that of the defendant while the latter was violating the law as regards the operation of motor vehicles, in that he was driving on the wrong side of the road and at an improper rate of speed. It was pointed out that the party in default may be prosecuted for murder or manslaughter if a person on the highway is killed as a result of such illegal driving.

[7] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 914.

The driving of an automobile while intoxicated is malum in se, although the statute merely prohibits it under penalty. People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902.

while operating an automobile in a wanton and reckless manner, or, as sometimes said, in a grossly negligent manner, may be guilty of manslaughter.[8] This is true where one, while intoxicated, drives an automobile upon the highway,[9] or permits or authorizes another, who is intoxicated, to drive his car, and a person is killed by reason of the negligent operation of the car.[10]

Driving an automobile at a greatly excessive rate of speed in violation of the statutes may constitute an act so wanton and reckless as to evince an utter disregard of the safety of others, and necessarily to imply an intent to injure, so as to constitute gross negligence.[11] Under a statute making a killing by culpable negligence without design to effect death, in cases where such killing would be murder at common law, manslaughter in the first degree, the circumstances must, to constitute such manslaughter, be such as to present the elements of common-law murder.[12]

Where a charge of manslaughter by the operation of an automobile is based on a statute providing that the killing of another by a reckless or grossly negligent act shall constitute manslaughter, the fact that the automobile was operated in violation of a statute or ordinance regulating speed or prescribing precautions to be observed is not conclusive of guilt, but is a circumstance bearing on the question whether the operation of the automobile was in fact criminally negligent.[13] Thus, the fact that the accused drove his automobile

---

[8] State v. Goetz, 83 Conn. 437, 76 A. 1000, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458; People v. Falkovitch, 280 Ill. 321, 117 N. E. 398, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1077; Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495; State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137; Clemens v. State, 176 Wis. 289, 185 N. W. 209, 21 A.L.R. 1490.

Annotation: 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458, s. 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403; L.R.A.1918B, 954; Ann. Cas. 1914A, 684; Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1146.

One is guilty of homicide who, with reckless disregard for the safety of others, so negligently drives an automobile in a public street as to strike and kill a pedestrian. State v. Goetz, 83 Conn. 437, 76 A. 1000, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458.

One may be convicted of manslaughter in the fourth degree, even though the killing was involuntary and due to inadvertence, under statutes making every killing by the act or culpable neglect of another, which is not justifiable or excusable, or which is not by statute declared to be some other degree of crime, manslaughter in the fourth degree, and defining excusable homicide, as that committed by accident and misfortune in doing any lawful act by lawful means, with usual and ordinary caution, and without unlawful intent. Clemens v. State, 176 Wis. 289, 185 N. W. 209, 21 A.L.R. 1490.

However, a person is not guilty of involuntary manslaughter in killing a boy while attempting to drive an automobile into the gap between two wagons which had just passed each other, going in opposite directions, if it reasonably appeared to him that he could safely do so, and the boy, concealed behind the wagon which he was meeting, unexpectedly ran into the path of his car. Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605.

[9] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902.

[10] See supra, § 759.

[11] Clemens v. State, 176 Wis. 289, 185 N. W. 209, 21 A.L.R. 1490.

In State v. McCombs, 33 Wyo. 346, 239 P. 526, 41 A.L.R. 717, the court held that careless driving at an unreasonable speed likely to endanger life or limb is not necessarily criminal carelessness within the Wyoming statute defining manslaughter. The appellate court disapproved of the trial court's instruction that the defendant was negligent as a matter of law, and guilty of a felony, if he exceeded a speed of 20 miles per hour and thereby caused the death of a person, and based its holding on the reasoning that the statute is intended to make a case of manslaughter only where the negligence is culpable or criminal in its nature—wanton, and without regard to consequences.

[12] Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

The fact that an automobile was driven at excessive speed by an intoxicated person, contrary to law, which resulted in the unintentional killing of another, will sustain a finding of malice sufficient to constitute murder at common law. Ibid.

[13] State v. Goetz, 83 Conn. 437, 76 A. 1000, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458; State v. Campbell, 82 Conn. 671, 74 A. 927, 135 Am. St. Rep. 293, 18 Ann. Cas. 236; People v. Falkovitch, 280 Ill. 321, 117 N. E. 398, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1077; People v. Harris, 214 Mich. 145, 182 N. W. 673, 16 A.L.R. 910; Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 756.

In People v. Harris, 214 Mich. 145, 182 N. W. 673, 16 A.L.R. 910, the court held that one who violates a statute prohibiting the operation of a motor vehicle on a public highway at a greater rate of speed than is reasonable, or so as to endanger the life or limb of any person, not in any event to exceed 25 miles an hour, is guilty of manslaughter if a person is killed by his negligent operation of the car. It is at a rate of speed greater than that prescribed by statute, does not necessarily establish the degree of negligence required to convict. Gross negligence must be proved, as well as the fact that the death of another was the direct result of the negligent act.[14] Likewise, the fact that the defendant, at the time and place of the accident, was driving his automobile at a rate of speed greater than that allowed by law, is not of itself sufficient to justify a finding that the defendant was guilty of manslaughter, where the statute provided that rates of speed greater than those mentioned were prima facie evidence of negligence, since it was necessary that the defendant should be shown to have been actually guilty of criminal negligence.[15]

§ 790. Degree of Negligence Necessary.—In cases dealing with homicides, resulting from negligence in operating automobiles, the decisions of the courts have stated in different terms the kind of negligence required to constitute a crime. In some of them it is said to be negligence that is "culpable and gross;" in others, that it must be such as to show a reckless disregard of the safety of others, etc.; but all of the authorities are agreed, in the absence of statutory regulations denouncing certain acts as criminal, that in order to hold one a criminal there must be a higher degree of negligence than is required to establish negligent default on a mere civil issue, and that, in order to sustain a conviction of criminal homicide attributable to a negligent omission of duty when engaged in a lawful act, it must be shown that a homicide was not improbable under all the facts existing at the time, and which should reasonably have had an influence and effect on the conduct of the person charged.[16] Carelessness in driving an automobile at a speed that is unreasonable, or likely to endanger life or limb, is not necessarily criminal carelessness within the meaning of a statute making one guilty of manslaughter who causes the death of another by culpable negligence or criminal carelessness.[17] further held that the fact that the defendant was engaged in the commission of an unlawful act in transporting liquor at the time of the homicide was an element in the chain of cause and effect, so as to permit the introduction of evidence thereof, as bearing on the question of negligence and tending to prove a reason for the excessive speed.

---

[14] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 916.

[15] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 916.

[16] Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605; State v. Whatley, 210 Wis. 157, 245 N. W. 93, 99 A.L.R. 749; State v. McComb, 33 Wyo. 346, 239 P. 526, 41 A.L.R. 717.

Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 829.

To warrant conviction under a statute declaring the killing of a human being by the gross negligence of another to be manslaughter, there must have been more than inadvertence or want of ordinary care; there must have been on the part of defendant either a wilful intent to injure or that reckless and wanton disregard of the rights and safety of another or his property which the law deems equivalent to an intent to injure. State v. Whatley, 210 Wis. 157, 245 N. W. 93, 99 A.L.R. 749.

In Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605, the court says that a person who, when not exceeding the speed limit, drives an automobile against a boy suddenly running into the path of the car from behind a wagon, and kills him, cannot be convicted of manslaughter unless his conduct was so reckless and negligent as to evince a disregard for the life of persons in the highway.

In State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137, the court says that in a prosecution under the statute involved, for manslaughter by the negligent operation of an automobile, the court should charge the jury that the standard of conduct required of the defendant in the operation of his car is that of an ordinarily careful and prudent person, and that if the defendant did not operate the car "at a speed greater than is reasonable or proper, having regard for width, traffic, use, and the general and usual rules of such road or highway, or so as to endanger the property, life, or limb of any person," as would appear to such ordinarily careful and prudent person in the then situation, he is not guilty of manslaughter.

[17] State v. McComb, 33 Wyo. 346, 239 P. 526, 41 A.L.R. 717, wherein the court held that careless driving at an unreasonable speed likely to endanger life or limb is not necessarily criminal carelessness within the Wyoming statute defining manslaughter. The court disapproved of the trial court's instruction that the defendant was negligent as a matter of law, and guilty of a felony, if he exceeded a speed of 20 miles per hour and thereby caused the death of a person, and based its holding on the reasoning that the statute is in-

§ 791. Wrongful or Illegal Act as Proximate Cause of Death.—In order that a person shall be guilty of a criminal homicide arising from the operation of an automobile, it is essential that the injury inflicted by the accused be the proximate cause of the death charged in the indictment; if death resulted from some intervening cause, a prosecution for homicide cannot be maintained. The mere fact, however, that wounds inflicted by the defendant became infected, even though as a result of negligent treatment, does not prevent the defendant from being guilty of homicide.[18] It is necessary also, according to the general rule, in a prosecution for a criminal homicide arising from the negligent operation of an automobile, or its use for an unlawful purpose or in violation of law, that it be shown that such negligent operation, or use for an unlawful purpose or in violation of law,—the unlawful act,—was the proximate cause of the death; that is, there must be a causal connection between the act and the death.[19] In other words, the death must have been the natural and probable consequence of the negligent or unlawful act, and not the result of misadventure, or of an independent intervening cause in which accused did not participate, and which he could not foresee.[20] There must be something more than a mere coincidence of time and place between the wrongful act and the death.[1] Under this view the mere violation of a statute will not sustain a conviction of manslaughter where it appears that the killing was not the natural or probable result of the unlawful act.[2] In some cases, however, a distinction is made between acts which are malum in se and those which are merely malum prohibitum. The former are regarded as supplying a criminal intent, and as rendering the accused guilty, even though the killing was not the natural or probable result of the act.[3]

b. Murder

§ 792. Generally.—If the driver of a motor vehicle should intentionally tended to make a case of manslaughter only where the negligence is culpable or criminal in its nature—wanton and without regard to consequences.

---

[18] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902.

One who drives an automobile with criminal negligence so that a passenger is thrown out, and the resulting shock, because of his alcoholic condition, causes delirium tremens resulting in death, is guilty of manslaughter if the illness would not have occurred and caused the death had the wounds from the fall not been received. State v. Block, 87 Conn. 573, 89 A. 167, 49 L.R.A.(N.S.) 913.

[19] State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137; Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605.

Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 772.

In Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605, it appeared that the accused, driver of an automobile, while attempting to pass a log wagon, struck and killed a boy running from behind it. The court reversed a conviction of manslaughter because of the failure of the trial court to charge that if death did not result from the accused's violation of the speed limit prescribed by the statute, there could be no conviction, unless the boy's death was the reasonable and probable result of the accused's negligent or reckless act, and that if he acted as would a man of reasonable care in attempting to pass the wagon, and death was the result of an accident caused by the boy's unexpectedly running from behind the wagon in front of the automobile, the homicide would not be unlawful.

[20] State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137; Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605.

[1] Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

[2] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 774.

[3] Keller v. State, 155 Tenn. 633, 299 S. W. 803, 59 A.L.R. 685, wherein it was held that the driving of an automobile upon the public highway by one who is under the influence of an intoxicant, in violation of statute, is an act malum in se so as to supply the criminal intent necessary to render him guilty of involuntary homicide for killing a pedestrian on the highway, although the killing was not the natural or probable result of the act. Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 774.

Where it is provided by statute that if the death of any human being be caused by the operation of a motor vehicle by any person while intoxicated, such person shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter, the criminal liability is incurred by the mere act of driving while intoxicated. Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 775.

strike another with his car with intent to kill him, and should thereby kill him, it would be murder independently of statutes relating to the operation of motor vehicles.[4] It is not, however, essential that there should have been an actual intent upon the part of the operator to kill the deceased. The necessary malice may be inferred or implied where the driver acts so recklessly or wantonly as to manifest a depravity of mind and disregard of human life,[5] as where he drives an automobile in such a manner as directly to imperil human life and without regard for the presence of persons on a busy street;[6] for example, one who, when in an intoxicated condition, drove an automobile at a reckless speed along the principal street of a village, into collision with another car, which resulted in the death of its occupant, may be found guilty of murder in the second degree, which will charge the one responsible for his movements with guilt of a like offense.[7]

c. Defenses

§ 793. Generally.—Various defenses have been considered by the courts in prosecutions for involuntary homicide resulting from the operation of automobiles. Ordinarily, when a person is charged with killing another while driving his car negligently or in violation of law, he may defend on the ground that his unlawful or negligent act was not the proximate cause of death. At least this is generally true where the act is malum prohibitum,[8] though in some jurisdictions this would not be a defense if the act was malum in se,[9] or a statute created absolute liability for a homicide committed while engaged in doing an unlawful act.[10] Accident or misadventure may be a defense, even though the accused was driving at an unlawful rate of speed.[11]

That no definite rate of speed is fixed by the statute prohibiting the reckless driving of automobiles is no defense to a prosecution for homicide for killing a person by such driving.[12]

§ 794. Lack of Intent.—An intent to cause the death of another is not an element in the crime of manslaughter,[13] Hence, the lack of intention to kill is not a defense to a prosecution for causing the death of a person while negligently or unlawfully operating an automobile. And the fact that an accessory to the killing of a person by the negligent operation of an automobile by an intoxicated person did not intend to inflict injury will not prevent a conviction of involuntary manslaughter, where the statute provides that lack of criminal intent shall not be a defense in behalf of an accessory.[14]

---

[4] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 756.

[5] State v. Trott, 190 N. C. 674, 130 S. E. 627, 42 A.L.R. 1114.
Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 766.

[6] Babbitt, Motor Vehicle Law, 4th ed. p. 1509, § 2094.

[7] State v. Trott, 190 N. C. 674, 130 S. E. 627, 42 A.L.R. 1114.

[8] See supra, § 791.

[9] Misadventure does not excuse an involuntary homicide committed while the accused was engaged in an unlawful act which was malum in se, or in an unlawful act which was malum prohibitum, but shown to be the proximate cause of the homicide, especially where such act was in violation of a statute designed to safeguard human life and safety. State v. Budge, 126 Me. 223, 137 A. 244, 53 A.L.R. 241.

Driving a motor car while intoxicated is an offense per se, and a homicide resulting therefrom is not excusable on the ground of misadventure; but being under the influence of liquor to an extent not amounting to intoxication is an offense malum prohibitum, and a homicide resulting from the driving of a car under such conditions may be excusable on the ground of misadventure, in case the violation of the statute in no way contributed to the homicide. State v. Budge, 126 Me. 223, 137 A. 244, 53 A.L.R. 241.
See supra, § 791.

[10] See supra, § 791.

[11] A homicide committed by one driving an automobile at an unlawful rate of speed, no other element of negligence being present, was due to accident or misadventure, where the deceased unexpectedly stepped in front of the automobile without warning, at a point in the street where pedestrians might not be expected to cross, and the excess of the legal limit of speed does not appear to have contributed to the accident, although the contributory negligence of the deceased is not a defense. To acquit of manslaughter on the ground of misadventure, a jury is not obliged to find as a fact that the accused, at the time of the homicide, was not engaged in doing an unlawful act. State v. Budge, 126 Me. 223, 137 A. 244, 53 A.L.R. 241.

[12] Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

[13] See Homicide [Also 13 R. C. L. p. 740, § 44].

§ 795. Intoxication.—In accordance with the general rule that voluntary drunkenness is not a defense to crime,[15] one cannot avoid criminal liability for a homicide committed in driving an automobile when intoxicated, on the ground that when he started on his trip he was so intoxicated that he did not appreciate his condition, or know and appreciate that operating the car while in such condition might cause a condition of things that would make him guilty of manslaughter.[16]

§ 796. Contributory Negligence of Deceased.—The familiar rule that contributory negligence of the person injured or killed by the negligence of the defendant in the operation of an automobile bars a recovery in a civil action[17] has no application to a prosecution for homicide due to criminal negligence in operating an automobile. In such case, the decedent's behavior may have a material bearing upon the question of the defendant's guilt, but if the culpable negligence of the latter is found to be the cause of the death, he is criminally responsible whether the decedent's failure to use due care contributed to the injury or not.[18] In some cases, the conduct of the decedent is material to the extent that it bears upon the question whether, under all the circumstances of the case, the defendant was negligent.[19]

§ 797. Former Jeopardy.—The defense of former jeopardy in criminal prosecutions is discussed under another title.[20] Here, however, it may be observed that a conviction of driving an automobile when intoxicated is not a bar to a prosecution for involuntary manslaughter by causing the death of a person while so doing.[1]

---

[14] Ex parte Liotard, 47 Nev. 169, 217 P. 960, 30 A.L.R. 63.

[15] See CRIMINAL LAW [Also 8 R. C. L. p. 129, §§ 106 et seq.].

[16] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902; State v. Trott, 190 N. C. 674, 130 S. E. 627, 42 A.L.R. 1114.

[17] See supra, §§ 419 et seq.

[18] State v. Campbell, 82 Conn. 671, 74 A. 927, 135 Am. St. Rep. 293, 18 Ann. Cas. 236; People v. Camberis, 297 Ill. 455, 130 N. E. 712, citing R. C. L.; State v. Custer, 129 Kan. 381, 282 P. 1071, 67 A.L.R. 909; Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495; State v. Palmer, 197 N. C. 135, 147 S. E. 817, citing R. C. L.; State v. Gray, 180 N. C. 697, 104 S. E. 647, citing R. C. L.; State v. Oakley, 176 N. C. 755, 97 S. E. 616, citing R. C. L.; State v. Sussewell, 149 S. C. 128, 146 S. E. 697, citing R. C. L.; Keller v. State, 155 Tenn. 633, 299 S. W. 803, 59 A.L.R. 685; Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605; Vasque v. State, 121 Tex. Crim. Rep. 478, 52 S. W. (2d) 1056, citing R. C. L.; Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 S. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

Annotation: 67 A.L.R. 922; 99 A.L.R. 833; L.R.A.1918B, 957; 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 459; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 501.

Where a person wilfully, recklessly, carelessly, and negligently, and at an unlawful rate of speed as defined by the statute, drives his automobile upon the public streets and highways and thereby kills another, negligence of the driver of another car, in which the deceased was riding when he was killed, cannot be invoked, under ordinary circumstances, to relieve such person of criminal liability. Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 403.

[19] State v. Custer, 129 Kan. 381, 282 P. 1071, 67 A.L.R. 909; Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605; Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

Annotation: 67 A.L.R. 922; L.R.A.1918B, 957; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 502.

The conduct of a boy who was killed by an automobile on a highway should be taken into consideration in determining whether, under the circumstances, the negligence of the driver of the car was the proximate cause of the death, or whether death resulted from an unavoidable accident. Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605.

[20] See CRIMINAL LAW [Also 8 R. C. L. p. 134, §§ 114 et seq.].

[1] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902.

8. LARCENY

§ 798. Generally.—By virtue of general larceny statutes,[2] or statutes relating expressly to larceny, the felonious taking of an automobile, or of automobile parts or accessories, is a criminal offense, but, in accordance with the general rule that the use of property of another by one who is lawfully in possession of it does not constitute larceny,[3] in the absence of a statute to the contrary, the use by a person of an automobile of which he is lawfully in possession for his own purposes, without the knowledge of the owner, does not constitute larceny.[4] To constitute an asportation within the law of larceny, "the least removal of the thing taken from the place where it was before" is sufficient, "though it be not quite carried off."[5] Starting an automobile parked in the street, and running it 150 feet, when it runs on to the curb and stops, is a sufficient asportation.[6] Attempting to start an automobile without moving it may constitute attempted larceny.[7]

9. LENDING LICENSE PLATES

§ 799. Generally.—In the absence of a statute to the contrary, a person who lends his license plates to another person does not commit a crime,[8] and if the person to whom they are loaned violates a speed regulation, the person loaning them is not criminally liable therefor.[9]

10. POSSESSION OF AUTOMOBILE WITH CHANGED OR DEFACED IDENTIFYING NUMBERS

§ 800. Generally.—Statutes in some jurisdictions make the possession of an automobile from which the manufacturer's serial numbers, or other identifying marks, have been removed, or on which they have been defaced or altered, a criminal offense, regardless of knowledge or intent concerning such fact on the part of the possessor.[10] Such statutes have generally been held constitutional as a valid exercise of the police power.[11] They do not unconstitutionally deprive a person of his liberty or property without due process of law,[12] or deny him the equal protection of the law.[13]

---

[2] See LARCENY [Also 17 R. C. L. p. 1].

[3] See LARCENY [Also 17 R. C. L. p. 41, §§ 46 et seq.].

[4] State v. Robinson, 106 W. Va. 276, 145 S. E. 383, 62 A.L.R. 351.

Annotation: 62 A.L.R. 354.

Where the uncontradicted facts and circumstances shown on the trial of an indictment for larceny of an automobile are that the accused had lawful possession of the car, and, having such possession, used it to make a journey to see a distant relative, without the knowledge of the owner, and did not claim the car, but gave full and true information relative thereto, when questioned about it on the journey, a jury is not warranted in finding the accused guilty of a felonious intent. Such facts and circumstances do not justify a finding of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Robinson, 106 W. Va. 276, 145 S. E. 383, 62 A.L.R. 351.

[5] Annotation: 19 A.L.R. 724.

[6] Annotation: 19 A.L.R. 728.

[7] Annotation: 19 A.L.R. 728.

[8] Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 1246.

[9] Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 1246.

[10] People v. Billardello, 319 Ill. 124, 149 N. E. 781, 42 A.L.R. 1146; People v. Johnson, 288 Ill. 442, 123 N. E. 543, 4 A.L.R. 1535.

Annotation: 4 A.L.R. 1538, s. 42 A.L.R. 1149; 11 A.L.R. 1435.

In People v. Johnson, 288 Ill. 442, 123 N. E. 543, 4 A.L.R. 1535, the court holds that scienter is not, under the Constitution, a necessary element of an offense which is malum prohibitum.

That a statute permits one in possession of a motor vehicle the original engine number of which has, without his knowledge or consent, been destroyed or altered, to obtain permission to cause a special number to be stamped on the engine, does not indicate an intention to relieve from the penalty imposed by the statute for possession of such vehicle with changed motor number, one who innocently purchased a vehicle the number of which had been changed. People v. Billardello, 319 Ill. 124, 149 N. E. 781, 42 A.L.R. 1146.

[11] People v. Billardello, 319 Ill. 124, 149 N. E. 781, 42 A.L.R. 1146, People v. Johnson, 288 Ill. 442, 123 N. E. 543, 4 A.L.R. 1535.

Annotation: 4 A.L.R. 1538, s. 42 A.L.R. 1149.

[12] People v. Billardello, 319 Ill. 124, 149 N. E. 781, 42 A.L.R. 1146.

11. TRANSPORTING OR RECEIVING IN INTERSTATE OR FOREIGN COMMERCE MOTOR VEHICLES KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN STOLEN

§ 801. Generally.—The National Motor Vehicle Theft Act of October 29, 1919,[14] sometimes referred to as the Dyer Act, makes it a criminal offense for anyone to transport in interstate or foreign commerce any motor vehicle known to have been stolen, and makes it a felony to receive a motor vehicle so moving. The constitutionality of this act as against an objection that its enactment was beyond the power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution has been upheld.[15] Under the provisions of the statute relating to the receiving of such motor vehicles, it is not essential to a conviction that the defendant knew of the interstate transportation, but only that it had been stolen.[16] The statute is violated if a person purchases a car with knowledge that it has been stolen, and drives it from one state to another, either for the purpose of ultimate future sale, or for the mere transportation or use of the purchaser.[17]

12. RECKLESS DRIVING

§ 802. Generally.—Reckless driving is expressly denounced by statute in many jurisdictions, by that name or in terms of the same import, as a criminal offense.[18] The punishment which may be imposed therefor varies in different jurisdictions.[19] As a general rule what constitutes reckless driving is to be determined from all the surrounding circumstances where the statute does not specifically declare what particular acts shall constitute the offense.[20] What constitutes reckless driving under some conditions may not be such under other conditions.[1] As a general rule, something more than mere negligence in the operation of an automobile is necessary to constitute the offense of reckless driving; generally the offense denotes operation of an automobile under such circumstances, and in such a manner, as to show a wilful or reckless disregard of consequences.[2] Under some statutes, however, negligence in the operation of an automobile is sufficient to constitute reckless driving.[3] Under other statutes reckless driving includes driving in a manner which un-

---

[13] People v. Johnson, 288 Ill. 442, 123 N. E. 543, 4 A.L.R. 1535.

Annotation: 4 A.L.R. 1538, s. 42 A.L.R. 1149.

[14] 41 Stat. at L. 325, chap. 89, 18 U. S. C. A. § 408.

[15] Brooks v. United States, 267 U. S. 432, 69 L. ed. 699, 45 S. Ct. 345, 37 A.L.R. 1407.

Annotation: 27 A.L.R. 956, s. 37 A.L.R. 1412.

In Whitaker v. Hitt, 52 App. D. C. 149, 285 F. 797, 27 A.L.R. 951, the court holds that driving a stolen automobile from one state to another is interstate commerce within the jurisdiction of Congress, under the Federal Constitution.

Congress has power to punish the receiving, concealing, storing, bartering, selling, or disposing of a motor vehicle transported in interstate commerce with knowledge that it has been stolen. Brooks v. United States, 267 U. S. 432, 69 L. ed. 699, 45 S. Ct. 345, 37 A.L.R. 1407.

[16] Annotation: 27 A.L.R. 956, s. 37 A.L.R. 1412.

[17] Annotation: 27 A.L.R. 956, s. 37 A.L.R. 1412.

[18] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.

Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1273 et seq.

[19] Depriving one of his license to drive an automobile may be a sufficient penalty for recklessly driving it. State v. Superior Ct. 139 Wash. 1, 245 P. 409, 45 A.L.R. 1530.

[20] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266; State v. Miller, 119 Or. 409, 243 P. 72, affirmed in 273 U. S. 657, 71 L. ed. 825, 47 S. Ct. 344; State ex rel. Berry v. Superior Ct. 139 Wash. 1, 245 P. 409, 45 A.L.R. 1530; Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1275.

[1] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1276.

[2] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266, involving a statute which provided that reckless driving should include driving a motor vehicle in a manner unnecessarily interfering with the free and proper use of the highway, or unnecessarily endangering users thereof, and prohibiting reckless driving eo nomine.

Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1278.

[3] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1278.

necessarily interferes with the free and proper use of the highway.[4] The violation of the rules governing traffic on the highways may, under the conditions existing at the time, constitute reckless driving, or an element of that offense.[5] Driving while intoxicated may be evidence of reckless driving, but proof of that fact is not ordinarily essential in order to establish the crime,[6] nor is an injury to the property or person of another an essential element unless declared so by statute.[7] One may be guilty of reckless driving even though no one else was upon the street.[8]

§ 803. As Dependent upon Rate of Speed.—In the absence of a statute or ordinance denouncing as reckless driving the operation of a motor vehicle in excess of a specified speed limit, the mere speed at which a motor vehicle was operated does not alone determine whether it was operated recklessly, but is only a circumstance to be considered in connection with other surrounding circumstances in determining the question.[9] Some statutes and ordinances expressly denounce as reckless driving the operation of an automobile in excess of the lawful rate of speed; under such statutes and ordinances the mere driving of an automobile at an unlawful speed constitutes the offense.[10] However, unless the offense of reckless driving is limited to violating the prescribed speed limit, the offense may be committed without exceeding such speed limit.[11] Some regulations provide that speed in excess of a stated rate, maintained for a specified distance, shall be deemed prima facie or presumptive evidence of reckless driving; such statutes and ordinances merely cast on the defendant the burden of showing that such speed was not reckless under the circumstances.[12] The fact that one was attempting to elude officers who had a warrant for his arrest constitutes no defense to a prosecution for reckless driving in excess of speed limits.[13]

---

[4] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.

[5] State v. Miller, 119 Or. 409, 243 P. 72, affirmed in 273 U. S. 657, 71 L. ed. 825, 47 S. Ct. 344.
Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1277.

Failure of the defendant to pass to the right of the intersection of the center of two streets before turning to the left, in connection with the speed at which he was driving, may constitute reckless driving. Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1278.

[6] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1281.

[7] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1281.

[8] Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682.

[9] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266; State ex rel. Berry v. Superior Ct. 139 Wash. 1, 245 P. 409, 45 A.L.R. 1530; Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.
Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1282.

Evidence that the defendant was operating an automobile on a boulevard past other automobiles and across street intersections at between 45 and 50 miles an hour is sufficient to sustain a conviction of reckless driving under a statute providing that "any person who drives any vehicle upon a highway in so negligent a manner as to indicate either a wilful or a wanton disregard of the safety of persons or property shall be guilty of reckless driving." Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1282.

Under a statute merely prohibiting reckless driving, and declaring that a violation should constitute a misdemeanor, it has been held that proof that an automobilist drove through a village at a high rate of speed did not justify a conviction, where it appeared that he did so between midnight and dawn, when there was no traffic, that the neighborhood was sparsely settled, and that the highway was straight, with only one intersecting street. Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1282.

[10] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1281.

[11] State v. Miller, 119 Or. 409, 243 P. 72, affirmed in 273 U. S. 657, 71 L. ed. 825, 47 S. Ct. 344.
Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1281.

The presence of pedestrians on the highway may be a sufficient reason for finding one guilty of reckless driving, although he drove at less than the maximum rate of 30 miles an hour fixed by statute, since the degree of care required was commensurate with the danger involved. State v. Miller, 119 Or. 409, 243 P. 72, affirmed in 273 U. S. 657, 71 L. ed. 825, 47 S. Ct. 344.

A man may observe the speed limit and still be guilty of reckless driving, by zigzagging constantly so as to endanger others and wantonly interfere with their rights. Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1283.

[12] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.
Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1283.

[13] State v. Freeman, 122 Me. 294, 119 A. 668, 29 A.L.R. 881.
Annotation: 29 A.L.R. 883.

§ 804. Conduct Endangering Public.—Under some statutes prohibiting driving recklessly, or so as to endanger life, limb, or property, which have been construed as creating distinct offenses, a person may be convicted of reckless driving without proof that the life, limb, or property of any person was endangered.[14] Some statutes, however, provide that reckless driving shall include driving in a manner which unnecessarily endangers users of the highway,[15] while others provide that to drive in a reckless manner shall be construed to mean the operation of a motor vehicle upon the public highways in such manner as to endanger or inconvenience unnecessarily other users of such highway.[16] The fact that one exercised all possible care after discovering upon the highway a person whom he injured does not prevent a prosecution for reckless driving based upon his antecedent conduct.[17]

§ 805. Where Acts Are Otherwise Made Punishable.—The offense of reckless driving, which is expressly denounced by statutes in many jurisdictions by that name, or in terms of the same import, is to be distinguished from other offenses created by statutes regulating the operation of automobiles on highways and making violations of their provisions criminal offenses. Where an act in connection with the operation of an automobile is, by statute, made a separate offense for which a punishment is provided, the general rule is that the act itself cannot be punished as reckless driving, although in connection with particular circumstances it might constitute that offense.[18] This rule precluding the punishment as reckless driving of an act made a separate offense for which a punishment is provided has been applied in cases involving statutes making it an offense to drive an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.[19]

In some jurisdictions reckless driving, and operating an automobile so as to endanger the life, limb, or property of the public, are distinct offenses; and acts which would constitute the latter offense are not necessarily sufficient to constitute the former.[20] For example, where a statute provides that no person shall operate any motor vehicle on a highway recklessly, having regard to the width, traffic, and use of the highway, the intersection of streets, and the weather conditions, or so as to endanger the property or life or limb of any person,[1] or prohibits reckless driving, and provides that it shall include driving a motor vehicle in a manner which unreasonably interferes with the free and proper use, or unnecessarily injures users, of a public highway,[2] separate and distinct offenses are created.

---

[14] Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682.
Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1280.

[15] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.

[16] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1280.

[17] Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682.

[18] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1274.
In People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266, it was held that separate and distinct offenses, conviction or acquittal of which does not prevent a prosecution for committing the others, are created by a statute which prohibits reckless driving and provides that it shall include driving a motor vehicle in a manner which unreasonably interferes with the free and proper use, or unnecessarily injures users, of a public highway.

[19] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1274.
A statute declaring that whoever shall operate a motor vehicle in any way recklessly, or while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, so that the lives or safety of the public are in danger, shall be punished as prescribed, denounces two distinct offenses. Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1275.

[20] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1275.

[1] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1275.
A defendant who was tried at the same time on three indictments, based on the same facts charging, respectively, manslaughter, operating a motor vehicle recklessly, and operating a motor vehicle so that the lives or safety of the public might be endangered, and was acquitted on the first two charges, was found guilty on the third. Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1275.

[2] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.
A statute penalizing the operation of an

13. Violating Speed Laws

§ 806. Generally.—Statutes, in many jurisdictions, declare driving an automobile on a public highway in excess of a certain speed limit,[3] or at a speed greater than is reasonable and proper under the existing conditions of traffic, width of road, etc.,[4] to be a criminal offense.[5] The regulation of the speed of automobiles may be effected by the use of the words "ride or drive," and a person may be said to be driving an automobile if he is controlling the motive power.[6]

Intent and knowledge are immaterial elements under speed statutes.[7]

The fact that an individual was attempting to elude an officer who had a warrant for his arrest does not excuse his driving an automobile on the public highway in excess of the speed limit, and in a reckless manner, in violation of a statutory provision.[8]

§ 807. Indefiniteness of Speed Regulation as Affecting Validity.—Statutes or ordinances providing that no person shall operate or drive any motor vehicle recklessly or at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the width, traffic, and use of the highways, and the general and usual rules of the road, or so as to endanger the property, life, or limb of any person, are regarded as not invalid on the ground that they are too vague, uncertain, and indefinite to sustain a criminal conviction;[9] nor is such a statute unreasonable.[10]

No definite rule can be stated as to when a statute forbidding the driving automobile in a manner which unnecessarily interferes with the free and proper use of the public highway, or unnecessarily endangers users of the public highway, is void for indefiniteness unless it can be read as condemning only the failure to exercise reasonable care, reasonable caution, or the reasonable foresight of a reasonably prudent and careful person. Ibid.

---

[3] Ex parte Slaughter, 92 Tex. Crim. Rep. 212, 243 S. W. 478, 26 A.L.R. 891; Weirich v. State, 140 Wis. 98, 121 N. W. 652, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1221, 17 Ann. Cas. 802.

A toll road owned and operated by a private corporation is a "public highway" within the meaning of a statute regulating the operation of automobiles upon any public highway, since, as the danger of personal injury to travelers thereon is as great, and immunity therefrom is as important, as on an ordinary highway, it will be presumed, in the absence of express provision, that the legislature contemplated a remedy as broad as the mischief to be guarded against. Weirich v. State, 140 Wis. 98, 121 N. W. 652, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1221, 17 Ann. Cas. 802.

Rules limiting the speed of vehicles upon streets under the control of a board of park commissioners may be adopted by them under statutes providing that they shall have the same power over such streets as is vested in them concerning parks, as to the use of which they have been given power to make rules, and a person may be convicted of driving in excess of the speed permissible under such regulations. Com. v. Crowinshield, 187 Mass. 221, 72 N. E. 963, 68 L.R.A. 245.

[4] Gallaher v. State, 193 Ind. 629, 141 N. E. 347, 29 A.L.R. 1059; Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495; State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

[5] Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 897, s. 29 A.L.R. 1066.

As to the liability of public officials or employees, such as fire departments, police officers, etc., for exceeding speed limits provided by statute or ordinance, see supra, § 760.

[6] Com. v. Crowninshield, 187 Mass. 221, 72 N. E. 963, 68 L.R.A. 245.

[7] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1436; 29 A.L.R. 884.

[8] State v. Freeman, 122 Me. 294, 119 A. 668, 29 A.L.R. 881.

Annotation: 29 A.L.R. 883.

[9] Gallaher v. State, 193 Ind. 629, 141 N. E. 347, 29 A.L.R. 1059; Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495; State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A. 1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137; Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 898, s. 29 A.L.R. 1066; L.R.A.1918B, 945.

Such a statute, as applied to one charged with manslaughter in killing a child while driving in violation thereof, is not a violation of the right of the accused to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him by reason of its generality and indefiniteness, provided the indictment advises the accused of the "nature and cause of the accusation." State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

[10] Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

of a motor vehicle in designated localities will be considered void for indefiniteness. Some courts take the view that statutes forbidding the driving of a motor vehicle at more than a specified speed upon a highway where the territory contiguous thereto "is closely built up,"[11] or making it a crime to operate an automobile around a curve without having the car under control, or without reducing the speed thereof to a reasonable and proper rate,[12] are void for uncertainty and indefiniteness; but, on the other hand, the view has been taken that a statute forbidding the driving of an automobile in excess of a certain speed "in the business portion" of cities was not so uncertain and indefinite as to render it void as a violation of the constitutional provision with reference to due process of law.[13]

§ 808. —Indefiniteness as to Rate of Speed.—Ordinarily, the courts will not substitute their opinions for the judgment of the legislature as to the reasonableness of an act fixing the rate of speed at which motor vehicles may be lawfully driven.[14] Therefore it may be said generally, though not without recognizing authority to the contrary, that statutes or ordinances providing that no person shall operate or drive any motor vehicle recklessly or at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the width, traffic, and use of the highways and the general and usual rules of the road, or so as to endanger the property, life, or limb of any person, are not invalid on the ground that they are too vague, uncertain, and indefinite to sustain a criminal conviction.[15]

14. Taking or Using Car Without Owner's Consent

§ 809. Generally.—Taking or using another's automobile without his consent is made a criminal offense in many jurisdictions.[16] Under some statutes it constitutes larceny.[17] Even though no statute makes it criminal to use the automobile of another without his consent, the agreement of two or more persons to take and use another's automobile without authority may be punishable as a criminal conspiracy, and a person may be guilty of malicious mischief in damaging another's automobile while driving it furiously, without knowing or caring whether he injures it or not.[18]

---

[11] Ex parte Slaughter, 92 Tex. Crim. Rep. 212, 243 S. W. 478, 26 A.L.R. 891.

Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 898, s. 29 A.L.R. 1066.

[12] State v. Lantz, 90 W. Va. 738, 111 S. E. 766, 26 A.L.R. 894.

Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 902, s. 29 A.L.R. 1066.

[13] Annotation: 11 A.L.R. 1436; 26 A.L.R. 898, s. 29 A.L.R. 1066.

[14] Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

[15] Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495; State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137; Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 898, s. 29 A.L.R. 1066.

The provisions of a Georgia statute making it penal to operate an automobile at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the traffic and use of the highways, or so as to endanger the life or limb of any person or the safety of any property, have been held invalid on the ground that the statute was too uncertain and indefinite in its terms to be capable of enforcement in a criminal action. Annotation: 26 A.L.R. 902, s. 29 A.L.R. 1066.

[16] Stovall v. New York Indem. Co. 157 Tenn. 301, 8 S. W. (2d) 473, 72 A.L.R. 1368.

[17] Under a statute providing that unauthorized use of an automobile shall constitute the crime of larceny, a chauffeur who uses his employer's automobile without his consent, and contrary to his instructions, is guilty of larceny although the car is being driven for the purpose of testing it. Rose v. Balfe, 223 N. Y. 481, 119 N. E. 842, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 238.

[18] State v. Davis, 88 S. C. 229, 70 S. E. 811, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 295.

C. Prosecutions

1. In General

§ 810. Generally.—Prosecutions for crimes incident to ownership or operation of automobiles, and relating to automobiles, such as the larceny and the transportation of, or receiving, stolen automobiles, are largely governed by the rules which apply in criminal prosecutions generally.[19]

The following sections discuss matters relating to indictments,[20] evidence,[1] and trial,[2] which are distinctive to the crimes under discussion.

2. Indictments and Informations

a. In General

§ 811. Generally.—The general rules governing the sufficiency, etc., of indictments are discussed under another title;[3] only special applications of them to the crimes under discussion are considered here. Of course, in all such cases the indictment or information must allege the essential elements of and the facts constituting the offense charged.[4] It cannot be supplemented or pieced out by affidavits in the magistrate's court.[5] Generally, where the statute alleged to have been violated contains a statement of all the facts necessary to constitute the crime, an indictment charging such offense in the language of the statute,[6] or in substantially the language of the statute, is sufficient.[7]

b. Charging Particular Offenses

§ 812. Assault and Battery.—The allegations which are distinctive to indictments or informations for assault are discussed under another title.[8] Here, however, it may be observed that in charging the striking and injuring of a person with an automobile, it is sufficient to charge an assault without charging all the details going to make up the assault.[9]

§ 813. Failure to Stop after Injury.—An indictment or information under a statute containing some or all of the following provisions, namely, that any person operating a motor vehicle, who, knowing that an injury has been caused to a person or property due to his culpability, or to accident, leaves without giving his name, residence, and operator's license number to the injured party or a police officer, or reporting the same to the nearest police station or judicial officer, shall be guilty of a felony,[10] need not allege that the accident occurred on a public highway;[11] nor need an indictment under a statute requiring an automobilist who strikes a person to render assistance to him allege that accused "knowingly" struck him, or that accused failed to render aid knowing that he had struck him.[12]

---

[19] See Criminal Law [Also 8 R. C. L. p. 38]; Indictments and Informations [Also 14 R. C. L. p. 150]; Trial; and titles dealing with particular crimes.

[20] See infra, §§ 811 et seq.

[1] See infra, §§ 820 et seq.

[2] See infra, §§ 831 et seq.

[3] See Indictments and Informations [Also 14 R. C. L. p. 150].

[4] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.

[5] Ibid.

[6] State v. Lantz, 90 W. Va. 738, 111 S. E. 766, 26 A.L.R. 894.
Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 775.

[7] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 775.

[8] See Assault and Battery, Vol. 4, p. 178, § 98.

[9] Brimhall v. State, 31 Ariz. 522, 255 P. 165, 53 A.L.R. 231.

[10] See supra, § 780.

[11] People v. Curtis, 217 N. Y. 304, 112 N. E. 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 586.

[12] Scott v. State, 90 Tex. Crim. Rep. 100, 233 S. W. 1097, 16 A.L.R. 1420.

§ 814. Driving While Intoxicated.—The sufficiency of indictments or complaints for driving an automobile while intoxicated is governed by the rules applicable to prosecutions generally.[13] A complaint charging the accused with driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor need not specifically mention the statute alleged to have been violated,[14] but the particular elements of the offense defined in the statute under which the prosecution was instituted must be included—for instance, the driving or operation of the car on a public highway;[15] or, where the statute includes injury to a person or property, such an injury must be alleged.[16] It is not necessary to use the words of the statute defining the offense; words of similar import may be used.[17]

§ 815. Homicide through Negligent or Unlawful Use of Automobile.—Indictments or informations for manslaughter caused by the negligent or unlawful operation of automobiles are governed largely by rules applicable to indictments for homicide caused by any other act of the accused, and more particularly by those especially applicable to indictments for homicide.[18] In charging involuntary homicide the indictment should allege that the accused at the time of the homicide was negligently or unlawfully driving his automobile.[19] In a number of decisions the view is taken that an information which charges that the defendant "negligently, carelessly, recklessly, unlawfully, and feloniously" operated a motor vehicle on a public thoroughfare, and thereby struck and killed the decedent, is sufficient without averring in detail in what such negligence, etc., consisted,[20] though there is some authority to the contrary.[1] A distinction between involuntary manslaughter committed while perpetrating an unlawful act not amounting to a felony, and the offense arising out of some negligence or fault in doing a lawful act in a grossly negligent manner, is sometimes made. In the former case it is held sufficient to allege the unlawful act with sufficient particularity to identify it, and then to charge that as a consequence the defendant caused the death of the deceased, and that there is no need to aver in detail the specific acts of the accused; but in case of manslaughter committed through gross or culpable negligence while doing a lawful act, the duty which was neglected or improperly performed must be charged, as well as the acts of the accused constituting failure to perform or improper performance.[2] Accordingly, the view is taken that an information for homicide committed by driving an automobile while intoxicated is not insufficient because it fails to state the specific act or acts which brought about the death.[3] Where a statute provides that it shall be sufficient to charge that accused did unlawfully kill deceased, the acts by which the unlawful killing was done need not be set out.[4] Under statutory short forms of indictment, it seems that merely charging that the accused unlawfully killed the deceased is sufficient.[5] Generally it is not necessary to charge that the deceased was a "human being," but this fact, of course, must appear in the indictment.[6] And it is not necessary to describe the particular character or kind of motor vehicle with which the killing was accomplished.[7]

---

[13] See INDICTMENTS AND INFORMATIONS [Also 14 R. C. L. pp. 171 et seq.].

[14] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1513, s. 49 A.L.R. 1400 and 68 A.L.R. 1374.

[15] Charging that the offense was committed "on a public thoroughfare, to wit, Weequahickpart," is sufficient. Annotation: 12 B. R. C. 144.

[16] Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1400, s. 68 A.L.R. 1374.

[17] Annotation: 68 A.L.R. 1374.

[18] See HOMICIDE [Also 13 R. C. L. p. 893, §§ 198 et seq.].

[19] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 776.

An information for involuntary manslaughter must charge accused with the commission of some unlawful act, or with negligently doing some act lawful in itself, or with negligent omission to perform a legal duty, and that death resulted therefrom. People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902.

[20] Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

An indictment for involuntary manslaughter committed by the reckless driving of an automobile, alleging that the act was done feloniously, unlawfully, and recklessly, is sufficient, although it does not charge that the killing was "wilful," as an act done feloniously is done with the deliberate purpose of committing a crime. People v. Falkovitch, 280 Ill. 321, 117 N. E. 398, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1077.

[1] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902.

[2] Ibid.

[3] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183

An indictment for involuntary manslaughter charging that two persons named feloniously, violently, wantonly, recklessly, and negligently struck another named person with an automobile driven by one of them is sufficiently definite and precise to charge each person named as a principal in the crime.[8]

Where an indictment for manslaughter charges the defendant with having unlawfully killed a particular person, sometimes otherwise known by another name, and there is no evidence tending to prove the alias, or that both names were the names of the same person, such failure is not a fatal variance because it is not prejudicial to the merits of the case or the substantial rights of the defendant.[9]

§ 816. Larceny; Sufficiency of Description.—Indictments for the larceny of automobiles, automobile equipment, or accessories, the same as indictments for larceny of property generally,[10] should describe the subject of the larceny with reasonable certainty, which means that the property should be so described as to individualize the transaction to such an extent that the description as made will enable the court to determine that the property alleged to have been taken is a subject of larceny, show the jury that the things stolen are those on which the indictment is founded, reasonably inform the accused of the instance meant in conformity with the usual constitutional guaranty that a person accused of crime shall have right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation, so that he may properly prepare his defense, and be such that the judgment rendered after trial on the indictment may be pleaded in bar of a subsequent prosecution for the same offense.[11] An indictment which describes the make, type, value, and ownership of the automobile is generally recognized as sufficient.[12] Even though it is advisable to describe the make of the car alleged to have been stolen, a failure to do so does not render the indictment fatally defective.[13]

N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902, wherein it is held that an information charging accused with operating an automobile when intoxicated, and that such operation directly contributed to the death of a guest in the machine, is sufficient to charge involuntary manslaughter.

[4] State v. McComb, 33 Wyo. 346, 239 P. 526, 41 A.L.R. 717.

[5] State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 776.

In State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137, the court holds that the short form of indictment provided by statute in Ohio is not in conflict with the constitutional guaranty that the accused shall be advised of "the nature and cause of the accusation against him."

[6] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 775.

[7] People v. Falkovitch, 280 Ill. 321, 117 N. E. 398, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1077.

The accused is presumed to know the provisions of the statute defining the term "motor vehicle," and that a Ford automobile comes within the statutory definition. Ibid.

[8] Story v. United States, 57 App. D. C. 3, 16 F. (2d) 342, 53 A.L.R. 246, writ of certiorari denied in 274 U. S. 739, 71 L. ed. 1318, 47 S. Ct. 576.

[9] State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

[10] See LARCENY [Also 17 R. C. L. p. 55].

[11] Jackson v. State, 173 Miss. 776, 163 So. 381, 100 A.L.R. 789; State v. Robinson, 106 W. Va. 276, 145 S. E. 383, 62 A.L.R. 351.

Annotation: 100 A.L.R. 791.

[12] Jackson v. State, 173 Miss. 776, 163 So. 381, 100 A.L.R. 789.

Annotation: 100 A.L.R. 792.

[13] State v. Robinson, 106 W. Va. 276, 145 S. E. 383, 62 A.L.R. 351.

Annotation: 100 A.L.R. 792.

§ 817. Reckless Driving.—In charging the crime of reckless driving, an indictment or information, like indictments or informations generally,[14] must allege the material facts which constitute the offense with precision and accuracy.[15] The information or indictment cannot be supplemented or pieced out by affidavits in the magistrate's court.[16] An information charging the violation of a statute prohibiting reckless driving, in that defendant operated an automobile at a rapid and dangerous rate of speed which endangered the lives of others, will not support a conviction of so driving as unnecessarily to endanger the safety of users of the public highway and unnecessarily to interfere with such users.[17]

§ 818. Violation of Speed Laws.—Indictments charging violations of speed laws must conform to the general requisites of indictments charging the commission of crime.[18] It may be observed, however, that an indictment charging a violation of a statute prohibiting the operation of motor vehicles upon certain parts of the public roads in excess of a certain speed is not bad because it fails to charge the particular point or place at which the alleged offense was committed, the act charged to have been committed being a violation of the law if committed anywhere within the county.[19]

§ 819. Other Offenses.—In addition to the offenses above discussed,[20] other miscellaneous allegations in particular offenses, such as the following, have been decided by the courts: An indictment for transporting a stolen automobile in interstate commerce sufficiently charges that accused knew that it was stolen by reciting that it had been stolen by a person named, and the circumstances of the transportation, and concluding, "all of which" the accused "then and there well knew;"[1] a complaint charging the violation of a statute describing the lights to be carried on automobiles is sufficient where it states that the automobile was equipped with a diffusing type of lens, since the meaning of the term may be proved at the trial.[2]

D. Evidence

1. In General

§ 820. Generally.—The general rules of evidence applicable in criminal prosecutions are discussed under another title;[3] only such evidence as is factually distinctive to crimes incident to the ownership or operation of automobiles, or such as relate to automobiles, like the larceny thereof, is discussed here.[4]

§ 821. Judicial Notice.—The court will take judicial notice that an automobile is a motor vehicle within the meaning of a statute prohibiting the driving of such vehicle on a public highway by one intoxicated,[5] but it will not take judicial notice of the meaning of the phrase "diffusing lens" in a statute regulating the lights to be carried by automobiles.[6]

---

[14] See Indictments and Informations [Also 14 R. C. L. p. 173].

[15] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266 (information).

[16] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.

[17] Ibid.

[18] See Indictments and Informations [Also 14 R. C. L. p. 150].

[19] State v. Lantz, 90 W. Va. 738, 111 S. E. 766, 26 A.L.R. 894.

[20] See supra, §§ 812 et seq.

[1] Brooks v. United States, 267 U. S. 432, 69 L. ed. 699, 45 S. Ct. 345, 37 A.L.R. 1407.

[2] Re Hinkelman, 183 Cal. 392, 191 P. 682, 11 A.L.R. 1222.

[3] See Evidence [Also 10 R. C. L. p. 847].

[4] See infra, §§ 821 et seq.

[5] Annotation: 68 A.L.R. 1357.

[6] Re Hinkelman, 183 Cal. 392, 191 P. 682, 11 A.L.R. 1222.

§ 822. Burden of Proof.—In prosecutions for the various crimes under discussion here, as in prosecutions for all crimes,[7] the burden of proving the guilt of the accused rests upon the state.[8]

2. ADMISSIBILITY

a. IN GENERAL

§ 823. Generally.—The admissibility of evidence in prosecutions incident to the ownership and operation of automobiles is governed by the rules relating to the admissibility of evidence generally.[9] Here, however, the admissibility of evidence which is more or less distinctive to the crimes under discussion, is briefly considered. As in criminal cases generally,[10] admissions of one involved in an automobile accident which caused the death of other persons, where made freely and voluntarily in response to questions put to him in the district attorney's office at a time when he was not under arrest, are admissible against him in a criminal prosecution based on the accident, even though the accused was not informed by the district attorney or the police of his constitutional rights.[11]

§ 824. To Prove Intoxication.—In general phrase, the fact of intoxication is proved or disproved in the same manner as any other disputed fact, and the rules of evidence are much the same as in other judicial inquiries.[12] Hence, evidence of all facts and circumstances directly tending to establish or negative the intoxication of the accused is admissible.[13] Evidence as to the appearance, conduct, and remarks of the accused may be admitted as bearing upon the question.[14] The possession of whisky and the fact that the accused had been drinking are admissible.[15]

b. IN PROSECUTIONS FOR PARTICULAR CRIMES

§ 825. Homicide.—The principles governing the admissibility of evidence in criminal cases generally apply to prosecutions arising out of a homicide committed by the negligent operation of an automobile, or its operation for an unlawful purpose or in violation of law.[16] In such prosecutions evidence of intoxication,[17] of violation of statute or ordinance relating to speed,[18] of defendant's flight from the scene of the accident with knowledge that a person had been injured or killed,[19] and of his being engaged in an unlawful enterprise at the time of the homicide,[20] is admissible. It is also competent to show that the defendant concealed his identity and residence after the accident, as showing consciousness of guilt.[1] The admissibility of other facts has also been considered by the court in such prosecutions.[2]

---

[7] See EVIDENCE [Also CRIMINAL LAW, 8 R. C. L. p. 169, §§ 163 et seq.].

[8] One accused of manslaughter is not required to prove that the homicide occurred by misadventure, but the burden is on the state to show it was either due to a reckless disregard of the safety of others, or, if it resulted involuntarily while the accused was performing an unlawful act, that the act was malum in se, or, if malum prohibitum, that it was at least the proximate cause of the homicide. State v. Budge, 126 Me. 223, 137 A. 244, 53 A.L.R. 241.

[9] See EVIDENCE [Also CRIMINAL LAW, 8 R. C. L. p. 169, §§ 163 et seq., and EVIDENCE, 10 R. C. L. p. 847].

[10] See EVIDENCE [Also ADMISSIONS AND DECLARATIONS, 1 R. C. L. p. 472, § 7].

[11] State v. Whatley, 210 Wis. 157, 245 N. W. 93, 99 A.L.R. 749.

[12] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1506, s. 49 A.L.R. 1395 and 68 A.L.R. 1362.

For a general discussion of the admissibility of evidence, see EVIDENCE [Also 10 R. C. L. p. 847].

[13] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1506, s. 49 A.L.R. 1395 and 68 A.L.R. 1362.

[14] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1506, s. 49 A.L.R. 1395 and 68 A.L.R. 1362.

[15] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1506, s. 49 A.L.R. 1395 and 68 A.L.R. 1362.

[16] See EVIDENCE [Also CRIMINAL LAW, 8 R. C. L. p. 169, §§ 163 et seq.].

[17] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 785.

[18] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 787.

[19] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 788.

[20] Upon the question of the gross negligence of the driver of an automobile which killed a pedestrian on the highway, so as to render him guilty of manslaughter, evi-

In a prosecution for homicide alleged to have been caused by negligence in operating an automobile, persons who are not experts, but who are familiar with automobiles, and who saw the automobile at the time in question, should be permitted to give their opinions as to the speed at which it was being operated.[3]

§ 826. Failure to Stop Where Injury Has Been Caused.—Upon the trial of an indictment for failure to give name, address, etc., to the injured person, evidence may properly be given showing how much such person was injured in an automobile collision as bearing upon the seriousness of the accident and tending to show that it should not have escaped the notice of the defendant; but subsequent suffering of the injured person, or the length of time he remained in the hospital and the details of the medical or surgical treatment which he received, can have no legitimate bearing upon any of the issues arising on the trial of the indictment and are inadmissible.[4] Under such an indictment, testimony of a witness that he had seen an automobile near the time and place of the accident, running at a high rate of speed, without being able to identify it, or to state any fact warranting an inference that it was the defendant's, is inadmissible.[5]

§ 827. Larceny.—Where larceny is divided into grades according to the value of property stolen,[6] it is necessary to determine the value of the parts of an automobile which have been stolen, and evidence relating thereto is admissible. Where the value of the automobile license plates is involved, the view has been taken that the cost of obtaining the registration of the automobile for a year, with the necessary license plates, determines the grade of larceny committed by stealing such plates, and not the replacement cost of plates for the car from which they were taken, and that evidence of the mere cost of replacement is not admissible.[7]

§ 828. Reckless Driving.—In prosecutions for violating a statute making dence is admissible that he was conveying liquor in violation of statute, causing haste which resulted in negligent management of the car. People v. Harris, 214 Mich. 145, 182 N. W. 673, 16 A.L.R. 910.

---

[1] People v. Benson, 321 Ill. 605, 152 N. E. 514, 46 A.L.R. 1056.

[2] Annotation: 99 A.L.R. 785 et seq.

The state cannot, in a prosecution for manslaughter in negligently driving an automobile, introduce, for the purpose of showing that accused was intoxicated, testimony of a witness before the coroner that he supposed he had been drinking because people said he had been. State v. McComb, 33 Wyo. 346, 239 P. 526, 41 A.L.R. 717.

Upon the trial of a chauffeur for homicide in running a car at a reckless rate of speed on a city street, and striking and killing a pedestrian, evidence is not admissible as to the reputation of accused as a skilful chauffeur and careful driver. State v. Goetz, 83 Conn. 437, 76 A. 1000, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, resulting from the death of one in an automobile collision, evidence of a friend of deceased, who stood at his left side in the rear seat of the machine in which he was riding at the time of the collision, that within a minute or so after the collision deceased said of the driver of the car, "I told the . . . fool to look out," was not material and therefore inadmissible as res gestæ. Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

In State v. Miller (1926) 119 Or. 409, 243 Pac. 72 (affirmed in (1927) 273 U. S. 657, 71 L. ed. 825, 47 S. Ct. 344), the court held that the question whether an automobile driver gave any signal of his approach before his car struck a pedestrian was relevant to the question whether he was driving his automobile in a careful and prudent manner.

[3] Annotation: 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 460.

[4] People v. Curtis, 217 N. Y. 304, 112 N. E. 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 586.

[5] Ibid.

[6] See LARCENY [Also 17 R. C. L. p. 6].

[7] Cowan v. State, 171 Ark. 1018, 287 S. W. 201, 48 A.L.R. 1165.

Annotation: 48 A.L.R. 1167.

it an offense to drive a motor vehicle at a speed or in a manner dangerous to the public, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition, and use of the highway, and to the amount of traffic which actually was at the time, or which might reasonably have been expected to be, on the highway, evidence is admissible to show the amount of traffic usually on the highway, without regard to the amount at the time of the offense.[8]

3. SUFFICIENCY

§ 829. Generally.—In prosecutions for criminal offenses relating to automobiles, or incident to the operation and ownership thereof, as in criminal prosecutions generally,[9] the state must prove the elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt.[10] Thus, in prosecutions for leaving the scene of a known injury without stopping and giving information, it is essential to a conviction that the jury be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt not only that an injury had been caused, but that the defendant knew that such injury had been caused and, notwithstanding such knowledge, left the scene of the accident without complying with the law.[11] Evidence has been held sufficient to show reckless driving where it appeared that the defendant drove his automobile into the back of a car parked close to the curb, or drove from side to side of the highway while running at a moderate speed, or repeatedly passed other cars, turning close in front of them,[12] or attempted to pass a car ahead at the time when it was passing a parked car,[13] or while under the influence of liquor, attempted to pass a vehicle ahead of him and crashed into an automobile approaching from the opposite direction on the proper side of the road, or drove rapidly at night without lights.[14] A person may be found guilty of driving an automobile at a speed greater than was reasonable and prudent, who, on a much traveled highway, drove at a high speed around a curve and into a hollow, the condition of which could not be seen until the edge of it was reached.[15] But mere proof of a collision with another car at a street intersection is not sufficient to sustain a court action for failure to exercise reasonable care in operating an automobile upon a public highway.[16]

One who has pleaded guilty to a charge of driving an automobile when intoxicated cannot object to conviction in a subsequent prosecution for involuntary manslaughter by causing death while so doing, on the ground of lack of evidence that he was driving the car.[17]

The sufficiency of proof to establish a criminal assault or homicide by the negligent or unlawful operation of an automobile depends largely upon the nature of the particular act or acts charged in the indictment.[18] The fact that an automobile was operated in violation of a statute or ordinance regulating speed or prescribing precautions to be observed is not conclusive of guilt, but is a circumstance bearing on the question whether the operation of the automobile was in fact criminally negligent.[19]

---

[8] Elwes v. Hopkins [1906] 2 K. B. 1, 2 B. R. C. 198.
Annotation: 2 B. R. C. 201.

[9] See EVIDENCE [Also CRIMINAL LAW, 8 R. C. L. p. 218, §§ 215 et seq.].

[10] People v. Curtis, 217 N. Y. 304, 112 N. E. 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 586; Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.
Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1397, s. 68 A.L.R. 1365.

[11] People v. Curtis, 217 N. Y. 304, 112 N. E. 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 586.

[12] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1277.

[13] Maxon v. State, 177 Wis. 379, 187 N. W. 753, 21 A.L.R. 1484.

[14] Annotation: 86 A.L.R. 1277.

[15] Gallaher v. State, 193 Ind. 629, 141 N. E. 347, 29 A.L.R. 1059.

[16] People v. Grogan, 260 N. Y. 138, 183 N. E. 273, 86 A.L.R. 1266.

[17] People v. Townsend, 214 Mich. 267, 183 N. W. 177, 16 A.L.R. 902.

[18] For annotation discussing in detail the facts which are sufficient or insufficient to sustain a charge of murder or manslaughter, see 99 A.L.R. 789.

Where the defendant is charged with two separate unlawful acts in the operation of an automobile, proof of either one, proximately causing the injury in question, will sustain a conviction.[20]

That an automobile turned over on its left side upon the highway when running 25 or 30 miles an hour is not sufficient to show that the cause of the accident was not its being struck on its left front by a car passing from the rear.[1]

The "operation" of a motor vehicle may be established by circumstantial evidence.[2]

Venue must, of course, be sufficiently proven, and if there is no evidence of the crime charged having been committed in the county alleged in the criminal charge, a conviction is not justified.[3]

§ 830. To Show Intoxication While Driving.—In order to support a conviction for driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, the accused must be proved to have been under the influence of intoxicating liquor. It is not sufficient to show that he appeared to be under such influence.[4] Nor can intoxication be inferred from the mere fact that the accused did not drive in a straight line.[5] As in other criminal prosecutions the evidence must be sufficient to show the guilt of the accused beyond a reasonable doubt.[6] If the evidence taken as a whole creates only a reasonably strong suspicion that the defendant was intoxicated, it is insufficient.[7]

E. TRIAL

§ 831. Province of Court and Jury.—In prosecutions for crimes incident to the ownership or operation of automobiles, as in criminal prosecutions generally,[8] it is the province of the jury to determine the facts and that of the court to state the law. Accordingly, the questions whether an unlawful act in which one operating an automobile was engaged contributed to, or was the proximate cause of, the death of a pedestrian,[9] and whether the driver of an automobile was in fact intoxicated at the time when he inflicted fatal injuries upon a pedestrian,[10] are for the jury to determine in prosecutions for homicide.

---

[19] People v. Harris, 214 Mich. 145, 182 N. W. 673, 16 A.L.R. 910.

[20] Annotation: 16 A.L.R. 915.

It has been held that the evidence warranted a conviction for manslaughter where it appeared that the defendant, while intoxicated, drove his car in a zigzag course on the highway, and, in running on the wrong side of the road, struck a motorcycle, killing the driver, driving while intoxicated and reckless failure to keep on the right side of the road being expressly forbidden by statute. Annotation: A.L.R. 725, s. 41.

In Copeland v. State, 154 Tenn. 7, 285 S. W. 565, 49 A.L.R. 605, it is held that to render one guilty of manslaughter in killing one by driving an automobile against him, it must be shown that a homicide was not improbable under the facts as they existed, which should reasonably have influenced the conduct of accused.

Proof of the jarring of the occupant of a vehicle by the wrongful propelling of a motor vehicle against it will sustain a conviction for assault and battery, although such occupant was not thrown from the car, nor struck in any part of his body. State v. Sudderth, 184 N. C. 753, 114 S. E. 828, 27 A.L.R. 1180.

[1] People v. Benson, 321 Ill. 605, 152 N. E. 514, 46 A.L.R. 1056.

[2] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1502, s. 49 A.L.R. 1393 and 68 A.L.R. 1358.

[3] Where defendant, a resident of Hamilton county, while driving his automobile in Hardin county, was arrested for operating the same without having number plates for the current year displayed, and it did not appear that he had ever operated the machine in Hardin county prior to that date, the fact that he may have operated it in Hamilton county while he was in default will not justify his conviction in Hardin county, under an information charging the commission of the offense in that county. State v. Gish, 168 Iowa, 70, 150 N. W. 37, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 135.

[4] Doyle v. Harvey [1923] Vict. L. Rep 271, 12 B. R. C. 137.

Annotation: 12 B. R. C. 144.

[5] Annotation: 42 A.L.R. 1507, s. 49 A.L.R. 1397 and 68 A.L.R. 1365.

[6] Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1397, s. 68 A.L.R. 1365.

[7] Annotation: 49 A.L.R. 1397, s. 68 A.L.R. 1365.

[8] See TRIAL [Also JURY, 16 R. C. L. p. 183, §§ 4 et seq.].

Uncertainty as to whether the accused or his companion was driving the car at the time the crime was charged to have been committed raises a question for the jury to determine.[11]

§ 832. Instructions—Generally.—In prosecutions for the crimes which are incident to or arise from the ownership or operation of automobiles, the correctness of various instructions has been passed upon by the courts. These relate to aggravated assaults,[12] reckless driving,[13] and involuntary manslaughter.[14]

§ 833. —As to Homicide.—Various instructions in prosecutions for homicide resulting from the negligent or unlawful operation or use of automobiles have been approved,[15] disapproved,[16] or regarded as not prejudicial[17] by the courts.

---

[9] State v. Budge, 126 Me. 223, 137 A. 244, 53 A.L.R. 241.

[10] Ibid.

[11] Whether one charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated, or his companion, was the driver of the car on the occasion in question, is for the jury to determine where, though there is evidence tending to show that the companion was driving the car, a witness testified that he saw the car drive up and stop and the defendant get out of the driver's seat, and there is testimony that the officer who arrested the defendant said to him that he should have known better than to drive while intoxicated, to which he made reply. State v. Coomer, 105 Vt. 175, 163 A. 585, 94 A.L.R. 1038.

[12] On a trial for aggravated assault in injuring one by reckless operation of an automobile on a public highway, the court may call to the jury's attention the regulatory provisions of the statute governing the operation of automobiles on public highways. Brimhall v. State, 31 Ariz. 522, 255 P. 165, 53 A.L.R. 231.

[13] In a prosecution for operating an automobile recklessly, an instruction that the driver of an automobile must exercise a care "proportionate to that instrumentality or engine which he has in charge" was not erroneous, though, technically speaking, every traveler on a highway must exercise the care of an ordinarily prudent and cautious person under all circumstances, and the degree of care required varies with the time, place, surroundings, and means of transportation. Com. v. Horsfall, 213 Mass. 232, 100 N. E. 362, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 682.

[14] See infra, § 833.

[15] On the trial of a person charged with homicide, it is permissible for the court to define an unlawful rate of speed in the language of the statute regulating the use of motor vehicles upon the public streets and highways of the state. Schultz v. State, 89 Neb. 34, 130 N. W. 972, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 403, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 495.

It is proper for the court to read to the jury the terms of the statute. Annotation: 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 459.

Where the accused is charged with manslaughter by the negligent operation of an automobile, the court should charge that the standard of conduct required of the defendant in the operation of his car is that of an ordinarily careful and prudent person, and that if he did not operate the car "at a speed greater than is reasonable or proper," as would appear to such ordinarily careful and prudent person in the then situation, he was not guilty of manslaughter. State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

Where all the evidence clearly and conclusively shows that the unlawful act relied upon by the state directly caused the killing, and there is no evidence to the contrary, the failure of the court to charge on assault, or assault and battery, is not error. State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

[16] An instruction that if one tried for manslaughter by the improper operation of an automobile was acting unlawfully at the time of the accident by exceeding the legal limit of speed, or was intoxicated, the principles governing trials for homicide by misadventure do not apply, and that, if he was performing a lawful act in a criminally negligent manner, he would be guilty, is not only erroneous, but might tend to mislead the jury as to the essential elements of the offense necessary to be proved by the state. State v. Budge, 126 Me. 223, 137 A. 244, 53 A.L.R. 241.

An erroneous instruction in a prosecution for manslaughter by the improper operation of an automobile, that only misadventure renders a homicide excusable, and that there can be no misadventure when an unlawful act is present, is not rendered harmless by correct instructions as to the definition of criminal negligence and the burden of proof, where it was admitted that the accused was exceeding the legal limit of speed at the time of the accident, so that the instruction complained of was virtually a direction to bring in a verdict of guilty. State v. Budge, 126 Me. 223, 137 A. 244, 53 A.L.R. 241.

[17] Although the People's third instruction in a prosecution for involuntary manslaughter committed by reckless driving of an automobile was erroneous in stating

F. WITNESSES

§ 834. Generally.—The rules relating to witnesses are fully discussed under another title.[18] Here, however, it may be observed that in prosecutions for manslaughter in the operation of motor vehicles, if the defendant denies all knowledge of having struck deceased, and testifies that he knew nothing about it at the time, his cross-examination as to whether, when notified, he went up to find out what he was accused of, is proper.[19] In such prosecutions, the state cannot impeach its own witnesses.[20] that a speed greater than the rates mentioned in the statute would be proof of negligence, when by statute they were only made prima facie evidence of negligence, defendant is not prejudiced where other instructions charged that proof of negligence is not sufficient to warrant conviction, and that defendant's violation of law would not, of itself, justify a conviction. People v. Falkovitch, 280 Ill. 321, 117 N. E. 398, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1077.

---

In a prosecution for involuntary manslaughter committed by reckless driving of an automobile, where there is no claim and no evidence of any intent to kill, the view has been taken that an instruction that intent may be proved by direct testimony, etc., although having no place in the case, cannot mislead the jury. People v. Falkovitch, 280 Ill. 321, 117 N. E. 398, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 1077.

[18] See WITNESSES [Also 28 R. C. L. p. 411].

[19] State v. Schaeffer, 96 Ohio St. 215, 117 N. E. 220, L.R.A.1918B, 945, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1137.

[20] The state, in a prosecution for manslaughter by alleged negligent driving of an automobile, cannot impeach its own witness who has denied knowledge as to whether or not accused had been drinking, by asking whether or not he did not testify before the coroner that he supposed that accused had been drinking, since the original answer of witness was not prejudicial to the state. State v. McComb, 33 Wyo. 346, 239 P. 526, 41 A.L.R. 717.

INDEX

§§ 1–654 are in vol. 4. §§ 655–1040 are in vol. 5.

ATTACHMENT

- abandonment,
  - attachment, effect, § 624.
  - garnishment,
    - generally, § 741.
    - garnishee's liability to defendant as affected by, § 808.
  - levy, by attaching officer, §§ 534, 542.
  - suit for attachment or garnishment as giving rise to action on attachment bond, § 993.
- abatement,
  - action on garnished claim by reason of garnishment, §§ 696 et seq.
  - main action, § 939.
  - plea in,
    - as mode of obtaining dissolution of attachment, § 644.
    - as mode of traversing affidavit for attachment, § 502.
    - falsity of grounds stated for attachment, § 638.
    - recovery by, of damages for wrongful attachment, § 1020.
- absconding debtor,
  - ground for attachment or garnishment, §§ 464 et seq.
  - nonresident, status as, § 439.
- absconding sheriff, garnishee's liability for loss of property through, § 679.
- abstract books, attachability, § 170.
- abuse of process,
  - dissolution of garnishment for, § 747.
  - wrongful attachment, infra.
- account books, attachability, § 170.
- accounting in aid of, or for relief, from garnishment proceedings, § 718.
- account stated, availability of attachment or garnishment in action on, § 96.
- accounts,
  - for collection, garnishability, § 290.
  - money due on, attachability, § 187.
  - open account, infra.
- accrual of right of action for wrongful attachment, § 988.
- action at law, garnishment as, § 5.
- action or suit,
  - garnishment as, § 708.
  - main action, infra.
  - nature of, as affecting availability of attachment or garnishment, §§ 88 et seq.
- administrators, see "executors and administrators," infra.
- admissions as evidence in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1036.
- advances, mortgage to secure, priority of over attachment, § 857.
- adverse claim,
  - generally, §§ 964 et seq.
  - availability as defense to garnishee, § 779.
  - disclosure of, garnishee's duty as to, § 689.
- adverse claimant,
  - equity, protection of, in, § 714.
  - garnishment as defense to proceedings by, § 702.
  - notification of, garnishee's duty as to, § 688.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- adverse claimant—continued.
  - satisfaction of judgment in garnishment proceeding as defense to claim by, § 812.
  - surrender of attached property to as affecting liability of surety on forthcoming bond, § 913.
  - wrongful attachment or garnishment, action for, may be based upon seizure of property of, § 992.
- advice of counsel as defense to action,
  - for wrongful or malicious attachment, § 998.
  - on attachment bond, § 1003.
- affidavit for attachment or garnishment,
  - attachment,
    - generally, §§ 482 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - complaint in main action as performing office of, § 950.
  - defects and irregularities in,
    - amendability, § 629.
    - as ground for dissolving attachment, § 633.
    - surety's liability on dissolution or release bond as affected by, § 921.
    - waiver of,
      - generally, § 736.
      - by appearance and answer, § 617.
  - falsity of,
    - as affecting liability of surety on dissolution or release bond, § 921.
    - as ground for dissolving attachment, § 638.
  - filing of, as prerequisite to issuance of writ, § 513.
  - garnishment proceedings,
    - generally, §§ 722 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - variance from complaint, § 951.
- affidavit of just claim to intervene, § 974.
- affirmative relief, appearance for purpose of asking, as general appearance, § 52.
- after-acquired property,
  - attachability, § 159.
  - garnishment as embracing, §§ 161 et seq.
- agent, see "principal and agent," infra.
- alias writs of attachment, § 510.
- alien enemies, attachment or garnishment of property of, § 132.
- aliens, garnishment of debt owing to, § 137.
- alimony,
  - attachment or garnishment of, § 160.
  - enforceability by attachment or garnishment, § 102.
- alteration,
  - affidavit for attachment, effect, § 485.
  - bond for attachment, discharge of surety by, § 995.
  - levy by attaching officer, § 534.
- alternative, statement of grounds for attachment in,
  - amendability, § 487.
  - dissolution of attachment because of, § 637.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- alternative—continued.
  - proof of one sufficient, § 423.
  - recital in affidavit, § 500.
- amendment,
  - affidavit for attachment, §§ 487 et seq.
  - affidavit for garnishment, § 723.
  - attachment proceeding, § 475.
  - levy by attaching officer, § 534.
  - pleadings, infra.
  - return of garnishment process, § 731.
  - return of writ of attachment, §§ 603 et seq.
  - writ of attachment, §§ 517 et seq.
- amount of claim, statement of,
  - in affidavit for attachment, § 497.
  - in writ of attachment, §§ 520, 524.
- ancillary character, § 6.
- answer,
  - affidavit for attachment, answer to, § 502.
  - garnishee's,
    - generally, §§ 754 et seq.
    - as evidence against himself, § 769.
    - rendition of judgment on, § 798.
  - waiver by, of defects and irregularities in attachment, § 617.
- apparel of debtor, attachability, § 173.
- appeal,
  - attorneys' fees in appellate court as element of recovery for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1014.
  - denial of application to amend return of writ, appeal from, § 604.
  - deposit in lieu of undertaking on, garnishability, § 397.
  - garnishee's duty to take, § 693.
  - garnishor's, effect of to keep garnishment in force, § 740.
  - opportunity for, garnishing creditor's right to, § 740.
  - stay pending, intervener's right to, § 982.
- appearance,
  - general appearance, infra.
  - special appearance, infra.
- appraisement of attached property,
  - generally, §§ 588, 589.
  - failure to make as exonerating sureties on forthcoming bond, § 922.
- approval of dissolution or release bond as essential to validity, § 907.
- arrest, property taken from person arrested as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 400 et seq., 991.
- artifice, see "trick or artifice," infra.
- assignee, garnishment as remedy available to, § 123.
- assignment,
  - debt or property attached or garnished,
    - bank deposits, as affecting attachability or garnishability, §§ 257, 258.
    - defense to garnishee, § 780.
    - disclosure of, duty of garnishee as to, §§ 690, 691.
    - distributee, assignment to or by as defeating garnishment, §§ 420, 421.
    - fees of public officer as affecting garnishability, §§ 328, 329.
    - garnishee's liability to assignee, §§ 690, 691.
    - incomplete assignment, infra.
    - interest, garnishee's liability for to assignee, § 686.
    - operation of judgment against garnishee as, § 800.
    - partial,
      - as operative against garnishing creditor, § 822.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- assignment—continued.
  - debt—continued.
    - partial—continued.
      - equitable relief in case of,
        - generally, § 780.
        - against garnishment of entire amount, § 714.
      - priority of attachment or garnishment as to, § 843.
    - priority of attachment or garnishment, as to subsequent assignment, § 859.
      - over rights of assignee, §§ 843 et seq.
    - right to assign subject to attachment or garnishment, § 824.
    - stock, as affecting subsequent attachment, § 353.
    - wages, as affecting garnishability, § 322.
  - for benefit of creditors,
    - assignee's right to seek dissolution of attachment, §§ 647, 648.
    - assignor's interest as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 405.
    - attachment as affected by, § 628.
    - beneficiary's interest as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 406.
    - fraudulent, as ground for attachment, § 452.
    - priority over attachment or garnishment, §§ 880 et seq.
    - property in hands of assignee not subject to attachment, § 386.
  - interests arising from, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 221 et seq.
  - nonresident assignment to,
    - ground for attachment, § 468.
    - jurisdiction to garnish as affected by, § 75.
  - operation of attachment or garnishment as, §§ 820 et seq.
- asylum, garnishability, § 148.
- attestation,
  - summons or notice to garnishee, § 727.
  - writs of attachment, § 522.
- attorney,
  - advice of counsel, supra.
  - affidavit for attachment,
    - made by, §§ 491, 501.
    - may not be taken by, § 493.
  - lien of, priority as against attachment or garnishment, § 829.
  - property in hands of, as subject to attachment or garnishment, § 135.
  - wrongful attachment or garnishment, liability for, § 992.
- attorneys' fees,
  - allowance of to garnishee, § 814.
  - in action for wrongful attachment, recoverability of, § 1040.
  - intervener's right to recover, § 983.
  - provided for in note not yet due, attachment for, § 116.
  - recovery of in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment,
    - generally, §§ 1000, 1014 et seq.
    - amount recoverable, § 1038.
    - pleading, § 1030.
- bail bonds, see "bonds," infra.
- bailments,
  - carriers, infra.
  - interests of parties to, as subject of attachment, §§ 246 et seq.
  - levy of attachment on bailed property, § 566.
  - lien of bailee, priority as against attachment, § 833.
  - obligation created by garnishment of bailee, § 668.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- bailments—continued.
  - pledge, infra.
  - priority of attachment or garnishment over rights of bailee, §§ 843 et seq.
  - warehousemen, infra.
- bank bills, attachability, § 171.
- bank deposits,
  - attachability or garnishability,
    - generally, §§ 171, 254 et seq.
    - check, giving of, as affecting, § 867.
    - trust funds, § 384.
  - dividends on, garnishment as binding, § 162.
  - jurisdiction to garnish cannot be conferred by making, § 87.
  - set-off by garnishee bank of depositor's unmatured notes, § 787.
- bankruptcy,
  - attachability of property in hands of trustee in, §§ 386, 409.
  - composition, moneys payable under as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 609.
  - conveyance of property in violation of bankruptcy law, as ground for attachment, § 457.
  - dividends in, garnishability, § 409.
  - proceeding against defendant,
    - attachment as affected by, § 628.
    - bond for attachment, effect on, § 995.
    - bond for dissolution or release, liability of surety as affected by, § 918.
    - claim in, filing or disallowance as establishing liability of surety on attachment bond, § 994.
    - garnishment as affected by, § 744.
    - garnishment as creating lien within Bankruptcy Act, § 817.
    - intervention by trustee in attachment proceedings, § 975.
    - judgment against bankrupt defendant in attachment or garnishment, § 962.
    - priority of attachment or garnishment as affected by, § 884.
  - receiptor's liability as affected by, § 936.
- banks,
  - certificate of deposit, infra.
  - checks, infra.
  - collections by, garnishment of proceeds of, § 661.
  - co-operative bank, infra.
  - ignorance of garnishment of branch as affecting liability as garnishee, § 675.
  - national banks, availability of remedy as against, § 131.
- barn, forcible entry of, to levy attachment, § 558.
- bar, plea in, in action on garnished claim, garnishment as supporting, §§ 696 et seq.
- base fee, attachability, § 163.
- bet, money lost on, not recoverable by garnishment, § 190.
- bills and notes,
  - money obligations, infra.
  - negotiable paper, infra.
- bills of lading act, provisions of as affecting attachment or garnishment, § 32.
- blanks in dissolution or release bond after words filled in, as affecting validity, § 905.
- board of trade, membership in, as subject of attachment. § 218.
- bona fide purchaser,
  - attaching or garnishing creditor as,
    - generally, § 820.
    - bidding in attached property. § 853,
  - character of plaintiff as, § 800.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- bona fide purchaser—continued.
  - of property fraudulently conveyed, rights of as against attaching creditor, § 860.
- bonds,
  - attaching or garnishing creditor,
    - generally, §§ 896–900.
    - amendment of, § 900.
    - bankruptcy proceedings rendering attachment or garnishment ineffectual as affecting liability of surety, § 884.
    - damages recoverable on, for wrongful attachment, §§ 1005, 1007.
    - defects and irregularities in,
      - as ground for dissolving attachment, § 633.
      - waiver of by appearance and answer, § 617.
    - defenses in action on, for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1003.
    - dissolution of attachment for failure to give, § 622.
    - exemplary damages in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1007.
    - garnishee's duty to require execution of, §§ 684, 692.
    - garnishment, bond as essential to validity of, § 709.
    - liability of, §§ 993 et seq.
    - parties to action on, for wrongful attachment, §§ 1028, 1029.
    - pleadings in action on, for wrongful attachment, § 1031.
  - contractor's bond, infra.
  - corporate, as subject of attachment, § 354.
  - dissolution or release, bond to obtain,
    - generally, §§ 901 et seq.
      - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
    - appearance, effect as, § 948.
    - defects and irregularities in attachment as waived by, §§ 619–621.
    - jurisdiction conferred by giving of, § 53.
    - minimization of damages, § 1008.
    - nature of proceeding as affected by giving of, § 11.
    - wrongful attachment,
      - right of action for, as affected by giving bond, § 989.
      - waiver of right of action for, by giving redelivery bond, § 985.
  - intervener, § 974.
  - levy on, § 563.
- books of account, attachability, § 170.
- branch bank, ignorance of garnishment of, as affecting liability of parent bank or other branches, § 675.
- breach of promise, claims arising from as enforceable by attachment or garnishment, § 103.
- building, attachment of goods in,
  - levy on goods in, §§ 542, 557, 558.
  - manual seizure, necessity of, § 537.
- building materials, attachability of, by creditor of contractor, § 224.
- bulk sales act,
  - availability of attachment or garnishment as remedy,
    - generally, §§ 34, 100.
    - pleading in garnishment proceedings based on, § 726.
- burden of proof,
  - application for dissolution of attachment, § 652.
  - excessiveness of levy, § 585.
  - failure to attach, burden of proof in action for, § 585.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- burden of proof—continued.
  - intervener, § 981.
  - main action, § 953.
  - wrongful attachment, action for, § 1033.
- business, injury to, damages for, as element of recovery for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1011.
- canal company, property of, as subject to attachment, § 344.
- caption,
  - affidavit for attachment, § 486.
  - summons or notice to garnishee, § 727.
- carrier,
  - attachability of goods in possession of, §§ 248 et seq.
  - garnishment of,
    - excuses delivery of goods to consignee, § 804.
    - obligation created by, § 668.
  - levy on goods in possession of, sufficiency, § 559.
  - priority of right as against attachment, § 831.
  - right to possession of attached goods for purpose of earning freight as available defense, § 774.
- case, action on, for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1021.
- cash transactions, payments on, attachability or garnishability, § 195.
- cattle, levy on, sufficiency, § 559.
- certificate of deposit,
  - issuance of, as affecting garnishability of deposit, § 258.
  - subject of attachment or garnishment, § 286.
- certified check,
  - issuance as precluding garnishment of deposit by creditor of depositor, § 258.
  - liability of bank on, as subject to garnishment, § 288.
- chamber of commerce, membership in, as subject of attachment, § 218.
- charitable corporation, property of, as subject to attachment, § 349.
- chattel mortgage,
  - attachability of interest of mortgagor, §§ 236 et seq.
  - fraudulent, as ground for attachment, § 452.
  - priority of attachment or garnishment over rights of mortgagee, generally, § 845.
  - waiver of lien by attaching mortgage property, § 17.
- check,
  - bank deposits, attachment or garnishment of as affected by giving of check, §§ 258, 867.
  - collection of, garnishability of proceeds, § 292.
  - fraudulent disposition of as ground for attachment, § 449.
  - garnishment of debt as affected by giving of check in payment, §§ 194, 776.
  - stopping payment or delivery of, duty of garnishee as to, § 663.
  - subject of attachment or garnishment, § 288.
- choses in action,
  - assignment of as affecting priority of attachment or garnishment, §§ 864 et seq.
  - attachability, §§ 187 et seq.
  - where attachable or garnishable, § 36.
- claim and delivery, action of, for wrongful attachment of third person's property, § 1022.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- claim and intervention, see "intervention," infra.
- claims enforceable, §§ 88 et seq.
  - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
- clerical errors,
  - defects and irregularities, infra.
  - writ of attachment, effect of, § 519.
- clerk of court,
  - issuance of writ by, § 506.
  - property in possession of, not subject to attachment, § 386.
- clothing of debtor, attachability, § 173.
- coin, attachability,
  - generally, § 171.
  - in possession of debtor, § 173.
- collateral attack,
  - irregularities in procedure not ground for, § 85.
  - judgment in garnishment proceedings, § 802.
  - judgment in main action, §§ 957, 958.
  - return of writ of attachment, §§ 594, 596, 598.
- collection, proceeds of attachability or garnishability, §§ 290 et seq.
- collusion in attachment or garnishment proceedings as exonerating surety on dissolution or release bond, § 921.
- commencement of garnishment proceedings, § 709.
- commerce clause, interstate commerce, infra.
- commissions, garnishability, § 326.
- composition, moneys payable under as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 409.
- compromise of unliquidated claim, amount payable under as subject of garnishment, § 208.
- compulsory disclosure by garnishee, § 759.
- concealment of debtor as ground for attachment or garnishment, §§ 464 et seq.
- conditional claims, availability of remedy in case of, § 111.
- conditional debt as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 200 et seq.
- conditional fee, attachability, § 163.
- conditional judgment against garnishee, §§ 792, 796 et seq.
- conditional sales,
  - interests of parties to, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 252 et seq.
  - priority of attachment over rights of conditional seller, § 843.
- conditional sales act, provisions of, as affecting attachment, § 30.
- confession of judgment, fraudulent, as ground for attachment, § 452.
- conflict of laws, §§ 35 et seq.
- confusion of goods as affecting levy of attachment, § 560.
- consent to levy, effect of, § 556.
- consideration,
  - receiptor's promise to redeliver, § 931.
  - release bond, § 905.
- consignment of goods for sale,
  - interests of consignor not attachable or garnishable in action against consignee, § 223.
  - subject of, as liable to attachment or garnishment, § 223.
- consistency with other remedies, §§ 14 et seq.
- constable, levy of attachment by, § 528.
- constitutionality,
  - statutes, validity of, infra.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
construction, bonds in attachment proceedings, § 898.
construction contract, payments to be made under, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 201, 202.
constructive fraud as ground for attachment, §§ 34, 458.
constructive seizure under writ of attachment, § 537.
constructive service,
  as supporting judgment in personam, § 47.
  jurisdiction over main action may be based on, § 55.
  notification of defendant by garnishee as excused in case of, § 682.
containers,
  attachability of contents, § 172.
  levy on contents of, § 561.
contingent estates or interests, attachability, §§ 184 et seq.
contingent liability,
  availability of remedy, § 114.
  subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 197 et seq.
continuance,
  action on garnished claim, garnishment as ground for, §§ 696 et seq.
  main action, § 939.
contractor's bond, availability of attachment against sureties on, § 111.
contracts,
  actions on, what are, within attachment and garnishment statutes, §§ 88 et seq.
  availability of remedy in actions and claims on, §§ 96 et seq.
  implied contracts, infra.
  money due on, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 190 et seq.
  rescission, infra.
contribution,
  among attaching or garnishing creditors as to liability for wrongful attachment, § 1023.
  right of sureties on dissolution or release bond to, § 904.
conversion,
  availability of remedy in case of claims arising from, § 110.
  claim based on, garnishability, § 207.
  ground for attachment, § 463.
  recovery in action for, of damages for wrongful attachment or garnishment, §§ 1021, 1022.
conveyances,
  interests arising from, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 221 et seq.
  priority of attachment or garnishment over, §§ 843 et seq.
convict arrested in flight, attachability of property taken from, § 403.
co-operative bank, shareholder's right to withdraw money from, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 254.
copyright,
  penalty for infringement, availability of attachment as remedy, § 91.
  subject of attachment, § 216.
coroner, levy of attachment by, §§ 528, 529.
corporation,
  affidavit for attachment on behalf of, who may make, § 491.
  availability of remedy as against, § 130.
  bonds of, as subject of attachment, § 354.
  debt owing to, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 340.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
corporation—continued.
  debts owed by, garnishment of,
    generally, § 350.
    danger of double liability as affecting, § 68.
    dissolution of corporation as affecting garnishment, § 743.
    government-owned and operated corporations, garnishability of, §§ 147–149.
    jurisdiction to garnish, §§ 78, 79.
  directors, infra.
  dissolution of,
    as affecting attachment, § 627.
    as affecting garnishment, § 743.
  domesticated corporations, infra.
  foreign corporations, infra.
  garnishability, §§ 150 et seq.
  municipal corporations, infra.
  officers, statutory liability of, attachment or garnishment as available remedy, § 92.
  property of as subject of attachment or garnishment,
    generally, §§ 338 et seq.
    not attachable in action against stockholder, § 120.
  public corporations, infra.
  quasi public corporation, infra.
  residence of, for purpose of attachment or garnishment, § 445.
  service of garnishment on officer of, § 729.
  stockholders, infra.
  stock in corporation, infra.
  treasurer, garnishment of by creditors of corporation, § 154.
  wrongful attachment, liability for, § 1026.
costs,
  garnishee's liability for or right to, § 814.
  wrongful attachment actions, § 1040.
cotenant, interest of,
  attachability, §§ 164, 178.
  levy on, §§ 560, 568.
counsel fees, see "attorneys' fees," supra.
counterclaim, see "set-off or counterclaim," infra.
county,
  employee of, garnishability of salary, § 327.
  garnishability, § 143.
  levy of attachment outside of, § 530.
  officer of, garnishability of salary, § 327.
  property of, as subject of attachment, §§ 357, 359.
  revenues of, as subject of garnishment, § 358.
  trick or artifice in getting property into, as affecting validity of attachment, § 531.
coupons as subject of attachment, § 354.
court,
  jurisdiction, post.
  money in, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 396 et seq.
credit, injury to, by wrongful attachment or garnishment, damages for, § 1011.
  question for jury,
    generally, § 1038.
    pleading, § 1030.
crop,
  attachability, §§ 174–176.
  leased property, landlord's or tenant's interest as subject of attachment, § 245.
  levy on, sufficiency, § 559.
  wheat, pasturage of by tenant as removal of property giving right of attachment, § 472.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- cross complaint,
  - mode of traversing affidavit for attachment, § 502.
  - seeking damages for wrongful attachment, § 1020.
- currency, attachability, § 171.
- curtesy, interest of tenant by, attachability, § 181.
- custodian, status of garnishee as, § 660.
- custody of attached goods, §§ 541 et seq.
- custody of law,
  - levy as bringing property within, §§ 527, 541 et seq.
  - property in, as subject to attachment or garnishment, §§ 386 et seq.
- damages,
  - bonds for dissolution or release of attachment or garnishment, measure of liability on, § 912.
  - claims for, availability of attachment or garnishment to enforce, § 90.
  - exemplary damages, infra.
  - garnishee, measure of damages as against, §§ 669 et seq.
  - insufficient levy, § 586.
  - liquidated damages, infra.
  - minimization, for wrongful attachment, § 1008.
  - mitigation, infra.
  - officer's liability for loss of attached goods, § 544.
  - pleading in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1030.
  - unliquidated damages, infra.
  - wrongful attachment or garnishment, §§ 1005 et seq.
- damage to garnished property,
  - garnishee's liability for, § 674.
- death,
  - availability of remedy in action for, § 109.
  - defendant,
    - as affecting attachment, §§ 625, 626.
    - as affecting garnishment, § 742.
    - as affecting liability of surety on bond for dissolution or release, § 917.
    - lien of attachment or garnishment as affected by, §§ 742, 892.
  - plaintiff before judgment against garnishee as affecting its validity, § 789.
- debt,
  - jurisdiction in garnishment as affected by place where debt arose, § 74.
  - levy of attachment on, sufficiency, § 562.
  - nonexistence of, as defense available to garnishee, § 774.
  - place where payable as affecting jurisdiction in garnishment, § 73.
  - situs, infra.
  - subject of attachment or garnishment, generally, §§ 190 et seq.
  - trust for payment of debts, beneficial interest in as subject of attachment, § 377.
  - where attachable or garnishable, §§ 36, 73, 74.
- decedent's estates or interest therein,
  - priority created by attachment or garnishment, §§ 892 et seq.
  - subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 410 et seq.
- declaration by officer of intention to levy as effective levy, § 555.
- declarations as evidence in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1036.
- deed,
  - priority of attachment or garnishment over, §§ 843 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- deed—continued.
  - reformation, right to as against attaching creditor, § 830.
- defamation, see "libel or slander," infra.
- default judgment,
  - against garnishee, §§ 796 et seq.
  - payment of, as affecting garnishee, § 809.
- defects and irregularities,
  - affidavit for attachment, §§ 482, 487 et seq.
  - attachment proceedings generally, § 475.
  - bond,
    - of plaintiff in attachment or garnishment proceeding, § 899.
    - to dissolve attachment or garnishment or to release attached or garnished property, § 905.
  - collateral attack on judgment in main action because of, § 957.
  - defense to garnishee, availability as, § 777.
  - dissolution of attachment because of, § 633.
  - dissolution of garnishment on ground of, § 749.
  - garnishee's liability as affected by,
    - generally, § 664.
    - garnishee satisfying judgment of garnishment to principal defendant, § 806.
  - jurat to affidavit for attachment, effect, § 494.
  - jurisdiction as affected by, §§ 84 et seq., 723.
  - levy of attachment, waiver of, §§ 616 et seq.
  - lien of attachment or garnishment as affected by, § 828.
  - petition or affidavit for garnishment,
    - amendability, § 723.
    - jurisdiction as affected by, § 723.
  - priority as affected by, §§ 837, 840.
  - publication, service of process by, in main action, § 946.
  - receiptor's liability as affected by, § 937.
  - return of writ of attachment,
    - amendability, §§ 603 et seq.
    - effect, § 594.
  - surety's liability on dissolution or release bond as affected by, § 921.
  - waiver of, §§ 84, 734 et seq., 906.
  - writ and process,
    - attachment effect, §§ 517 et seq.
    - main action, effect, § 941.
  - wrongful attachment, liability for as affected by, § 1000.
- defendant,
  - action by, against garnishee, garnishment as defense, §§ 696 et seq.
  - appearance by,
    - generally, §§ 947 et seq.
    - as waiver of defects and irregularities in garnishment proceedings, § 737.
  - application by, for dissolution of attachment, § 647.
  - bankruptcy proceeding against as affecting attachment, § 628.
  - consent to levy, effect of, § 556.
  - death of, see "death," supra.
  - equities of, protection by court of equity, § 479.
  - exceptions by, to garnishee's disclosure, §§ 762, 764.
  - exemption of, see "exemption," infra.
  - garnishability, § 140.
  - garnishee's duty to, §§ 680 et seq.
  - insolvency proceeding against as affecting attachment, § 628.
  - judgment in favor of, as terminating garnishment, § 739.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
defendant—continued.
  jurisdiction over, necessity of, §§ 47 et seq.
  misnomer, infra.
  motion by, to vacate, dissolve or discharge garnishment, § 746.
  notice to, of attachment of realty, actual, § 572.
    constructive, § 573.
  notice to, of garnishment proceeding, § 732.
  recognition of levy, effect of, § 556.
  service of process on, as an agent of garnishee, § 727.
  title of, see "title," infra.
  waiver by, of defects or irregularities, §§ 734 et seq.
  who may be, §§ 127 et seq.
defense, garnishee's duty to make, §§ 682, 683.
defenses,
  bonds for dissolution and release, defenses available, §§ 920 et seq., 928.
  garnishee, defenses available to, §§ 770 et seq.
  intervener, defenses available to, § 980.
  receiptor, defenses available to, §§ 934 et seq.
  wrongful attachment, defenses to action for, §§ 997 et seq.
deficiency on foreclosure, right to recover, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 235.
definitions, see "words and phrases," infra.
delay, dissolution of attachment because of, § 624.
delivery bonds, see "bonds," supra.
demand, necessity of,
  to accrue liability on forthcoming bond, § 911.
  to charge debtor as garnishee, § 134.
demand note, garnishability of debt evidenced by, § 285.
depreciation,
  garnishee's liability for, § 674.
  recovery for, in action for wrongful attachment, § 1010.
deputy, levy of attachment by, § 528.
description of attached property,
  in application to dissolve attachment, § 646.
  in return, § 597.
destroyed writ, proof of, § 508.
destruction of property, recovery for, in action for wrongful attachment, § 1006.
devisee, attachment or garnishment by creditors of, §§ 412 et seq.
diplomats, status of, as resident or nonresident, § 444.
directors' statutory liability, availability of attachment or garnishment as remedy, § 92.
discharge of garnishment, §§ 738 et seq.
disclosure by garnishee,
  generally, §§ 752 et seq.
  judgment as enterable on, § 798.
discontinuance, of attachment or garnishment suit as giving right of action on bond for attachment or garnishment, § 993.
  of main action, § 939.
discovery of assets,
  attachment not available for purposes of, § 21.
  in hands of third person in aid of attachment, § 478.
  procedure, §§ 752 et seq.
dismissal,
  attachment or garnishment as ground for action on attachment bond, § 993.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
dismissal—continued.
  main action as dissolving judgment, § 623.
dissolution, vacation, or release,
  generally,
    attachment, §§ 622 et seq.
    garnishment, §§ 738 et seq.
  bond to obtain, §§ 901 et seq.
  judgment in main action as affected by, § 954.
  judgment in personam as effecting, § 956.
  jurisdiction of main action as affected by, § 61.
  main action as affected by, §§ 61, 939.
  motion for, as mode of traversing affidavit for attachment, § 502.
  priority as terminated by, § 838.
distribution, equitable enforcement of, in aid of or relief from garnishment, § 718.
distributive share,
  attachment of as affected by right of retainer, § 893.
  garnishability, §§ 410, 412 et seq.
ditch company, stock of, as attachable or garnishable, § 351.
dividends,
  bankrupt's estate, garnishability, § 409.
  levy on stock as binding, § 162.
docketing of judgment as not necessary to validity or continuation of attachment lien, § 828.
domesticated corporation,
  residence of, for purpose of attachment or garnishment, § 445.
  stock of, as attachable or garnishable, § 352.
domicil,
  creditor's, as affecting priority as between foreign receivership and attachment or garnishment, § 890.
  distinguished from residence, § 427.
double liability, danger of as a defense to other proceeding on garnished claim, §§ 696 et seq.
  evidence as to, admissibility in garnishment proceeding, § 769.
  protection of garnishee against, §§ 271, 781 et seq.
dower,
  attachability, § 180.
  priority of attachment over claim of, § 892.
drafts, see "money obligations;" "negotiable instruments," infra.
dry trusts, attachability of interest of beneficiary, § 370.
due process,
  bond, requiring giving of by nonresident defendant as condition of right to appear and defend, § 903.
  garnishment statute, § 656.
  nonresidents,
    garnishment of debts due, § 66.
    judgment against, based upon attachment or garnishment, § 959.
dwelling, forcible entry of, to levy attachment, § 558.
easements, attachability, § 156.
education, trust for, beneficial interest in as subject of attachment, § 381.
election of remedies,
  generally, § 15.
  adverse claimant, § 971.
  equitable and legal attachment, § 474.
  garnishability of claim as affected by right to waive tort and sue in assumpsit, §§ 206, 207.
  interpleader and delivery of garnished property in court, § 965.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
embezzlement, availability of remedy in case of claims arising from, § 110.
emblements, attachability, §§ 174–176.
encumbrances, claims subject to, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 203.
endowment policy, rights under, garnishability, §§ 307 et seq.
enlargement of original claim as discharging attachment, § 624.
entireties, estates by, attachability, §§ 182, 183.
equal privileges and immunities not denied by, requiring nonresident defendant to give bond as condition of right to appear and defend, § 903.
equal protection of the laws not denied by, requiring nonresident defendant to give bond as condition of right to appear and defend, § 903.
equitable assignment, priority over subsequent attachment or garnishment, § 861.
equitable attachment, § 187.
equitable interests, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 360 et seq.
equitable nature of garnishment, § 5.
equitable owner of stock standing in another's name, rights as against attaching creditor of nominal owner, § 873.
equities of garnishees, proceedings to protect, § 715.
equity,
  adverse claimant's right to relief in, § 967.
  aiding and against garnishment, §§ 713 et seq.
  aiding attachment, §§ 476 et seq.
  attachment instituted by bill in, § 474.
  availability of attachment or garnishment as remedy in suits in, § 122.
  dissolution of attachment in, § 653.
  excessive levy, relief against, § 584.
  garnishee's failure to defend, relief against, § 770.
  injunction, infra.
  interpleader in, by garnishee sued on negotiable note, § 964.
equity of redemption,
  attachability of, by mortgagee, § 241.
  priority of assignee of, over subsequent attachment or garnishment, § 864.
escrow, money in, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 196.
estoppel,
  assignee of property, to dispute priority of attachment or garnishment, § 864.
  defects and irregularities in attachment, estoppel to question, §§ 616 et seq., 996.
  garnishee, to make defenses, § 771.
  officer, to contradict return, § 615.
  receiptor,
    to interpose defense, §§ 934 et seq.
    to question sufficiency of levy, § 556.
  surety on attachment bond to set up defects and irregularities as defense to action on bond, § 996.
  surety on dissolution or release bond, to set up defenses to action on bond, §§ 920 et seq.
evidence,
  absconding of debtor, § 466.
  application for dissolution of attachment, evidence to support, § 651.
  bonds for dissolution or release, evidence in actions on, § 929.
  disclosure as, § 761.
  fraud in contracting debt, § 462.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
evidence—continued.
  fraudulent intent as basis of attachment or garnishment, § 460.
  garnishment proceedings generally, § 769.
  intervention, evidence admissible on, § 981.
  main action, § 953.
  removal of property from jurisdiction as ground for attachment, § 472.
  return of writ of attachment, as evidence, §§ 608 et seq.
  wrongful attachment, action for, §§ 1032 et seq.
exceptions by defendant to garnishee's disclosure, § 764.
excessive claim as ground for dissolving attachment, § 636.
excessive levy,
  equitable relief against, § 584.
  officer's liability for, §§ 581, 584.
excess of indebtedness over amount of garnishment, garnishee's liability as to, § 685.
exchange, membership in, as subject of attachment, § 218.
ex contractu, see "contracts," supra.
ex delicto, see "torts," infra.
executed trusts, attachability of interest of beneficiary, § 370.
execution,
  enforcement of judgment in garnishment by, § 813.
  levy, post.
  main action.
    generally, §§ 960, 961.
    levy of as dissolving attachment, § 623.
  priority as against attachment or garnishment, § 829.
  sale on, judicial sale, infra.
executors and administrators,
  creditors of, attachment or garnishment by, § 422.
  property in hands of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 410 et seq.
executory devise,
  contingent, attachability, § 186.
  vested, attachability, § 185.
exemplary damages for wrongful attachment or garnishment,
  generally, §§ 1006, 1007.
  principal's liability for, on account of wrongful attachment by agent, § 1029.
  question for jury, § 1038.
exempt character of attached or garnished property,
  availability as defense to garnishee, § 778.
  availability of garnishment as defense to action on garnished claim as affected by, §§ 700, 701.
  bond given for release of exempt property, validity, § 909.
  dissolution of attachment or garnishment on ground of, §§ 639, 750.
  existence of exemptions excluded herefrom, § 1. foreign attachment, applicability of exemption laws, § 34.
  garnishee's duty to claim exemption, § 681.
  garnishee's duty to withhold exempt property, from defendant, § 667.
  homestead, infra.
  injunction against attachment or garnishment in another state to defeat exemption, §§ 481, 721.
  insurance of, garnishability of proceeds, § 302.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- exempt character of attached or garnished property—continued.
  - officer's liability for attachment of exempt property, § 584.
  - receiptor's liability as affected by, § 936.
  - selection of exempt property by debtor, § 580.
  - successive garnishments may not be employed to defeat exemption, § 707.
  - surety's liability on release or forthcoming bond as affected by, § 924.
  - wrongful attachment, § 991.
- existence of debt or claim as essential to attachment or garnishment, §§ 190 et seq.
- expectancy, attachability, § 184.
- expenses,
  - as element of recovery in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, §§ 1014 et seq.
  - custody of attached property, responsibility for, § 549.
- extension of time as affecting surety's liability,
  - on attachment bond, § 995.
  - on redelivery or release bond, § 913.
- falsity,
  - of grounds stated for attachment as ground for dissolving, § 638.
  - of statements to another creditor as to intent not to procure attachment as ground for setting aside attachment, § 632.
- federal courts,
  - attachment or garnishment in,
    - availability, § 45.
    - governing law, § 45.
    - local practice as governing, §§ 22, 45, 969.
    - receiver appointed by state court, attachment or garnishment in as against, § 408.
    - state court's decision construing attachment and garnishment statutes as binding, § 22.
    - state statutes as applicable, § 969.
  - following state decisions as to recovery of attorney's fees in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1014.
  - priority as between receiver appointed by or attachment issued by, and receiver appointed by or attachment issued by state court, § 883.
  - receiver appointed by, property in hands of as subject to attachment or garnishment in state court, § 408.
  - removal of cause to, see "removal of cause," infra.
- federal law, rights under, availability of attachment or garnishment, to enforce, § 95.
- feelings, injury to, recovery for, in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1012.
- fees of public officers, garnishability, §§ 327 et seq.
- ferries,
  - attachment of boats used as, § 344.
  - franchise, attachability or garnishability, § 215.
- filing,
  - affidavit for attachment, § 484.
  - return for record, § 593.
- filing or recording laws,
  - failure to record deed as affecting attachment, of realty by creditor of grantor, § 226.
  - priority as affected by, §§ 847 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- financial condition, misrepresentation of, as ground for attachment, §§ 461, 462.
- fire, destruction of attached property by,
  - as discharging redelivery bond, § 913.
  - receiptor's liability for loss of goods by, § 933.
- fixtures,
  - attachment of,
    - generally, §§ 177, 836.
    - levy on, sufficiency, § 559.
    - necessity of removal, § 540.
  - removability as against attaching creditor, § 836.
- flight of debtor as ground for attachment or garnishment, §§ 464 et seq.
- forcible entry to levy attachment, § 558.
- foreign attachment, see "nonresidents," infra.
- foreign corporations,
  - affidavit for attachment of property of, sufficiency of recitals in, § 499.
  - availability of remedy as against, § 130.
  - availability of remedy to, § 125.
  - debts of, jurisdiction to garnish, §§ 78, 79.
  - debts owing to, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 340.
  - domesticated corporations, supra.
  - garnishability, §§ 71, 151.
  - insurance company, securities deposited by, with state treasurer, garnishability, § 367.
  - property of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 339.
  - residence of, for purpose of attachment and garnishment, §§ 445, 447.
  - rolling stock of foreign railroad company as subject of attachment, § 346.
  - service of garnishment on officer of, § 729.
  - stock of, as attachable or garnishable, § 352.
- foreign garnishment,
  - injunction against, where effect would be to defeat law of forum, § 721.
  - satisfaction of judgment in, as affecting liability of garnishee to defendant, §§ 810, 811.
- foreign judgment,
  - claim on, enforceability by attachment or garnishment, § 101.
  - jurisdiction where garnishable, § 74.
  - on garnished claim as defense available to garnishee, § 784.
  - subject of attachment or garnishment, § 214.
- foreign receivership as affecting attachment or garnishment, §§ 885 et seq.
- forthcoming bonds, see "bonds," supra.
- franchises, attachability or garnishability, §§ 215, 343.
- fraud,
  - affidavit for attachment, effect of, § 482.
  - claim arising out of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 206.
  - complainant's, as defense to action for wrongful attachment, § 997.
  - dissolution of attachment on ground of, § 632.
  - ground for attachment,
    - generally, §§ 34, 448 et seq.
    - recital of, in affidavit, sufficiency, § 499.
  - in obtaining judgment against debtor as defense available to garnishee, § 777.
  - recovery back of payment induced by, availability of attachment as remedy, § 98.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- fraud—continued.
  - surety's liability on dissolution or release bond as affected by fraud in attachment or garnishment, § 921.
  - waiver of, by obtaining attachment, § 15.
  - wrongful attachment or garnishment, action for based upon seizure of property by, § 991.
- fraudulent conveyance,
  - attachment of property fraudulently conveyed, §§ 31, 91, 222, 230, 823.
  - availability of remedy in case of, §§ 99, 100.
  - bill in equity to set aside, attaching creditor's right to maintain, § 477.
  - ground for attachment, §§ 449 et seq.
  - priority of attachment or garnishment over, §§ 845, 860.
  - subject of, as liable to attachment or garnishment, §§ 222, 230, 823.
  - transferee as liable to attachment or garnishment, § 134.
- fraudulent conveyance act,
  - interest of beneficiary in trust property, attachability or garnishability as affected by, § 365.
  - provisions of, as affecting attachment, § 31.
- fruits, attachability, § 175.
- fugitive from justice, status of as nonresident, § 440.
- full faith and credit,
  - affidavits for attachment, failure to file as affecting right of judgment to full faith and credit, § 482.
  - anticipated refusal of, for garnishment, as defense available to garnishee, § 785.
  - garnished claim, foreign judgment on, § 784.
  - injunction against attachment or garnishment in another state in evasion of law of forum, not denial of, §§ 481, 721.
  - judgment in attachment or garnishment proceedings as entitled to, §§ 47, 316, 803, 810, 811.
  - judgment in main action, § 959.
  - nonresidents, judgment subjecting debts due, to payment of claim, § 66.
- function, § 21.
- future advances, mortgage to secure, priority of over attachment, § 857.
- gambling,
  - money lost not recoverable by garnishment, § 190.
  - statutory liability to refund money won, availability of attachment as remedy, § 91.
- garnishee,
  - generally, §§ 133 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - adverse claimant, protection against, §§ 964 et seq.
  - after-acquired property, attachment or garnishment as embracing, §§ 161 et seq.
  - amendment of affidavit for attachment, right to object to, § 489.
  - answer of,
  - generally, §§ 754 et seq.
    - as evidence against himself, § 769.
  - appearance, § 733.
  - costs, liability for, or right to, § 814.
  - defendant as, § 140.
  - defenses of, §§ 770 et seq.
  - double liability, protection against, see "double liability," supra.
  - duties of, §§ 659 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- garnishee—continued.
  - equities of, proceedings to protect, § 715.
  - estoppel of, to make defenses, § 771.
  - interrogation of, § 753.
  - liabilities of,
    - generally, §§ 659 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - main action, garnishee as party to, § 940.
  - merits of defendant's claim against, governing law, § 38.
  - motion by to vacate, dissolve or discharge garnishment, § 746.
  - nonresident temporarily present in state, § 72.
  - personally bound, § 819.
  - plaintiff as, §§ 138, 139.
  - plaintiff's incapacity to sue, right to question, § 123.
  - reply by, to traverse of answer, § 762.
  - residence of, as affecting garnishability of debt due nonresident, § 71.
  - rights of,
    - generally, §§ 659 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - service of process on,
    - generally, §§ 727 et seq.
    - levy of attachment by, § 554.
  - set-off or counterclaim by, unliquidated, effect of, § 199.
  - waiver by, of defects or irregularities, §§ 734 et seq.
- general appearance,
  - defendant,
    - generally, §§ 947 et seq.
      - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
    - defects and irregularities in attachment or garnishment as waived by, §§ 617, 734, 737.
    - jurisdiction, effect to confer, §§ 49–52.
  - garnishee,
    - generally, § 733.
    - waiver of defects and irregularities by, § 737.
- general denial,
  - payment as available defense under, § 776.
  - set-off or counterclaim as defense available to garnishee under, § 788.
- gift,
  - intended, garnishability of, § 134.
  - making of, as ground for attachment, § 454.
- good faith, exemplary damages for wrongful attachment as affected by existence of, § 999.
- goods, debts payable in, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 205.
- governing law,
  - generally, §§ 35 et seq.
  - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
- governments, see "sovereignties," post.
- grass, attachability, § 174.
- grounds for attachment or garnishment,
  - generally, §§ 423 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - dissolution of attachment for insufficiency of, § 637.
- estoppel of surety on dissolution or release bond to question, § 923.
  - recitals of, in affidavit, sufficiency, § 499.
  - writ, statement of grounds in, § 525.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- grounds for dissolution or vacation of attachment,
  - generally, §§ 632 et seq.
  - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
- guardianship, estates and interests of persons under, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 404.
- health, absence on account of, as affecting status as resident, § 441.
- heir, attachment or garnishment by creditor of,
  - generally, §§ 412 et seq.
  - as affected by right of retainer, § 893.
  - expectancy, attachability, § 184.
- hire purchase agreement, lessee's right under, attachability, §§ 243, 246.
- holiday, issuance of writ of attachment on, § 515.
- homestead,
  - occupation of land for, as ground for dissolving attachment, § 622.
  - proceeds of sale of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 229.
- homestead claimant, interest of, attachability, § 166.
- hops, attachability, § 174, note.
- horse ridden by debtor, attachability, § 173.
- house,
  - attachability, § 177.
  - forcible entry of, to levy attachment, § 558.
- humiliation, recovery for, in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1012.
- husband and wife, attachability of estates and interests,
  - generally, §§ 179 et seq.
  - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
- ignorance,
  - of identity of defendant as affecting liability of garnishee, § 676.
  - of property or funds of defendant in his hands as affecting liability of garnishee, § 677.
  - of service of garnishment, liability of garnishee as limited by, § 675.
- illness, see "sickness," infra.
- immature claim,
  - availability of remedy to enforce, §§ 112 et seq.
  - ground for dissolving attachment, § 636.
  - priority of attachment based on, as against subsequent attachment, § 840.
- immature crops, attachability, § 176.
- immature debts,
  - attachability or garnishability, §§ 192, 193, 278 et seq.
  - immaturity as defense available to garnishee, § 775.
- immature paper, garnishability of debt evidenced by, §§ 278 et seq.
- immigrant as resident of state within attachment statute, § 437.
- implied contracts, availability of remedy to enforce, § 96.
- incompetent persons, property of, as subject of attachment of garnishment, §§ 127, 404.
- incomplete assignment of garnished debt,
  - availability to garnishee as defense § 780.
  - priority over subsequent attachment or garnishment, § 845.
- inconsistency with other remedies, §§ 14 et seq.
- indebtedness, see "debt," supra.
- indemnity insurance, rights under as subject to garnishment, §§ 312 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- index, omission to enter attachment in, as affecting lien, § 504.
- infants, see "minors," infra.
- information and belief, affidavit for attachment on, § 501.
- initiation of garnishment proceedings, § 709.
- injunction,
  - attachment proceedings, injunction against,
    - generally, §§ 476 et seq.
    - in evasion of law of forum, § 481.
  - bond for dissolution or release injunction against enforcement of at instance of sureties, § 904.
  - equities of garnishees, protection by, § 715.
  - foreign garnishment, in evasion of law of forum, injunction against, § 721.
  - successive garnishments, § 717.
- injustice, dissolution of attachment on ground of, § 632.
- in personam, see "personal judgment," infra.
- in rem judgment,
  - character of judgment in garnishment proceedings, as, § 793.
  - execution on, in main action, § 961.
  - in main action, § 954.
  - jurisdiction to render, § 83.
- insolvency proceedings,
  - attachment as affected by, § 628.
  - filing claim in, as waiver of garnishment lien, § 14.
  - garnishment as affected by, § 744.
  - injunction against attachment in another state to defeat, § 481.
  - injunction against garnishment in another state to defeat, § 721.
  - surety's liability on dissolution or release bond as affected by insolvency proceedings against defendant, § 919.
- instructions to jury in wrongful attachment action, § 1038.
- instrument for payment of money, see "money obligations," "negotiable instruments," infra.
- insufficiency of attachment as affecting priority over subsequent attachments or garnishments, § 840.
- insurance,
  - garnishment of, as defense to other proceedings on garnished claim, § 701.
  - proceeds of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 293 et seq.
  - rights of policy holder as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 293 et seq.
  - satisfaction of foreign judgment in garnishment proceedings as protecting insurer, § 811.
- insurance company, jurisdiction to garnish debts owing by, § 79.
- intangible property,
  - assignment of, as affecting priority of attachment or garnishment, §§ 864 et seq.
  - attachability, §§ 187 et seq.
  - where attachable or garnishable, § 36.
- intention,
  - criterion of residence or nonresidence, §§ 429 et seq.
  - declaration of intention to levy, as sufficient, § 555.
  - departure from state, § 465.
  - fraudulent, existence of, §§ 455 et seq.
  - insufficiency of, to effect seizure, § 553.
  - levy on realty cannot be effected by, § 570.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- intention—continued.
  - removal of property, as furnishing ground for attachment or garnishment, §§ 469–471.
- interest,
  - bonds garnished, attachment or garnishment as binding interest on, § 162.
  - garnishee's liability for,
    - to defendant, § 686.
    - to garnishing creditor, § 673.
  - usurious, see "usury," infra.
  - wrongful attachment, interest as element of recovery, § 1013.
- intermingled goods, levy on, § 560.
- interpleader of adverse claimant, §§ 964 et seq.
- interrogatories in garnishment proceedings,
  - generally, § 753.
  - answer to, §§ 754, 756.
- interstate commerce, attachment or garnishment as unconstitutional interference with, §§ 250, 339, 342, 346, 347.
- intervention,
  - adverse claimant's right of, §§ 970 et seq.
  - answer of garnishee as evidence against intervener, § 761.
  - notice, intervener's right to, of subsequent proceedings, § 979.
  - recovery by intervener of damages for wrongful or malicious attachment or garnishment, § 1022.
- intoxicating liquor, attachability, §§ 156, 169.
- invalid, see "void," infra.
- inventory of attached property,
  - generally, § 587.
  - failure to make as defense available to surety on dissolution or release bond, § 922.
- irregularities, see defects and irregularities, supra.
- joinder of parties in garnishment proceeding, § 705.
- joint creditor, interest of as subject to attachment or garnishment, §§ 134, 188.
- joint debtor,
  - availability of remedy as against, § 129.
  - departure from state as ground for attachment or garnishment, § 464.
  - interest of in common property may not be separately appraised, § 588.
  - joinder of in garnishment proceedings, necessity for, § 705.
- joint liability of attaching creditors for wrongful attachment, § 1027.
- joint tenant, interest of,
  - attachability, §§ 164, 178, 182.
  - levy on, § 568.
- judgment,
  - against garnishee,
    - conditional judgment, supra.
    - default judgment, supra.
    - foreign judgment, supra.
    - void judgment, infra.
  - assignee of, garnishee's duty to, § 691.
  - assignment of, as affecting attachment or garnishment of judgment debtor, § 866.
  - claim on, enforceability by attachment or garnishment, § 101.
  - defendant against plaintiff, garnishability, § 139.
  - dissolution of attachment by judgment in main action, § 623.
  - foreign judgment, supra.
  - full faith and credit, supra.
  - garnished claim, judgment on as defense available to garnishee, § 784.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- judgment—continued.
  - garnishment proceedings,
    - generally, §§ 789 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - in personam, see "personal judgment," infra.
  - in rem, see "in rem," supra.
  - intervention or interpleader, judgment on, § 982.
  - lien of, priority over attachment or garnishment, § 829.
  - main action,
    - generally, §§ 954 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
    - admissibility in evidence in action on dissolution or release bonds, § 929.
    - amount, § 11.
    - as condition of judgment against garnishee, §§ 111, 711.
    - as discharging liability on release, dissolution and release bond, § 916.
    - as dissolving attachment, § 623.
    - as terminating garnishment, § 739.
    - restricted operation where defendant not personally served or did not appear, § 11.
    - reversal of, as entitling garnishee to restitution, § 800.
    - satisfaction of, as terminating garnishment, § 739.
  - personal judgment, infra.
  - reversal, infra.
  - satisfaction, infra.
  - subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 212 et seq., 396.
  - wrongful attachment action, § 1039.
- judicial notice, affidavit for attachment, § 483.
- judicial sale,
  - attachability of goods left in possession of execution debtor as attachable by his creditor, § 225.
  - purchaser's interest as subject of attachment, § 228.
- jurat to affidavit for attachment, omission of or defects in, § 494.
- jurisdiction to attach or garnish,
  - generally, §§ 40 et seq., 62 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - artifice in obtaining, effect of, § 87.
  - dissolution of attachment for failure to acquire, § 632.
  - insurance, proceeds of, § 295.
  - lack of, as ground for motion to dissolve or discharge attachment or garnishment, § 748.
  - territorial, § 157.
  - trick in obtaining, effect of, § 87.
- jurisdictional amount, limitations upon as affecting attachment or garnishment, § 44.
- jury,
  - questions for, in wrongful attachment action, § 1038.
  - right to trial by,
    - application for dissolution of attachment, § 653.
    - questions arising in garnishment proceedings, §§ 766 et seq.
- justice of demand, recitals in affidavit for attachment as to, § 497.
- keeper of attached property,
  - compensation, who liable for, § 549.
  - possession of, § 542.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- knowledge,
  - by defendant of garnishment as exonerating garnishee of duty to notify defendant or adverse claimant, §§ 683, 688.
  - want of, see "ignorance," supra.
- landlord and tenant,
  - leases,
    - interests under as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 242 et seq.
    - "rent," infra.
  - lien of landlord,
    - enforceability by attachment, § 93.
    - priority as against attachment or garnishment, § 835.
  - notice to tenant of attachment of realty, § 575.
  - rent, infra.
  - service of attachment on, recitals of return as to, § 599.
  - tenant at will, interest of, as subject to attachment, § 242.
- larceny, see "theft," infra.
- leasehold, levy on, sufficiency, § 559.
- leases, see "landlord and tenant," supra.
- leaving attached goods,
  - in possession of debtor, § 543.
  - on premises, rent or damages for, § 550.
- legatee, attachment or garnishment of interest of,
  - generally, §§ 410, 412 et seq.
  - as affected by right of retainer, § 893.
- legislative control of remedy, § 6.
- levy,
  - attachment generally, §§ 527 et seq.
  - defect in, as exonerating sureties on dissolution or release bond, § 922.
  - priority of, as establishing priority against rival attachments and garnishments, § 839.
  - subject of as subject to attachment or garnishment in hands of levying officer, §§ 387 et seq.
  - wrongful attachment, necessity of actual levy to give right of action for, § 989.
- liability insurance, rights under policy of, as subject to garnishment, §§ 312 et seq.
- libel or slander,
  - availability of remedy in action for, § 108.
  - claim arising out of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 206.
- lien,
  - attachability, §§ 231 et seq.
  - effect of attachment or garnishment on, § 16.
  - enforceability of by attachment, § 93.
  - landlord's lien, supra.
  - mechanic's lien, infra.
  - of attachment or garnishment,
    - generally, §§ 815 et seq.
      - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
    - effect of judgment on, § 800.
    - effect on, of institution of second garnishment proceeding, § 707.
  - priority over attachment, governing law, § 37.
  - prior to garnishment, garnishee's right to discharge, § 665.
  - waiver by resort to attachment, § 14.
- life estate, attachability,
  - generally, § 163.
  - equitable life estate, § 375.
- life insurance, rights under policies of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 304 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- limitation of actions,
  - garnishee's right to defense of limitations, § 772.
  - officer's liability for insufficient levy, § 583.
  - wrongful attachment, § 1004.
- liquidated damages, claims for availability of attachment or garnishment as remedy, § 90.
- loans to defendant, garnishee's right to make, § 666.
- London, custom of, §§ 19, 25.
- loss of garnished property or funds, garnishee's liability, § 679.
- lost writ, proof of, § 508.
- machinery, levy on, sufficiency, § 559.
- main action,
  - generally, §§ 938 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - appeal by garnishor from adverse judgment in as continuing garnishment, § 740.
  - commencement of, by writ of garnishment, § 710.
  - defendant in, see "defendant," supra.
  - discontinuance, exoneration by, of surety on dissolution or release bond, § 916.
  - dismissal of,
    - as dissolving garnishment, § 739.
    - as exonerating surety on dissolution or release bond, § 916.
  - expense of defending as element of recovery for wrongful attachment or garnishment, §§ 1015 et seq.
  - garnishee, judgment against, as affecting judgment against defendant, § 801.
  - intervention by adverse claimant, see "intervention," supra.
  - judgment in, see "judgment," supra.
  - jurisdictional amount, separate claims cannot be added together to make up, § 44.
  - jurisdiction over, §§ 55 et seq.
  - merits of,
    - garnishee's right to litigate, § 773.
    - governing law, § 37.
    - inquiry into, on motion to dissolve attachment, §§ 635, 653.
    - may not be tried on traverse of attachment affidavit, § 503.
  - order of proceedings as between main action and garnishment, §§ 710, 711.
  - rem or personam, § 10.
  - satisfaction of judgment in, as terminating garnishment, § 739.
  - service of process in as essential to jurisdiction, § 59.
  - termination of, as terminating garnishment, § 739.
  - venue of, in case of foreign attachment, § 43.
- maintenance, trust for, beneficial interest in as subject of attachment, § 381.
- malice,
  - absence of, as defense to action for wrongful or malicious attachment or garnishment, § 998.
  - question for jury in wrongful attachment action, § 1038.
- malicious attachment, see "wrongful attachment," infra.
- manucaption, necessity of, in levying attachment, § 537.
- married woman,
  - dissolution bond, power to execute, § 901.
  - injunction against sale of property of, on attachment against husband, § 480.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
married woman—continued.
  property of, as liable to attachment or garnishment,
    generally, § 127.
    for husband's debts, § 179.
    governing law, § 37.
    interest in decedent's estate, § 419.
mature promissory note, garnishability of maker, § 283.
maturity,
  immaturity, supra.
  of claim, sufficiency of recital in affidavit to show, § 497.
  set-off or counterclaim, availability to garnishee as defense as affected by time of maturity, § 787.
mechanic's lien, effect of attachment on, § 16.
  prior to garnishment, garnishee's right to discharge, § 665.
mental suffering, recovery for, in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1012.
merits,
  main action, supra.
  of claim or grounds for attachment or garnishment as defense in action for wrongful attachment, § 1000.
minor,
  property of, attachability or garnishability, §§ 127, 404.
  wages of, as garnishable in action against parent, § 316.
misjoinder of parties, dissolution of attachment because of, § 633.
misnomer,
  defendant,
    as affecting garnishee's liability, § 676.
    in writ of attachment, effect, § 521.
  garnishee, effect, § 728.
mistake in attachment or garnishment proceedings as exonerating surety on dissolution or release bond, § 921.
misuse of attached property, officer's liability for, § 584.
mitigation of damages for wrongful attachment, §§ 999, 1000, 1001.
money,
  attachability, §§ 171, 173.
  claims for availability of attachment or garnishment to enforce, § 89.
  in court, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 396 et seq.
  in possession of debtor, attachability of, § 173.
  levy on, sufficiency, § 559.
money obligations,
  assignment of, as affecting subsequent attachment or garnishment, §§ 871, 872.
  collecting agent, garnishability in hands of, § 291.
  immature, enforceability by attachment or garnishment, § 115.
  jurisdiction to garnish debts evidenced by, § 77.
  levy on, § 563.
  negotiable paper, infra.
  proceeds of collection of, garnishability, § 292.
  subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 259 et seq., 287.
mortgage,
  deficiency on foreclosure, right to recover, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 235.
  equity of redemption, supra.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
mortgage—continued.
  existence of, as defense available to garnishee, § 779.
  foreclosure by attachment, § 94.
  future advances to be made under, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 190.
  interests of parties to, as subject to attachment or garnishment, §§ 231 et seq.
  levy of attachment on mortgaged property, § 566.
  priority of attachment or garnishment over, §§ 843 et seq.
  reformation, right to, as against attaching creditor, § 830.
  surplus on foreclosure, attachability, § 240.
mortgagee, rights and interests of as subject of attachment, §§ 234 et seq.
mortgagor of realty, rights and interests of as subject of attachment, §§ 240 et seq.
  right to possession during redemption period as subject of attachment, § 219.
motions,
  garnishment proceedings, generally, § 706.
  to dissolve, quash or vacate attachment or garnishment,
    generally, §§ 645, 745 et seq.
    appearance for purpose of, as general appearance, §§ 50, 51.
    as extending time to plead in main action, § 949.
    as mode of traversing affidavit for attachment, § 502.
municipal corporations,
  employees, wages of, garnishability, §§ 327 et seq.
  garnishability, §§ 144, 145.
  officers of, garnishability of salaries, §§ 327 et seq.
  property of, as subject of attachment, §§ 357, 359.
  revenues of as subject of garnishment, § 358.
  wrongful attachment, liability for, § 1026.
national banks,
  availability of remedy as against, § 131.
  garnishability, § 153.
  stock of, as attachable or garnishable, § 351.
negligence, claim arising out of, as subject to attachment or garnishment, § 206.
negotiable paper,
  bank deposits, attachability or garnishability as affected by giving or acceptance, § 258.
  debts evidenced by, as subject of garnishment, §§ 259 et seq.
  defenses available to garnishee, § 782.
  equitable remedies against garnishment of, § 716.
  garnishee's rights, liabilities and duties, §§ 694, 695.
  indorsee's right to recover amount collected by garnishment of note, § 972.
  interpleader of garnishment creditor by maker, in action on, § 964.
  judgment against garnishee, relief against, § 798.
  lien created by attempted garnishment of funds represented by, § 818.
  payment as defense available to garnishee, § 776.
  subject of garnishment, §§ 259 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- negotiable paper—continued.
  - transfer of as affecting subsequent attachment or garnishment, §§ 868 et seq.
- nighttime, levy of attachment in, § 532.
- nihil habet, return of, § 602.
- nonresidence,
  - ground for attachment or garnishment, §§ 424 et seq.
  - recitals as to, in affidavit, sufficiency, § 499.
- nonresident,
  - assignment to, as ground for attachment, § 468.
  - availability of remedy to, § 124.
  - bond on attachment of, validity of statute dispensing with, § 896.
  - bond, requiring giving of by nonresident defendant as condition of right to appear and defend, § 903.
  - constitutionality of attachment or garnishment of, §§ 425, 959.
  - debt due, garnishment of, §§ 63 et seq.
  - dissolution of attachment of property of, on ground of want of title, § 641.
  - due process in judgment against, based upon attachment or garnishment of property in state, § 959.
  - exemption laws as applicable to foreign attachments, § 34.
  - exemption of property of, from attachment while attending court, § 158.
  - garnishment of, § 136.
  - jurisdiction of main action against, §§ 58, 59.
  - jurisdiction over as acquired by attachment or garnishment, §§ 47, 959.
  - property of, as subject to attachment or garnishment, § 128.
  - uniform partnership law, applicability in case of foreign attachment of exemption of partner's interest from attachment, § 28.
  - venue of foreign attachment, as determining venue of main action, § 43.
  - wrongful attachment of property of, recovery of attorney's fees as element of damages, § 1017.
- nonsuit, judgment of, in main action as dissolving attachment, § 623.
- notes, see "money obligations;" "negotiable paper," supra.
- notice,
  - of adverse claims, § 968.
  - of amendment of return, necessity of giving to adverse party, § 605.
  - of application for dissolution of attachment, § 650.
  - of assignment or transfer,
    - of debt or claim, to debtor,
      - garnishee's liability to assignee as affected by, §§ 690, 691.
      - necessity of to defeat subsequent attachment or garnishment, §§ 866, 874 et seq.
      - negotiable instruments, transfer of, necessity of notice to garnishee to protect holder against garnishment, §§ 869, 870.
      - non-negotiable paper, transfer of, necessity of notice to maker to protect indorsee against garnishment, § 872.
      - time of giving as affecting rights of assignee as against attaching or garnishing creditor, §§ 876 et seq.
      - want of as affecting garnishee's liability to assignee, §§ 690, 691.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- notice—continued.
  - of attachment or garnishment,
    - to adverse claimant,
      - garnishee's duty to give, § 688.
      - to defend, § 964.
    - to defendant,
      - as requisite to availability of judgment against garnishee as defense to action by defendant, § 804.
      - failure to give as ground for motion to dismiss garnishment, § 749.
      - garnishee's duty as to, §§ 682, 683.
      - necessity for, §§ 732, 942 et seq.
- notoriety as condition of attachment, §§ 553, 574 et seq.
- nulla bona, return of, § 602.
- occupant of realty,
  - notice to, of attachment, § 575.
  - service of attachment on, recitals of return as to, § 599.
- officer levying attachment or garnishment,
  - amendment of return by, before filing, § 607.
  - discretion as to amount of property to be seized, §§ 581, 584.
  - estoppel of, to contradict return, § 615.
  - instructions to, duty of attaching creditor to give, § 579.
  - interest in attachment, effect, § 529.
  - levy by, levy, supra.
  - liability,
    - bond, liability on for wrongful attachment or garnishment of property of third person, § 1022.
    - defenses, in action for wrongful attachment, § 1002.
    - delay in levy, § 583.
    - excessive levy, §§ 581, 583.
    - failure to levy, § 582.
    - insufficient levy, §§ 578, 579, 581, 583.
    - loss of attached property, § 548.
    - misuse of attached property, § 584.
    - return, failure to make, § 592.
    - safe-keeping of goods levied upon, §§ 544, 548.
    - third person, seizing property of, § 1022.
    - wrongful attachment or garnishment, §§ 528, 984, 992.
  - receipt for goods, taking of as affecting officer's control over or responsibility for attached goods, § 931.
  - return, estoppel to contradict, § 615.
  - rights of, in property after seizure, § 545.
  - who may make levy, § 528.
  - wrongful attachment or garnishment, liability for, §§ 528, 984, 992.
- officers of private corporations, garnishability, § 154.
- open accounts, garnishability, § 775.
- oppression, dissolution of attachment on ground of, § 632.
- option to purchase, priority of attachment over, § 863.
- order for payment of money, giving of, as defeating subsequent garnishment, § 861.
- order of court,
  - as prerequisite to issuance of writ, § 513.
  - denying motion to dissolve attachment, propriety and effect, § 654.
  - on garnishee in lieu of judgment, § 795.
- ordinaries, property in possession of, not subject to attachment, § 386.
- origin of attachment and garnishment, §§ 18 et seq.
- other proceedings on garnished claim,
  - garnishment as defense to, §§ 696 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
other proceedings on garnished claim—continued.
  pendency of as defense available to garnishee, § 783.
other remedies, consistency or inconsistency with, §§ 14 et seq.
other state, garnishment proceeding in, as defense to action on garnished claim, § 698.
outhouse, forcible entrance of, to levy attachment, § 558.
owner, right of in attached property after seizure, § 545.
packages, contents of,
  attachability, § 172.
  levy on, § 561.
parol evidence,
  jurat of affidavit for attachment, § 494.
  to aid or attack affidavit for attachment, § 483.
partial assignment, see "assignment," supra.
parties,
  bonds for dissolution or release, actions on, § 927.
  garnishment, §§ 704, 705.
  main action, § 939.
  misjoinder, supra.
  writ of attachment, who must be named in, § 521.
  wrongful attachment action, §§ 1024 et seq.
partners and partnerships, answer of partner in garnishment proceedings, as binding copartner, § 761.
  availability of remedy,
    in actions against, § 119.
    to enforce payment of balance due partner, § 105.
  debts due partnership, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 336.
  departure of partner from state as ground for attachment, § 464.
  disposition of assets of partner or partnership as ground for attachment, § 450.
  division of assets among partners, when ground for attachment, § 452.
  garnishability where composed of resident and nonresident partners,
    generally, § 136.
    service of garnishment process on resident partner, § 72.
  individual property of or debt due to partner as subject of attachment or garnishment by firm creditors, § 337.
  interest in partnershp,
    as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 335.
    levy on, § 565.
  joinder of partners, in garnishment of partnership, § 705.
  jurisdiction to garnish debts of partnership, § 81.
  priority between attaching creditors of partner and creditors of partnership, §§ 894, 895.
  property of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 334.
  residence of, partnership, for purposes of attachment or garnishment, § 446.
  service of garnishment on one partner, §§ 72, 730.
  surviving partner, attachability of property in hands of, § 385.
  uniform partnership law as affecting attachment, § 28.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
part of larger quantity, levy of attachment on, § 538.
passive trusts, attachability of interest of beneficiary, § 370.
patent infringement, claim arising out of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 206.
patent rights as subject of attachment, § 216.
payment,
  defense available to garnishee, § 776.
  distributee, payment to, as precluding garnishment, § 420.
  garnishee's liability as affected by, §§ 662 et seq.
  into court,
    by garnishee for protection against adverse claimant, § 965.
    of garnished debt, § 719.
  officer, payment of garnished debt to, § 719.
  promissory note as precluding garnishment of debt, § 272.
  under legal compulsion as releasing garnishee from liability to plaintiff, § 678.
  voluntary, by garnishee, as defense to action by defendant, § 809.
penalty, availability of attachment or garnishment to enforce, § 91.
pendency of other proceedings on garnished claim as defense available to garnishee, § 783.
pending action for debt as, subject of, garnishment, § 210.
personal injuries,
  availability of remedy in suit for, § 107.
  claim arising out of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 206.
personal judgment,
  appearance as conferring jurisdiction to render, §§ 49 et seq.
  execution on, in main action, § 960.
  garnishment proceedings, § 793.
  jurisdiction to render, § 83.
  main action, § 954.
personal property,
  attachability,
    generally, §§ 167 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  levy on, manner and sufficiency, §§ 536 et seq.
  priority of attachment as affected by filing or recording laws, §§ 847 et seq.
  where liable to attachment, § 36.
personal rights and privileges as subject of attachment, § 217.
personam, proceeding in, character as, §§ 9 et seq.
petition in garnishment proceedings,
  generally, §§ 722 et seq.
  waiver of defects in, § 736.
pew as subject of attachment, § 217.
place,
  of contracting debt, jurisdiction in garnishment as affected by, § 74.
  where debt payable as affecting jurisdiction in garnishment, § 73.
plaintiff,
  death of, before judgment against garnishee as affecting its validity, § 789.
  garnishee, chargeability as, §§ 138, 139.
  residence of, as affecting garnishability of debt due nonresident, § 70.
  who may be in action for attachment or garnishment, §§ 123 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
pleadings,
  amendment,
    as affecting attachment, §§ 629--631.
    in main action,
      generally, § 952.
      as affecting liability of sureties on dissolution and release bond, §§ 914, 915.
    petition for garnishment, § 723.
  answer, ante.
  bonds for dissolution or release, pleading in actions on, § 928.
  garnishment proceedings, generally, §§ 706, 723.
  general denial, supra.
  intervention, § 978.
  main action, §§ 949 et seq.
  reply, infra.
  set-off or counterclaim, necessity for, § 788.
  variance, infra.
  wrongful attachment, pleadings in action for, §§ 1030, 1031.
pledge,
  attachability of interests of pledgees and pledgeors, §§ 232, 233, 289, 353.
  levy of attachment on pledged property, § 566.
  lien of, effect of attachment on, § 16.
  negotiable paper, attachment or garnishment of interest of pledgeor and pledgee, § 289.
  priority of attachment or garnishment over rights of pledgee, §§ 843 et seq.
  stock, interest of pledgeor in as subject of attachment, § 353.
possession,
  general denial of, as defense available to garnishee, § 774.
  of attached property,
    personalty, §§ 536 et seq.
    realty, § 570.
  of debtor, leaving goods in, § 543.
  of personal property, retention of as affecting priority of attachment over transfer, § 846.
possessory interest,
  in land, attachability, § 165.
  in personalty, attachability, § 168.
  priority of right as against attachment or garnishment, § 831.
posting notice or order as sufficient levy,
  on personalty, § 553.
  on realty, § 576.
practice and procedure,
  attachment proper,
    generally, §§ 473 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  bonds for dissolution or release, enforcement of,
    generally, §§ 926 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  dissolution of attachment,
    generally, §§ 646 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  excessive levy, action for, § 585.
  garnishment,
    generally, §§ 703 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  insufficient levy, action for, § 585.
  intervention,
    generally, §§ 973 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
practice and procedure—continued.
  irregularities in as affecting jurisdiction, §§ 84 et seq.
  pleading, supra.
  wrongful or malicious attachment or garnishment,
    generally, §§ 1019 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
praecipe, filing of, as prerequisite to issuance of writ of attachment, § 513.
preference to creditor as ground for attachment, §§ 459, 460.
premature claim, stay of garnishment execution until maturity of debt, § 813.
presumptions,
  identity of cause of action set forth in amended, as with that set forth in original, complaint, § 914.
  officer's possession of attached property, presumption of rightfulness, § 545.
  return,
    regularity of, § 607.
    time of, § 592.
  service of garnishment process, § 731.
  time of filing of affidavit for attachment, § 484.
  validity of levy where return is defective, § 595.
  writ, regularity of issuance, § 507.
  wrongful attachment, presumptions in action for, § 1033.
principal and agent,
  admissions of agent as evidence against principal in action for wrongful attachment, § 1036.
  affidavit for attachment made by agent, §§ 491, 501.
  bank deposits made by agent as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 256.
  garnishability of agent for collection, §§ 290 et seq.
  garnishment of agent as affecting obligation to principal, § 661.
  private corporation, agent of, garnishability, § 154.
  property in hands of agent as subject to attachment or garnishment,
    generally, § 135.
    in action against agent, § 156.
  purchase from agent for purpose of creating fund subject to attachment, § 87.
  wrongful attachment, liability of principal or agent for, § 1025.
priority of attachment or garnishment,
  generally, §§ 829 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  bank deposits, effect of attachment or garnishment of, to create priority, over other creditors of insolvent bank, § 255.
  over lien, governing law, § 37.
  over receiver, § 407.
prisoner, property taken from attachability or garnishability, §§ 400 et seq.
privileges as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 217.
probable cause for attachment,
  generally, §§ 986, 987.
  as defense to action for wrongful or malicious attachment or garnishment, § 999.
process,
  service of, see "service of process," infra.
  territorial limitations upon execution of, § 43.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- proclamation of levy of attachment on realty, §§ 570, 577.
- profits, loss of, recovery for, in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1011.
- promissory note, see "money obligations;" "negotiable paper," supra.
- property liable to attachment and garnishment,
  - generally, §§ 155 et seq.
  - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
- prorating of attaching creditors,
  - generally, § 842.
  - abandonment of original attachment as affecting, § 624.
  - effect of prorating statute, to give second garnishment priority over intervening assignment, § 859.
- publication, service by, see "substituted service," infra.
- public corporations,
  - garnishability, §§ 144 et seq.
  - property of, as subject of attachment, § 357.
- publicity as condition of attachment, § 553.
- public lands, attachability of interest in, § 166.
- public officers and employees,
  - garnishability, § 142.
  - salaries and wages of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 327 et seq.
- public property, insurance on, garnishability of proceeds, § 302.
- public welfare institutions, garnishability, § 148.
- punitive damages,
  - exemplary damages, supra.
- purchase money, attachment levied in actions to recover, not superior to prior attachment, § 839.
- purpose of attachment or garnishment, § 21.
- quashing,
  - levy, § 535.
  - writ, § 509.
- quasi public corporation, property of as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 344.
- questions for jury,
  - absconding of debtor, § 466.
  - application to dissolve attachment, § 653.
  - excessive levy, liability of officer for, § 585.
  - insufficient levy, liability of officer for, § 585.
- railroad corporations,
  - garnishability, § 152.
  - operated by government, attachability and garnishability of funds of, § 149.
  - property of, as subject to attachment, §§ 344 et seq.
  - rolling stock, infra.
  - traffic balances, infra.
- realty,
  - attachability,
    - generally, §§ 163 et seq.
    - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  - beneficial interest in, as subject to attachment, § 368.
  - cash payments on sale of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 195.
  - conveyances or contracts for sale of, attachability of interests arising from, §§ 226 et seq.
  - deeds, supra.
  - description of in return of writ of attachment, § 597.
  - easement, supra.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
- realty—continued.
  - levy on, manner and sufficiency, §§ 567 et seq.
  - lien created by attachment of,
    - generally, § 815.
    - commencement of, § 825.
  - priority of attachment over subsequent receivership, § 882.
  - recording laws relating to, as affecting priority of attachment or garnishment, §§ 852 et seq.
  - satisfaction of plaintiff's claim, by attachment of, § 816.
  - service of attachment on occupant, recitals of return as to, § 599.
  - where liable to attachment, § 36.
- receiptor, estoppel to question sufficiency of levy, § 556.
- receipts given for release of attached or garnished property, §§ 931 et seq.
- receiver,
  - appointment of, as affecting attachment or garnishment, §§ 882 et seq.
  - bank appointment for, as affecting attachment or garnishment of deposits, § 255.
  - in garnishment proceedings, § 720.
  - injunction against improper garnishment of, § 714.
  - national bank, garnishment of, effect, § 153.
  - obtaining appointment of as precluding resort to attachment, § 15.
  - property in possession of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 386, 407, 408.
  - surety on attachment bond, liability of receiver of, § 995.
- receptacles,
  - attachability of contents, § 172.
  - levy on contents, § 561.
- recognition of levy by claimant or debtor, effect of, § 556.
- reconvention in attachment or garnishment suit, of damages for wrongful attachment, § 1020.
- record in attachment suit,
  - admissibility of, in evidence in action for wrongful attachment, § 1035.
  - affidavit for attachment as part of, §§ 483, 488.
  - complaint and affidavit for attachment as part of, § 651.
- recording laws, see "filing or recording laws," supra.
- recoupment in attachment suit of damages for wrongful attachment, § 1020.
- redemption from judicial sale or foreclosure, right of, as subject to attachment or garnishment, § 219.
- redemption money in hands of officer, attachability or garnishability, § 399.
- reformation of instruments, priority over right to, of attachment, § 830.
- relation back of amendment in attachment proceedings,
  - generally, § 475.
  - of affidavit for attachment, § 489.
- release,
  - dissolution, vacation or release, supra.
- religious corporation,
  - property of, as subject to attachment, § 349.
- rem,
  - judgment in, see "in rem judgment," supra.
  - proceeding in, character of attachment or garnishment as, §§ 9 et seq.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- remainders,
  - contingent attachability, § 185.
  - vested, attachability, § 185.
- removal,
  - of attached property,
    - liability in case of failure to remove, § 550.
    - necessity for, § 540.
  - of cause, from state to Federal court,
    - generally, § 7.
    - appearance to request, effect of to confer jurisdiction, § 54.
    - attorneys' fees in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, recoverability as affected by, § 1014.
    - character of proceeding as in personam or in rem, as affected by, § 13.
    - jurisdiction acquired by federal court, § 60.
    - jurisdiction as affected by, § 46.
    - return, amendability of, as affected by removal, § 603.
  - of property as ground for attachment,
    - generally, §§ 467 et seq.
    - recitals as to, in affidavit sufficiency, § 499.
- rents,
  - subject of attachment or garnishment, § 189.
  - unearned, availability of remedy in case of, § 117.
- repeal of attachment or garnishment statute, effect of, § 22.
- replevin, recovery in, of damages for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1021.
- reply by garnishee to traverse of answer, § 762.
- reputation, injury to from wrongful attachment, pleading, § 1030.
- rescission, recovery after, of money paid, availability of attachment as remedy, § 97.
- residence,
  - creditor's, as affecting priority as between foreign receivership and attachment or garnishment, § 890.
  - forcible entry of, to levy attachment, § 558.
  - garnishment of debt as affected by, §§ 69 et seq.
  - nonresidence, supra.
  - service of process at, § 943.
- residents of state, jurisdiction of action against as based on attachment or garnishment, § 57.
- restitution, availability of remedy in action to enforce, §§ 97, 98.
- resulting trusts, beneficial interest as subject of attachment, § 372.
- retainer, executor's or administrator's right of as exercisable against attaching creditor of distributee, § 893.
- return,
  - of garnishment process, § 731.
  - of writ of attachment,
    - generally, §§ 590 et seq.
      - for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
    - estoppel of sureties on dissolution bond to raise objection to, § 922.
    - failure to file as affecting priority of attachment over subsequent attachments, § 840.
    - indorsement on, of levy on realty, § 571.
- reversal of judgment against principal defendant as affecting exoneration of garnishee satisfying judgment of garnishment, § 807.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- reversion,
  - contingent, attachability, § 186.
  - expectant on termination of lease as subject of attachment, § 244.
  - vested, attachability, § 185.
- revival, main action, § 939.
- rolling stock as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 345, 346.
- royalties from patent or copyright as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 216.
- safe deposit boxes,
  - attachability of contents, § 172.
  - garnishee's duty to disclose contents, § 757.
  - levy on contents, § 561.
- salary, see "wages and salaries," infra.
- sale, waiver of purchaser's fraud by obtaining attachment, § 15.
- sale or return, contract of, as affecting liability of property to attachment, § 223.
- sales act, provisions of, as affecting attachment, § 29.
- satisfaction,
  - attachment as, § 816.
  - of judgment by garnishee as defense to action by defendant against garnishee, §§ 804 et seq.
  - of judgment in main action as terminating garnishment, § 739.
- scholarship as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 217.
- school district,
  - employee of, garnishability of salary, § 327.
  - garnishability, § 146.
- scire facias against garnishee, §§ 752, 813.
- seals, writs of attachment, § 522.
- seaman's wages, garnishability, § 323.
- search and seizure, constitutional inhibition of, does not preclude levy on contents of deposit box, § 561.
- secret levy, validity, § 553.
- secured claims,
  - attachability or garnishability, § 204.
  - enforcement by attachment or garnishment, as affecting security, §§ 14, 104.
- security, see "bonds," supra.
- seizure of res as basis of jurisdiction, § 85.
- service of process,
  - amenability to, as test of residence or nonresidence, § 430.
  - appearance to secure removal of cause to federal court as dispensing with, § 13.
  - constructive service, see "substituted service," infra.
  - garnishee, service on, §§ 727 et seq.
  - garnishment as "process," § 4.
  - ignorance of, as limiting liability of garnishee, § 675.
  - main action, §§ 942 et seq.
  - notification of defendant by garnishee as excused in case of, § 682.
  - substituted service, infra.
  - waiver of defects in, § 735.
- set-off or counterclaim,
  - availability as defense to garnishee, §§ 786 et seq.
  - damages for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1020.
  - unliquidated, in favor of garnishee, effect of, § 199.
- sheriff, see "officer," supra.
- ships, attachability, § 167.
- show cause, rule to, as mode of obtaining dissolution of attachment, § 643.
- sickness, recovery for, in action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 1012.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- signature,
  - attachment affidavit, § 492.
  - return of writ,
    - generally, § 590.
    - amendability, § 603.
  - writs of attachment, § 522.
- simultaneous attachments, effect, § 839.
- simultaneous writs of attachment, § 510.
- situs of debt,
  - as affecting garnishment, § 67.
  - for purpose of garnishment, §§ 72, 73, 74, 77.
- slander, see "libel or slander," supra.
- soldier, status of as nonresident, § 441.
- soldiers' home, garnishability, § 148.
- solvency, false representations as to, as ground for attachment, or garnishment, §§ 461, 462.
- sovereignties,
  - availability of remedy to, § 126.
  - garnishability, §§ 141 et seq.
  - property of and debts due to, as subject of attachment, or garnishment, §§ 355 et seq.
- special appearance,
  - defects and irregularities not waived by,
    - in attachment, § 618.
    - in garnishment proceedings, § 737.
  - defendant in main action, §§ 50 et seq., 947 et seq.
  - garnishee, § 733.
  - jurisdiction over defendant, effect to confer, §§ 50 et seq.
- spendthrift trust, beneficial interest in, as subject of attachment, § 382.
- spouse, attachability of property of, for other's debts, § 179.
- state,
  - availability of remedy to, § 126.
  - garnishability, § 141.
  - levy of attachment outside of, § 530.
  - property of, as subject of attachment, § 357.
- state and Federal courts, conflict of jurisdiction, see "Federal courts," supra.
- statute of limitations, see "limitation of actions," supra.
- statutes,
  - constitutionality, §§ 317, 322, 656.
  - construction generally, §§ 22 et seq.
  - liability created by, availability of attachment or garnishment to enforce, §§ 91 et seq.
  - nonconformity of release or dissolution bonds with as affecting obligation, § 908.
  - ordinary meaning to be given to words used in, § 24.
  - repeal, effect of, § 22.
  - strict or liberal construction,
    - generally, § 26.
    - permitting levy on, corporate franchises and property, § 348.
    - subjecting negotiable paper to garnishment, § 268.
  - uniform laws, relevant provisions, §§ 27 et seq.
- statutory basis, § 18.
- statutory character, § 8.
- stay of action, see "continuance," supra.
- stock exchange, membership in, as subject of attachment, § 218.
- stockholder,
  - claim against corporation, enforceability by attachment, § 121.
  - corporate property,
    - attachability of, in action against, §§ 120, 338.

ATTACHMENT—continued.

- stockholder—continued.
  - priority of right under attachment as against other corporate creditors, § 834.
  - statutory liability, attachment or garnishment as remedy, § 92.
  - subscription, liability on, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 341.
- stock in corporation,
  - attachment or garnishment of, generally, §§ 351, 352.
  - jurisdiction to attach or garnish, § 80.
  - levy on, § 564.
  - pledgeor's interest in, as subject of attachment, § 353.
  - transfer of, as affecting subsequent attachment, § 873.
- stolen goods, see "theft," infra.
- stoppage in transitu, priority of right as against attachment, § 832.
- store, levy on personal property in, sufficiency, §§ 557, 558.
- strict construction, bonds in attachment proceedings, § 898.
- subrogation,
  - effect of garnishment as, § 821.
  - priority of right of, over lien of garnishment, § 829.
  - sureties on dissolution or release bond, right to, § 904.
- subsequently accruing indebtedness as covered by attachment or garnishment, § 193.
- substituted service,
  - in main action, § 944.
  - jurisdiction as resting on,
    - action against residents of state, § 57.
    - main action, § 56.
- successive attachments or garnishments,
  - injunctive relief against successive garnishments, § 717.
  - in same suit, §§ 510, 511.
  - validity and effect, §§ 391, 707.
  - wrongful attachment, cause of action for, growing out of, § 990.
- successive levies of attachments, § 533.
- sufferance, tenancy by, as subject of attachment, §§ 165, 242.
- "suit," attachment or garnishment proceeding as, § 7.
- summons, see "writ or process," infra.
- Sunday,
  - issuance of writ of attachment on, § 515.
  - levy made on, validity, § 532.
- supplemental affidavits for attachment, § 490.
- support, trust for, beneficial interest in as subject of attachment, § 381.
- surplus,
  - after satisfaction of execution as attachable or garnishable, §§ 384, 394.
  - from sale during pendency of atttachment, release to defendant, § 547.
  - of indebtedness over amount of garnishment, garnishee's duty as to, § 685.
  - on foreclosure, attachability, § 240.
- surrender of garnished property or debt to officer or into court, § 719.
- survival of garnishment proceedings, § 742.
- taking of goods by wrongdoer as defense to garnishee, § 774.
- teachers, salaries of, garnishability, § 330.
- tenant, see "landlord and tenant," supra.
- tender of debt as ground for dissolving attachment, § 642.
- termination of attachment or garnishment as condition of right of action for wrongful attachment or garnishment, § 988.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
territorial jurisdiction for levy of attachment, § 530.
theft, availability of remedy in case of claims arising from, § 110.
third persons,
  adverse claimants, supra.
  amendment of affidavit for attachment, right to object to, § 489.
  attachment of property of, liability of officer for, § 1002.
  bank deposits belonging to, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 256.
  beneficial interest in, not attachable or garnishable, § 373.
  equities of, protection of, against attachment, § 480.
  funds in hands of as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 196.
  garnishee's duty to, §§ 687 et seq.
  garnishment as defense to proceedings by, on garnished claim, § 702.
  judgment in garnishment conclusive as against, § 802.
  judgment in main action, conclusiveness as to, § 958.
  levy of attachment by service on, § 554.
  return, amendment of as affected by intervening rights of, § 606.
  wrongful attachment, right of action for, §§ 992, 1022.
timber, interest in, attachability, § 163.
time,
  application for dissolution of attachment, § 649.
  attack on validity of dissolution or release bond, § 910.
  fraudulent conveyances, as affecting availability as ground for attachment, § 451.
  intervention, § 977.
  levy of attachment,
    generally, § 532.
    return as evidence of, § 614.
  lien of attachment or garnishment, commencement and duration, §§ 825 et seq.
  notice to garnishee of assignment of debt garnished as affecting availability of assignment as defense to garnishee, § 780.
  priority among rival attachments and garnishments as affected by element of, §§ 839 et seq.
  property acquired by garnishee subsequent to garnishment as bound thereby, §§ 161 et seq.
  publication, service of process by in main action, § 945.
  return of writ of attachment, § 592.
  set-off or counterclaim, availability to garnishee as defense as affected by time element, § 787.
  validity of attachment or garnishment, time as of which determined, § 85.
  writ, issuance of, §§ 512 et seq.
  wrongful attachment, action for, time of accrual, § 988.
title of defendant to attached property, effect on, of attachment or garnishment, § 824.
  estoppel of sureties on forthcoming bonds to question, § 925.
  lack of,
    as defense available to receiptor, § 936.
    as ground for dissolving attachment, §§ 640, 641.
    proof of, in mitigation of damages in action on dissolution bonds, § 929.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
tontine insurance, rights under, garnishability, §§ 307 et seq.
tort,
  availability of remedy in action based on, §§ 106 et seq.
  claim based on, as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 206 et seq.
traffic balances as subject of garnishment, § 342.
transfer of note as affecting liability of garnished maker, § 695.
traversing,
  affidavit for attachment, §§ 502 et seq.
  disclosure, § 762.
treasury notes, attachability, § 171.
trespass,
  action for, recovery in, of damages for wrongful attachment or garnishment, §§ 1021, 1022.
  claim arising out of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 206.
trial,
  application for dissolution of attachment, § 653.
  bonds for dissolution or release, action on, § 930.
  garnishment proceedings, §§ 765 et seq.
  intervention, § 981.
  main action, § 953.
  wrongful attachment action, § 1038.
trick or artifice,
  employment of, in obtaining jurisdiction, effect, § 87.
  levy of attachment, § 531.
  wrongful attachment action based upon seizure of property by, § 991.
trover,
  action of for wrongful attachment, §§ 1021, 1022.
  officer's right to maintain for conversion of attached goods, § 931.
trust,
  bank deposit of trust funds as subject of attachment or garnishment by creditor of depositor, § 256.
  beneficial interests in as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 361 et seq.
  claim for breach of, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 206.
trustee,
  appointment of, in garnishment proceedings, § 720.
  estate or interest of, as subject to attachment for trustee's debts, § 384.
  garnishment of as affecting duty, § 661.
turnpike corporation,
  franchise of, attachability or garnishability, § 215.
  property of, as subject of attachment, § 344.
uncertain claims, availability of remedy in case of, § 111.
undertaking, see "bonds," supra.
United States,
  availability of remedy to, § 126.
  bond unnecessary on attachment by, § 896.
  debts due to as subject of attachment, § 356.
  garnishability, § 141.
  property of, as subject of attachment, § 356.
unliquidated claims as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 198, 199.
unliquidated damages, availability of remedy in action for, §§ 90, 106 et seq.
untruth, see "falsity," supra.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
use and occupation,
  claim for, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 206.
  statutory liability for, availability of remedy by attachment, § 91.
use of property, recovery for loss of, in action for wrongful attachment, § 1010.
usury,
  claim for, as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 209.
  garnishee's right to raise defense of, § 773.
vacation,
  attachment, see "dissolution, vacation, or release," supra.
  levy, § 535.
  writ, § 509.
value of attached property,
  appraisement, supra.
  in receipt for attached goods, § 931.
  omission of return to state, § 601.
variance, complaint and affidavit for attachment or garnishment, § 951.
vehicle in use by debtor, attachability, § 173.
vendor and purchaser, interests of under contract of sale as subject of attachment, §§ 226, 227.
  lien of vendor, priority of, as against attachment, § 832.
venue, § 43.
verdicts as subject of attachment or garnishment, § 211.
verification,
  answer of garnishee, § 755.
  application to dissolve attachment, § 646.
vessel, attachability, § 167.
vested estates and interests, attachability, §§ 184 et seq.
vested right, attachment or garnishment as creating, § 827.
view as essential to attachment,
  of personal property, § 552.
  of realty, § 570.
vindictive damages, see "exemplary damages," supra.
void attachment as affecting obligation of dissolution or release bonds, § 909.
void judgment or garnishment against garnishee, effect of, § 805.
void obligations as subject of attachment or garnishment, §§ 190 et seq.
wages and salaries,
  assignment of, as affecting attachment or garnishment, § 865.
  attachability or garnishability, §§ 316 et seq.
  foreign garnishment, satisfaction of judgment in as affecting liability of garnishee to defendant, § 811.
  garnishment of, as defense to proceeding by defendant, § 700.
  jurisdiction to garnish, § 82.
  notification of defendant by garnishee upon garnishment of, § 683.
waiver,
  defects and irregularities, supra.
  priority of lien created by attachment or garnishment, § 843.
warehousemen,
  attachment or garnishment of goods in hands of, § 33.
  garnishment of, obligation created by, § 668.
  lien of, priority of attachment as to, § 833.
warehousemen's act, provisions of as affecting attachment or garnishment, § 32.

ATTACHMENT—continued.
warehouse receipt,
  issuance of after attachment of property as affecting lien of attachment, § 826.
  priority of attachment as affected by issuance of, § 862.
warehouse receipts act, provisions of as affecting attachment or garnishment, § 33.
warrant of attachment,
  generally, §§ 504 et seq.
  defects and irregularities in, waiver of by appearance and answer, § 617.
watch worn by debtor, attachability, § 173 note.
wearing apparel, attachability, § 173.
who may invoke remedy,
  generally, §§ 123 et seq.
  for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
widow,
  dower, supra.
  interest of, in husband's estate as affected by attachment or garnishment, § 892.
will,
  legatee, attachment or garnishment of interest of, supra.
  right of election against, as subject of attachment, § 217.
withdrawal,
  of attachment, § 624.
  of garnishment, § 741.
wood, purchaser's right to cut under land contract requiring application of proceeds to purchase price, as subject of attachment, § 245.
words and phrases,
  domicil, § 427.
  factoring process, § 4.
  garnishee, § 4.
  garnishment, § 4.
  jurisdiction, § 40.
  probable cause, § 986.
  residence, § 427.
  trustee process, § 4.
writ or process,
  attachment,
    generally, §§ 504 et seq.
      for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
    defects or irregularities in,
      amendability of, § 629.
      as ground for dissolving attachment, § 633.
      waiver of by appearance and answer, § 617.
  evidence,
    admissibility in, in actions for wrongful or malicious attachment, § 1035.
  garnishment,
    amount named in as limiting liability of garnishee, § 672.
    attestation, § 727.
    caption, § 727.
    contents, § 728.
    form, § 728.
    sufficiency, § 728.
  main action,
    generally, §§ 941 et seq.
      for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
wrongdoer, taking of goods by, as defense to garnishee, § 774.
wrongful attachment,
  generally, §§ 984 et seq.
    for particular matters, see appropriate lines.
  mitigation of damages by giving forthcoming bond, duty as to, § 902.
wrongful death, see "death," supra.

ATTEMPTS

See Criminal Law.

ATTESTATION

See Acknowledgments, 1 Am. Jur. p. 311; Chattel Mortgages; Deeds; Mortgages; Wills.

ATTORNEY GENERAL

abatement of nuisances at suit of, §§ 8, 16.
actions, see "litigation," infra.
acts of congress in regard to, § 7.
advisory opinion, see "opinion," infra.
appointment of, § 4.
assistants, § 13.
  power of United States attorney general as to, § 7.
authority of, §§ 5 et seq.
  particular matters, see appropriate lines.
banks, actions concerning, § 19.
building and loan association, actions concerning, § 19.
carriers, see "railroads," infra.
charitable trusts, actions concerning, § 17.
charter, action for forfeiture of, § 19.
common law, powers and duties at, § 5.
compensation, § 15.
compromise, power as to, § 11.
conclusiveness of opinions of, § 14.
constitutional provisions, powers and duties under, § 6.
contest of will by, § 17.
corporations, actions concerning, §§ 19, 20.
county attorney, relation to, §§ 3, 21.
court not bound by opinions of, § 14.
criminal prosecution, § 21.
  power as to, §§ 8, 21.
decisions, see "opinions," infra.
definition, § 2.
department of justice, see "United States attorney general," infra.
discontinuance of suits by, § 11.
discretionary power as to litigation, § 10.
dismissal of action, § 11.
disqualification of, § 4.
distinction between prosecuting attorney and attorney general, § 3.
district attorney, relation to, §§ 3, 21.
duration of office, § 4.
duties of, §§ 5 et seq.
  particular matters, see appropriate lines.
election of, § 4.
eligibility for office of, § 4.
English attorney general,
  appointment of, § 4.
  nature of office, § 2.
  powers and duties of, § 5.
exemptions, see "immunity," infra.
Federal attorney general, see "United States attorney general," infra.
Federal statutes with regard to, § 7.
fees, § 15.
forfeiture of corporate charter, action for, § 19.
forfeiture of office, enforcement of, § 18.
health, see "public health," infra.
highways, suit to protect rights of public in, § 16.
immunity of state from suit, waiver of, § 11.
injunction at suit of, §§ 8 et seq., 16 et seq.
  abatement of nuisances, supra.
  against corporations, § 20.
  against public officer, § 18.
insurance companies, actions concerning, § 19.
intervention, power as to, §§ 5, 9.
  matters of practice, § 12.
intoxicating liquor, see "liquor law," infra.

ATTORNEY GENERAL—continued.
joinder of—
  charitable trust, actions affecting, § 17.
  in private suit, §§ 8, 12.
liquor law, enforcement of, § 21.
litigation, §§ 8 et seq.
  control over litigation, § 11.
  discretionary powers, § 10.
  disposition of litigation, § 11.
  matters of practice, § 12.
  power of United States attorney general as to, § 7.
  private or public character of litigation, § 9.
  waiver of state's immunity from suit, § 11.
  particular litigation, see appropriate lines.
malicious prosecution, advice of attorney general as defense to, § 14.
mandamus,
  against corporation, at suit of attorney general, § 20.
  against public officer, at suit of attorney general, § 18.
  relator, suit by, § 12.
  to compel bringing of suit by attorney general, § 10.
meaning of term, § 2.
monopoly, suit to restrain, §§ 8, 20.
nature of office, § 2.
navigable waters, suit to protect rights of public in, § 16.
nuisances, see "abatement of nuisances," supra.
officers, see "public officers," infra.
opinions of, § 14.
  United States attorney general, § 7.
  weight and effect of, § 14.
park, suit to protect rights of public in, § 16.
parties to action,
  charitable trust, actions affecting, § 17.
  joinder, supra.
  public officers, actions against, § 18.
pleading in action by, § 12.
powers of, §§ 5 et seq.
  particular matters, see appropriate lines.
practice matters in suits by, § 12.
prisons, power of United States attorney general as to, § 7.
private litigation, participation in, § 9.
privilege, see "immunity," supra.
probate proceedings, powers and duties as to, § 17.
prosecuting attorney, relation to, §§ 3, 21.
public health, enjoining acts injurious to, § 16.
public lands, suit to protect rights of public in, § 16.
public officers, actions against, § 18.
public utilities, actions concerning, §§ 19, 20.
qualifications of, § 4.
quo warranto at suit of,
  against corporations, § 19.
  against public officers, § 18.
  injunction or mandamus, § 20.
railroads, actions concerning, § 19.
relator, suit by, § 12.
removal of, § 4.
restraint of trade, suit to enjoin, §§ 8, 20.
salary, § 15.
scope of article, § 1.
settlement of suits by, § 11.
special counsel, assistance by, § 13.
state attorney general, §§ 8 et seq.
  particular matters, see appropriate lines.

ATTORNEY GENERAL—continued.

- statutes,
  - federal statutes, supra.
  - powers and duties under, § 6.
  - suits by attorney general, § 8.
- stipulations by, § 11.
- streets, suit to protect rights of public in, § 16.
- suits, see "litigation," supra.
- taxes, suits with respect to, § 8.
- tenure of office, § 4.
- trusts, see "charitable trusts," supra.
- United States attorney general, § 7.
  - appointment of, § 4.
  - nature of office of, § 2.
  - powers and duties of, § 7.
- waiver of state's immunity from suit, § 11.
- waters, see "navigable waters," supra.
- weight of opinions of, § 14.
- wills,
  - charitable trusts, supra.
  - contest of, § 17.
  - probate proceedings, supra.
  - suits affecting, § 17.

ATTORNEY IN FACT

See Agency.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

- abandonment of case, see "withdrawal from case," infra.
- abstracting title, negligence or mistake in, § 132.
- abusive conduct, disbarment or suspension for, § 265.
- acceptance,
  - of incompatible office, as terminating relation, § 41.
  - of payment, see "payment," infra.
- accomplishment of purpose as terminating relation, § 43.
- accounting,
  - as proper remedy against attorney, § 135.
  - division of compensation between partners, § 207.
- accounts, attorney's lien on, § 210.
- accrual of action for compensation, § 179.
- accused, assignment of counsel for, § 33.
- acquiring adverse interest, §§ 58 et seq.
  - good faith, effect of, § 62.
  - judicial sale, purchase at, § 60.
  - laches, effect of, § 63.
  - outstanding titles or claims, purchase of, § 59.
  - tax sale, purchase at, § 60.
  - termination of relation, effect of, § 61.
- acquittal, disbarment proceedings as affected by, § 283.
- action or suit,
  - accrual of action, supra.
  - admissions in, conclusiveness of, §§ 93, 94.
  - authority in conduct of, §§ 85 et seq.
  - cause of action, infra.
  - client's action, recovery of compensation in, § 183.
  - commencement of suit, infra.
  - compensation, recovery of, §§ 180 et seq.
  - continuing action, infra.
  - disbarment proceedings, nature of, § 287.
  - duty to client in connection with litigation, § 46.
  - exclusiveness of control of, § 86.
  - form of remedy, infra.
  - independent action, infra.
  - joinder, infra.
  - liability of attorney, enforcement of, §§ 135 et seq.
  - lien, enforcement of,
    - charging lien, §§ 242 et seq.
    - retaining lien, § 218.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.

- action or suit—continued.
  - limitation of actions, infra.
  - misappropriation, action for, §§ 135 et seq.
  - negligence in connection with, liability for, § 128.
  - original action, infra.
  - parties to action, infra.
  - pleading, infra.
  - reinstatement of action, infra.
  - special employment, authority in litigation distinguished from, § 68.
  - stipulations, infra.
  - summary proceedings, infra.
  - third persons' actions against attorney, §§ 147 et seq.
- additional compensation, §§ 161, 197.
- adjournment in disbarment proceedings, § 298.
- administration of justice, contract obstructing, § 56.
- administration of oath, § 28.
- admission by, §§ 93, 94.
- admission to practice, §§ 14 et seq.
  - age of applicant, § 20.
  - aliens, discrimination against, § 21.
  - application for, § 26.
  - citizenship requirement, § 21.
  - common law, admission at, § 10.
  - court's power as to, see "courts," infra.
  - disbarment or suspension, infra.
  - education requirements, § 24.
  - eligibility, §§ 19 et seq.
  - English system, § 15.
  - examination of applicants, § 27.
  - fraud in procuring, as ground for disbarment, § 259.
  - jurisdiction, § 15.
  - legislative power to prescribe qualifications, § 19.
  - misconduct before, as ground for disbarment or suspension, § 258.
  - moral character, § 23.
  - motion for, § 26.
  - nonresident attorney, §§ 16, 21.
  - oath, administration of, § 28.
  - procedure for, §§ 26 et seq.
  - qualifications, §§ 19 et seq.
  - racial qualifications, § 21.
  - residence, infra.
  - statutes, necessity of, § 10.
  - who may challenge right to practice, § 18.
  - women, § 22.
- advantage, see "taking advantage," infra.
- adverse interest,
  - acquiring adverse interest, supra.
  - representing conflicting interests, infra.
- adverse party,
  - agreement by, to pay attorney's fee, § 205.
  - liability of, for destroying attorney's lien, § 246.
  - lien on money in hands of, § 239.
  - recourse against, where suit settled, § 186.
  - representing interests of, see "representing conflicting interests," infra.
- advertising, disbarment or suspension for, § 275.
- advice,
  - as practice of law, § 3.
  - attorney's duty to client in giving, § 46.
- affidavit, liability in connection with, § 128.
- agent,
  - attorney as, §§ 6, 45, 67.
  - attorney's liability for acts of, § 134.
  - employment of counsel by, § 30.
- age of person applying for admission to bar, § 20.
- agreement, see "contract," infra.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
aliens, discrimination against, in admission to practice, § 21.
alimony,
  agreement for contingent fee in proceedings for, § 166.
  lien of attorney on, § 237.
  validity of contract in consideration of, § 54.
allegiance, duty of,
  acquiring adverse interest, supra.
  representing conflicting interests, infra.
allowance to, for expenses, § 206.
alteration of instruments by, authority as to, § 70.
ambulance chasing,
  attorney's liability on contract with layman to procure employment, § 152.
  disbarment or suspension for, § 274.
  recovery of compensation under contract procured by, § 177.
amicable action, authority as to, § 100.
another, see "other," infra.
answer, see "pleading," infra.
apology to court, disbarment or suspension as affected by, § 267.
appeal and error,
  appearance, questioning authority for, § 82.
  authority as to, §§ 106, 107.
  disbarment proceedings, § 300.
    as affected by appeal from conviction, § 282.
  employment of new attorney for purpose of, § 44.
  negligence in connection with, liability for, § 129.
  service of notice of, authority to accept, § 106.
appearance by, §§ 79 et seq.
  authority as to, §§ 79 et seq.
  burden of proving want of authority for, § 80.
  challenging authority to appear, § 82.
  common-law rules as to, § 10.
  corporation's right to appear without attorney, § 10.
  effect of unauthorized appearance, § 83.
  general appearance, infra.
  judgment based on unauthorized appearance, attack on, § 80.
  liability of attorney for unauthorized appearance, § 122.
  objection to appearance by unlicensed attorney, § 18.
  party's right to appear without attorney, § 10.
  presumption of authority for, §§ 80, 81.
  proof of authority as to, § 79.
  special appearance, infra.
  striking out, § 84.
  sufficiency of proof of want of authority for, § 81.
  unauthorized appearance, infra.
  waiver of objections to, §§ 80, 82.
  who may object to, § 82.
  withdrawal from case after, § 39.
  withdrawal of, § 84.
  written authority, necessity of, § 81.
application for admission to practice, § 26.
appointment of, see "assignment of counsel," infra.
arbitration, authority to submit case to, § 100.
arguments of counsel, excluded, § 1.
arrest,
  attorney's liability for, excluded, § 147.
  authority as to, § 89.
  body execution, infra.
  privilege from, § 11.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
assignment,
  attorney's lien as defeated by, § 233.
  authority to consent to, § 70.
  by client to attorney, compromise by client after, § 117.
    taking subject to equities, § 150.
    validity of, § 49.
  compensation, right to, § 157.
  equitable assignment, infra.
  of judgment,
    attorney's lien as defeated by, § 233.
    authority as to, § 104.
    to attorney, §§ 229, 233.
assignment of counsel by court, § 33.
  accused not bound to accept, § 10.
  compensation of attorney, § 157.
  to prosecute disbarment, right to compensation, § 157.
assistance of, see "assignment of counsel," supra.
assistant counsel, see "associate counsel," infra.
assistants, liability for acts of, § 134.
associate counsel,
  assignment of, for indigent accused, § 33.
  attorney's liability for acts of, § 134.
  attorney's liability to, § 151.
  authority to employ, § 73.
  division of compensation with, § 207.
  withdrawal from case because of employment of, § 40.
assumpsit, see "implied contract," infra.
attachment,
  authority as to, § 89.
  wrongful attachment, attorney's liability for, § 148.
attorney distinguished from counsel, § 5.
authority of, §§ 67 et seq.
  particular matters, see appropriate lines in this topic.
award covered by lien of, §§ 236, 237.
bad faith, see "good faith," infra.
balance, see "general balance," infra.
bank books, attorney's lien on, § 210.
bank, what constitutes practice of law by, § 3.
bar association,
  right of, to challenge attorney's right to practice, § 18.
  right to institute disbarment proceedings, § 290.
barristers distinguished from solicitors, § 5.
benefits,
  attorney gaining, in transactions with client, § 48.
  own benefit, infra.
  recovery by attorney for services from person benefited, § 155.
bequest to attorney, validity of, § 51.
bills and notes,
  attorney's compensation as affected by stipulation in, § 205.
  attorney's lien on, § 210.
  authority to take, in payment, § 69.
  collection of, see "collections," infra.
  indorsement, infra.
board, examination by, before admission to practice, § 27.
body execution, discharge of defendant taken on, § 113.
bona fide purchaser, attorney taking from client as, § 150.
bond,
  attorney's lien on, § 210.
  indemnity bonds, infra.
both parties, acting for, see "representing conflicting interests," infra.
breach of duties to client, disbarment or suspension for, § 268.
briefs, see "printing briefs," infra.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
burden of proof,
  actions against attorneys, § 139.
  appearance, want of authority for, § 80.
  application for certificate to practice, § 26.
  compensation, action for, §§ 188, 189.
  gift or bequest to attorney, validity of, § 51.
  presumption, infra.
  transactions between attorney and client, §§ 50, 188, 189.
business, sale of, § 9.
capacity to employ attorney, § 30.
care required of, §§ 47, 124, 125.
carelessness, see "negligence," infra.
cause of action,
  assignment of, as defeating attorney's lien, § 233.
  attorney's lien on, §§ 234, 235.
certificate of authority to practice law, § 14.
certificate of graduation necessary before admission to practice, § 24.
champerty,
  excluded, generally, § 1.
  agreement by attorney to pay costs and expenses, § 165.
  disbarment for making champertous contract, § 272.
  enforcement of agreement against attorney, § 121.
  negligence, defense to action for, § 124.
  recovery for services under quantum meruit, § 178.
change of compensation, § 161.
change of venue in proceedings for disbarment or suspension of, § 286.
changing attorneys, § 44.
character, see "moral character," infra.
character of relation, §§ 45 et seq.
charges in disbarment proceedings, § 291.
charging client with knowledge, see "imputed notice," infra.
charging lien, §§ 219 et seq.
  adverse party's liability for destroying, § 246.
  agreements creating lien, § 221.
  alimony proceedings, § 237.
  assignment as defeating, § 233.
  assignment of judgment or verdict to attorney, § 229.
  awards covered by, §§ 236, 237.
  basis of, § 220.
  cause of action, lien on, §§ 234, 235.
  commencement of, §§ 234, 235.
  compromise by client, §§ 232, 246, 247.
  continuing action in order to protect, § 247.
  costs as included in, § 222.
  death, effect of, § 231.
  decrees covered by, §§ 236, 237.
  defendant, attorney for, § 224.
  dismissal, vacation of, to protect lien, § 247.
  divorce proceedings, § 237.
  enforcement of, §§ 242 et seq.
  equity, enforcement in, § 244.
  estoppel to assert, § 230.
  expenses as covered by, § 222.
  extent of, § 222.
  funds, lien on, §§ 239, 240.
  general balance due attorney as covered by, § 223.
  independent action, enforcement in, § 245.
  judgment,
    judgments covered by lien, §§ 236, 237.
    lien as enforceable against, § 248.
    property taken by client in satisfaction of, § 241.
  limitation to services in suit where judgment had, § 223.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
charging lien—continued.
  loss of, §§ 230 et seq.
  money, lien on, §§ 239, 240.
  notice of, §§ 225, 226.
  original action, enforcement in, § 243.
  priorities, §§ 227 et seq.
  property recovered, lien on, § 238.
  public funds, lien on, § 240.
  purpose of, § 220.
  retaining lien distinguished from, § 208.
  satisfaction, vacation of, to protect lien, § 247.
  set-off and charging lien, priorities between, § 228.
  settlement by client, §§ 232, 246, 247.
  statutes giving lien on cause of action, § 235.
  statutory basis of, § 220.
  time of attaching, §§ 234, 235.
  title, suits involving, § 238.
  tort actions as covered by, §§ 234, 236.
  waiver of, §§ 230 et seq.
  what covered by, §§ 234 et seq.
  withdrawal from case, § 231.
children, see "juvenile offenders," infra.
citizenship requirements before admission to practice, § 21.
city counsel, see "municipal corporations," infra.
civil arrest, see "body execution," supra.
claims,
  against government,
    lien on money recovered, § 240.
    right to employ attorney to prosecute, § 55.
  collections, infra.
  priorities and preferences, infra.
  purchase of outstanding title, § 59.
clerk, see "law clerk," infra.
clerkship required before admission to practice, § 24.
collateral attack on judgment entered on unauthorized appearance, § 83.
collections,
  arrest, attorney's authority as to, § 89.
  authority as to, § 69.
  commencement of suit under authority as to, § 87.
  conversion of money collected, § 131.
  delegation of authority as to, §§ 72, 73.
  disbarment or suspension for misappropriation of, §§ 269 et seq.
  duty to client with respect to, § 46.
  interest on, attorney's liability for, § 142.
  liability in connection with, §§ 130, 131.
  lien of attorney, § 211.
  loss of money collected, § 131.
  negligence in, liability for, §§ 130, 131.
  practice of law, collection of claims as, § 3.
  remittance, infra.
  summary proceedings against attorney withholding, §§ 143 et seq.
  third person, attorney's liability to, § 147.
  trust relation in proceeds of, § 131.
collusion in compromise by client, § 119.
commencement,
  of authority, § 29.
  of lien, §§ 234, 235.
  of suit, authority as to, §§ 67, 87.
commerce, see "interstate commerce," infra.
commercial paper, see "bills and notes," supra.
committee,
  appointment of, in disbarment proceedings, § 296.
  examination by, before admission to practice, § 27.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
common law,
  attorney's right to compensation at, § 153.
  representation of suitors by attorneys at, § 10.
communications, see "privileged communications," infra.
compensation, §§ 153 et seq.
  abandonment of case, § 171.
  accrual of action for, § 179.
  action for, § 181.
  additional compensation, §§ 161, 197.
  adverse interests, attorney serving, § 170.
  agreement by adverse party to pay, § 205.
  associate counsel, attorney's liability to, § 151.
  bad faith as bar to, § 169.
  burden of proof in action for, §§ 188, 189.
  change of, § 161.
  change of attorney as affecting, § 44.
  charging lien, supra.
  clerks, attorney's liability to, § 151.
  client's action, recovery in, § 183.
  compromise and settlement, infra.
  construction of contract for, § 160.
  contingent fees, infra.
  continuing action to protect, attorney's right as to, §§ 184, 185.
  contracts, infra.
  costs, infra.
  damages in action for, §§ 195 et seq.
  death of attorney as affecting, §§ 175, 201.
  defenses to recovery of, §§ 168 et seq.
  disbarment or suspension, infra.
  disbursements, allowance for, § 206.
  discharge of, infra.
  dismissal of suit, effect of, §§ 173, 203.
  division of fees, infra.
  divorce action, right to continue, to protect fees, § 185.
  employment or retainer, infra.
  equitable remedy for, § 181.
  evidence of value of services, §§ 190 et seq.
  exorbitant fee, infra.
  expenses, right to, § 206.
  failure of performance, § 171.
  fairness of contract, burden of proof as to, § 189.
  fraud and deceit, infra.
  illegality of employment contract, §§ 176 et seq.
  implied contract, infra.
  incapacity of attorney, § 175.
  increase of, § 161.
  indigent, attorneys appointed for, § 157.
  interest on, § 199.
  invalidity of contract as affecting amount recovered, § 196.
  joinder in action for, § 187.
  judgment recovered, right to fees out of, § 183.
  law clerk, § 151.
  license as prerequisite to recovery of, § 156.
  lien for, see "lien," infra.
  limitation of actions, § 179.
  limitation of, by statute, § 200.
  marital actions, right to continue, to protect fees, § 185.
  matters affecting right to, §§ 168 et seq.
  measure of, §§ 195 et seq.
  negligence as bar to, § 169.
  nonpayment of, as cause for withdrawal from case, § 40.
  nonresident attorney, infra.
  paupers, attorneys appointed for, § 157.
  payment of compensation, infra.
  pensions, infra.
  performance, failure of, § 171.
  pleading in actions for, § 187.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
compensation—continued.
  presumptions as to, §§ 154, 155, 189.
  prevention of performance by client, § 172.
  proof of value of services, §§ 190 et seq.
  quantum meruit, see "implied contract," infra.
  questions for court and jury, § 194.
  recovery back, infra.
  remedies to obtain payment, §§ 180 et seq.
  retainer, see "employment or retainer," infra.
  retaining fee, § 158.
  retaining lien, infra.
  retention of, from funds in hand, § 180.
  right to compensation, §§ 153 et seq.
  settlement, see "compromise and settlement," infra.
  solicitation, contracts procured through, § 177.
  statute of limitations, § 179.
  statutory fees, § 206.
  statutory limitation on, § 200.
  substitution of attorneys as affecting, § 44.
  suit for, § 181.
  termination of relation by combined act of attorney and client, § 174.
  third person's liability for, § 155.
  trial in action for, § 194.
  unlicensed attorney's right to, § 156.
  value of services, proof of, §§ 190 et seq.
  variance in action for, § 193.
  withdrawal from case, § 171.
competency to employ attorney, § 30.
competition, contracts not to engage in, § 9.
complaint, see "pleading," infra.
completion of services, contract for compensation after, § 162.
compounding debt, authority as to, § 70.
compromise and settlement, §§ 116 et seq.
  adverse party, attorney's recourse against, §§ 186, 246.
  amount of compensation as affected by, § 204.
  authority as to, § 98.
  by client, generally, §§ 116 et seq.
  compensation as affected by, generally, § 173.
  contingent fee in case of, §§ 116, 204.
  estoppel of client to repudiate, § 99.
  fraud or collusion by client, § 119.
  lien of attorney, §§ 117, 232, 246, 247.
  ratification of, by client, § 99.
  release of debtor for less than full amount, § 69.
  right to continue action to protect fees, §§ 184, 185, 247.
  validity of client's agreement not to settle, § 54.
concealment by, in dealings with client, § 49.
conclusiveness,
  of admission by attorney, §§ 93, 94.
  of expert evidence as to value of services, § 192.
  of judgment in disbarment proceedings, § 299.
conditions imposed on right to practice law, § 14.
conditions precedent to action against, demand as, § 136.
confession of judgment by, § 101
confidential communication, see "privileged communications," infra.
confidential relation, see "fiduciary relations," infra.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.

- conflicting interests,
  - acquiring adverse interest, supra.
  - representing conflicting interests, infra.
- consent,
  - of attorney,
    - to assignment, § 70.
    - to compromise, §§ 116 et seq.
    - to judgment, § 101.
    - to opening of default judgment, § 106.
  - of both clients, to representation by same attorney, § 65.
  - of court, see "leave of court," infra.
- consideration,
  - good faith of attorney acquiring adverse interest as affected by, § 62.
  - necessity of, to support contract action by client against attorney, § 121.
- constitution, duty to uphold, § 7.
- constitutional law,
  - accused's right to try own cause, § 10.
  - cause of action, giving attorney lien on, § 235.
  - compensation, requiring attorney to serve without, § 157.
  - constitutional right to practice law, § 14.
  - delegation of power, infra.
  - disbarment, attorney not protected against, § 252.
  - discrimination in prescribing qualifications for admission to practice, § 21.
  - jury trial, infra.
  - oath required from attorney, § 28.
  - occupation tax imposed on attorney, § 12.
  - validity of contract to test constitutionality, § 56.
- construction of contract for compensation, § 160.
- construction of statute giving attorney lien on cause of action, § 235.
- consultation, relation of attorney and client as created by, § 31.
- contempt,
  - disbarment or suspension, ground for, §§ 264 et seq.
  - judgment of disbarment, violation of, § 299.
  - summary jurisdiction over attorneys, §§ 143 et seq.
  - unauthorized practice of law, §§ 17, 18.
- contingent fees, §§ 163 et seq.
  - adversary's agreement to pay fee as affecting recovery under, § 205.
  - alimony proceedings, § 166.
  - claim against government, prosecution of, § 55.
  - compromise by client, §§ 116, 204.
  - contracts for, §§ 163 et seq.
  - costs and expenses, agreement to pay, § 165.
  - damages in action for, §§ 195 et seq.
  - death of attorney, § 175.
  - death of client, § 37.
  - disbarment of attorney, § 175.
  - discharge of attorney, §§ 34, 36, 202.
  - dismissal of suit, § 118.
  - divorce suits, § 166.
  - equitable assignment, contingent fee, contract as, § 167.
  - implied contract, recovery under, § 198.
  - incapacity of attorney, § 175.
  - validity of contracts for, §§ 163, 164.
- continuance in disbarment proceedings, § 298.
- continuing action in order to protect fee or lien, §§ 184, 185, 247.
- contracts,
  - acquiring adverse interests, §§ 58 et seq.
  - adverse party's agreement to pay attorney's fee, § 205.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.

- contracts—continued.
  - between attorney and client, generally, §§ 48 et seq.
  - burden of proof as to contract with client, §§ 188, 189.
  - compensation, contract for, §§ 159 et seq.
    - see also other appropriate lines in this group.
  - conduct of litigation, authority as to agreement in, § 91.
  - consideration, supra.
  - constitutionality, validity of contract to test, § 56.
  - construction of contract, supra.
  - contingent fees, supra.
  - convict, contract to procure liberation of, § 57.
  - costs, attorney's agreement to pay, § 165.
  - crime, contract having effect of shielding or promoting, § 56.
  - disbarment for making contracts contrary to public policy, § 272.
  - divorce proceedings, contingent fee contracts in, § 166.
  - employment or retainer, infra.
  - existence of relation, contracts with client during, §§ 160, 161.
  - expenses, attorney's agreement to pay, § 165.
  - illegal contract, infra.
  - implied contract, infra.
  - increase of compensation, § 161.
  - liability of attorney on, §§ 121, 149.
  - lien, agreement for, § 221.
  - lien on, § 210.
  - lobbying contracts, § 55.
  - measure of compensation under, §§ 195 et seq.
  - obstructing justice, contract having effect of, § 56.
  - pardon, contract to procure, § 57.
  - presumptions as to contract with client, §§ 188, 189.
  - procuring employment for attorney, agreement as to, § 152.
  - public policy, infra.
  - recovery by attorney on, §§ 180 et seq.
  - restrictive covenants, § 9.
  - retaining fee, contract for, § 158.
  - sale of law business, § 9.
  - services contemplated by, § 197.
  - solicitation, recovery of compensation under contract procured by, § 177.
  - stipulation, infra.
  - subject-matter of retainer, contracts concerning, § 49.
  - termination of relation, contract with client after, §§ 52, 162.
  - validity of, see "validity," infra.
- control over litigation, exclusiveness of, § 86.
- conversion as ground for disbarment or suspension of, §§ 269 et seq.
- conveyances,
  - from client to attorney, validity of, § 49.
  - lien of attorney on, § 210.
  - negligence or mistake in, liability for, § 132.
- conveyancing as practice of law, § 3.
- convict, contract to procure liberation or pardon of, § 57.
- conviction of crime, disbarment or suspension for, §§ 279 et seq.
- corporation,
  - appearance by, without attorney, § 10.
  - dissolution of, as terminating relation of attorney and client, § 38.
  - ouster from franchise for unauthorized practice of law, § 17.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
corporation—continued.
  right to practice law, § 25.
  what constitutes practice of law by, § 3.
corporation counsel, see "city counsel," supra.
costs,
  excluded, generally, § 1.
  attorney's agreement to pay, § 165.
  attorney's liability for, § 149.
  attorney's right to, §§ 180, 206.
  charging lien as extending to, § 222.
  retention of, as part of compensation, §§ 180, 206.
counsel distinguished from, § 5.
counterclaim, see "set-off and counterclaim," infra.
county attorney, see "prosecuting attorney," infra.
county, recovery from, by attorney assigned to case by court, § 157.
courts,
  abuse of, disbarment or suspension for, § 265.
  admission to practice by, § 15.
  assignment of counsel, supra.
  criticism of, disbarment or suspension for, § 266.
  disbarment or suspension, infra.
  discretion of court, infra.
  duties of attorney to, § 7.
  examination by, before admission to practice, § 27.
  inferior court, infra.
  investigation by, into attorneys' conduct, § 250.
  jurisdiction, infra.
  leave of court, infra.
  obedience of, duty as to, § 7.
  officer of court, infra.
  other courts, infra.
  own motion, infra.
  power to regulate practice of law, § 2.
  proceedings before, upon admission to practice, § 26.
  qualifications of attorneys prescribed by, § 19.
  question for, see "questions of law and fact," infra.
  respect for, duty as to, § 7.
  summary jurisdiction over attorneys, §§ 143 et seq.
covenants, see "restrictive covenants," infra.
creation of relation of attorney and client, §§ 29 et seq.
criminal law,
  admissions of attorney, § 93.
  arrest, supra.
  assignment of counsel, supra.
  contracts having effect of shielding or promoting crime, § 56.
  conviction of crime, supra.
  defense counsel's right to withdraw and assist prosecutor, § 66.
  disbarment or suspension, ground for, §§ 279 et seq.
  disbarment proceedings as criminal or civil, § 287.
  necessity of representation by attorney, § 10.
  pardon, infra.
  pending prosecution, infra.
  prosecuting attorney, infra.
  unauthorized practice of law, § 17.
  validity of contract to assist in prosecution, § 54.
criminal syndicalism, disbarment or suspension for, § 280.
crimination, see "self-incrimination," infra.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
criticism of judicial acts, disbarment or suspension for, § 266.
custody of papers, liability in connection with, § 133.
custom as to retention of fees from funds in hand, § 180.
damages,
  action against attorney, § 142.
  compensation, action for, §§ 195 et seq.
  contingent fee, action for, §§ 195 et seq.
dealings between attorney and client, §§ 48 et seq.
  acquiring adverse interests, §§ 58 et seq.
  contracts generally, see "contracts," supra.
  illegal dealings, §§ 54 et seq.
death,
  of attorney,
    as terminating relation, § 41.
    charging lien as affected by, § 231.
    compensation as affected by, §§ 175, 201.
  of client, as terminating relation, § 37.
deceit, see "fraud and deceit," infra.
declaration, see "pleading," infra.
decree, see "judgment," infra.
deeds, see "conveyances," supra.
defamation, excluded, § 1.
default judgment, authority as to opening of, § 106.
defendant,
  adverse party, supra.
  lien of attorney for, § 224.
defenses,
  compensation, recovery of, §§ 168 et seq.
  laches, infra.
  negligence, action against attorney for, § 124.
definitions, see "words and phrases," infra.
degree of proof in disbarment proceedings, § 295.
delay, see "laches," infra.
delegation of power,
  by attorney, §§ 45, 72, 73.
  to municipality to tax attorneys, § 13.
demand as prerequisite to enforcement of liability of, § 136.
demurrer,
  attack on attorney's authority to appear, § 82.
  disbarment proceedings, § 292.
devise to attorney, validity of, § 51.
diploma necessary before admission to practice, § 24.
direction of verdict in disbarment proceedings, § 297.
directions, see "instructions," infra.
disabilities of relation, §§ 45 et seq.
disavowal of statements about court, disbarment or suspension as affected by, § 267.
disbarment or suspension of, §§ 249 et seq.
  abusive conduct, § 265.
  acquittal, effect of, § 283.
  adjournment in proceedings for, § 299.
  admissibility of evidence, § 294.
  admission to practice,
    admission in other state, § 256.
    fraud in procuring, § 259.
    misconduct before, § 258.
  advertising, § 275.
  answer in proceedings for, § 292.
  apology to court, effect of, § 267.
  appeal from conviction as affecting, § 282.
  appeal in proceedings for, § 300.
  bar association's right to commence proceedings for, § 290.
  change of venue in proceedings for, § 286.
  charges in proceedings for, § 291.
  civil or criminal proceedings, § 287.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
- disbarment or suspension of—continued.
  - client,
    - breach of duties owing to, § 268.
    - right of, to commence proceeding, § 290.
  - collections, conversion or misappropriation of, §§ 269 et seq.
  - committee, appointment of, § 296.
  - compensation of attorney,
    - attorneys appointed to prosecute disbarment, § 157.
    - disbarment as affecting, § 175.
  - conclusiveness of judgment, § 299.
  - contempt,
    - as ground for disbarment, §§ 264 et seq.
    - by violation of judgment of disbarment, § 299.
  - continuance in proceedings for, § 298.
  - conversion of client's property, §§ 269 et seq.
  - conviction of crime, §§ 279 et seq.
  - court,
    - discretion of, § 253.
    - institution of proceedings by, § 290.
    - misconduct toward, §§ 264 et seq.
    - power of, §§ 249, 251.
  - crime as ground for, §§ 279 et seq.
  - criminal or civil proceedings, § 287.
  - criminal syndicalism as ground for, § 280.
  - criticism of judicial acts, § 266.
  - defenses, § 271.
  - degree of proof, § 295.
  - delay in proceedings for, § 288.
  - demurrer in proceedings for, § 292.
  - direction of verdict, § 297.
  - disavowal of statements about court, effect of, § 267.
  - discretion of court, § 253.
  - disloyalty as ground for, § 280.
  - divorce litigation, advertising for, § 275.
  - effect of, §§ 254 et seq.
  - enforcement of judgment, § 299.
  - evidence, infra.
  - exorbitant fees, § 268.
  - fabricating papers or evidence, § 263.
  - failure to indict, effect of, § 283.
  - Federal court, infra.
  - former client, breach of duties owing to, § 268.
  - fraud in procuring admission, § 259.
  - grounds for, §§ 257 et seq.
  - hearing,
    - procedure on, §§ 296 et seq.
    - right to, § 289.
  - ignorance of law, § 268.
  - immorality, §§ 260, 276, 277.
  - indictment, necessity of, § 291.
  - inexperience as defense, § 271.
  - inquest,
    - procedure on, §§ 286 et seq.
    - right to, § 250.
  - insanity as defense, § 271.
  - intoxication as defense, § 271.
  - investigation,
    - court's power as to, § 250.
    - procedure on, §§ 286 et seq.
  - judge, infra.
  - judgment in proceedings for, § 299.
  - jurisdiction, § 251.
  - jury trial, § 297.
  - laches in proceedings for, § 288.
  - legislature, reinstatement by, § 301.
  - liability of attorney to, § 252.
  - limitation of actions, § 288.
  - malpractice as ground for, § 268.
  - mandamus, review by, § 300.
  - misappropriation of client's property, §§ 269 et seq.
  - misconduct in profession, generally, § 261.
  - mitigation, matters of, § 271.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
- disbarment or suspension of—continued.
  - moral turpitude, §§ 260, 276, 277.
    - crimes involving, § 279.
  - motive, effect of, § 261.
  - name, in whose name proceedings instituted, § 290.
  - nature of proceeding for, § 287.
  - negligence as ground for, § 268.
  - nol. pros., effect of, § 283.
  - notice, § 289.
  - obstructing justice, § 262.
  - old age as defense, § 271.
  - opportunity to be heard, § 289.
  - other courts, right to practice in, §§ 255, 256.
  - other state,
    - acts or convictions in, § 285.
    - right of disbarred or suspended attorney to practice in, § 256.
  - pardon, infra.
  - partnership, misappropriation by one member of, § 270.
  - pending prosecution, effect of, § 282.
  - personal vices, § 277.
  - perverting justice, § 262.
  - pleading in proceedings for, §§ 291, 292.
  - poverty as defense, § 271.
  - power of court as to, §§ 249, 251.
  - preliminary inquest, § 250.
  - presumptions in proceedings for, §§ 293 et seq.
  - procedure, §§ 286 et seq.
  - professional misconduct, generally, § 261.
  - professional relations, misconduct outside scope of, §§ 276 et seq.
  - prohibition, review by writ of, § 300.
  - prosecuting attorneys, infra.
  - public officers,
    - disbarment for misconduct in office, § 278.
    - eligibility for office after disbarment, § 254.
  - public policy, contracts contrary to, § 272.
  - reasonable doubt, proof beyond, § 295.
  - referee, appointment of, § 296.
  - reinstatement, § 301.
  - representing conflicting interests, § 268.
  - retraction of statements about courts, effect of, § 267.
  - review, § 300.
  - rioting as ground for, § 280.
  - rule to show cause, § 289.
  - sabotage as ground for, § 280.
  - self-incrimination, privilege as to, § 296.
  - service of process, § 289.
  - solicitation of business, § 274.
  - statute of limitations, § 288.
  - statutes as to grounds for, § 257.
  - sufficiency of evidence, § 295.
  - suppressing papers or evidence, § 263.
  - tampering with witnesses, § 263.
  - time within which proceedings must be instituted, § 288.
  - treason as ground for, § 280.
  - trial in proceedings for, §§ 296 et seq.
  - unethical conduct, §§ 273 et seq.
  - vices not affecting integrity, § 277.
  - weight of evidence, § 295.
  - who may commence proceedings for, § 290.
  - witnesses, right to confront, § 296.
  - writ of error, review by, § 300.
  - youth as defense, § 271.
- disbursements, see "expenses," infra.
- discharge of, §§ 34, 35, 36.
  - action for wrongful discharge, §§ 182, 202.
  - compensation as affected by, §§ 34, 172, 182, 202.
  - extent of recovery for, § 202.
  - imputed notice as affected by, § 74.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
discharge of—continued.
  necessity of notice, § 35.
  power coupled with an interest, § 36.
disclosure, attorney's duty of, § 49.
discontinuance, see "dismissal and discontinuance," infra.
discretion of court as to disbarment or suspension of, § 253.
discrimination against aliens in admission to practice, § 21.
disinheritance, validity of contract for services to avoid, § 54.
disloyalty, disbarment or suspension for, § 280.
dismissal and discontinuance,
  authority as to, § 97.
  client's right to dismiss suit, §§ 116 et seq.
  compensation in case of, §§ 173, 203.
  unauthorized appearance as ground for, § 82.
  vacation of, to protect attorney's lien, § 247.
disobedience of instructions, liability for, § 122.
dissolution of corporation or partnership, termination of relation by, § 38.
district attorney, see "prosecuting attorney," infra.
division of fees,
  between attorneys, § 207.
  with layman, validity of contract for, § 152.
divorce and separation, advertising for divorce litigation, § 275.
  alimony, supra.
  contingent fee, agreement for, § 166.
  continuing action for, after settlement, to protect fees, § 185.
  lien of attorney, § 237.
  recovery on quantum meruit where employment contract invalid, § 178.
  validity of contract to procure, § 54.
documents and papers,
  attorney's lien on, §§ 209 et seq.
  disbarment or suspension for fabricating or suppressing, § 263.
  drawing up papers, infra.
  liability for negligence or mistake in connection with, § 133.
domicil, see "residence," infra.
drafting papers, see "drawing up papers," infra.
drafts, see "bills and notes," supra.
drawing up papers,
  as practice of law, § 3.
  liability for negligence or mistake in, § 133.
  relation of attorney and client as created by, § 31.
drunkenness, see "intoxication," infra.
duress in increase of compensation, § 161.
duties,
  attaching to relation, §§ 45 et seq.
  of office, §§ 7, 8.
  public and private duty, § 8.
education necessary before admission to practice, § 24.
election to office of judge as terminating relation of attorney and client, § 41.
eligibility for admission to bar, §§ 19 et seq.
embezzlement, see "misappropriation," infra.
employee,
  attorney as, §§ 6, 45, 48.
  attorney's liability for acts of, § 134.
employment or retainer of, §§ 29 et seq.
  appearance authorized by, § 79.
  associate counsel, supra.
  authority under, see "authority," supra.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
employment or retainer of—continued.
  compensation,
    as dependent on retainer, §§ 154, 155.
    illegality of retainer as affecting, §§ 176 et seq.
  payment of, as essential element of retainer, § 31.
    retaining fee, § 158.
  former retainer, infra.
  general and special employment distinguished, § 68.
  general retainer, infra.
  necessity of retainer, § 29.
  other client, infra.
  procuring employment, liability to layman for, § 152.
  relation of attorney and client as dependent on, § 29.
  special retainer, infra.
  sufficiency of retainer, §§ 31, 32.
  transactions by attorney concerning subject-matter of, § 49.
  warrant of attorney, necessity of, § 32.
  who may employ, §§ 1, 30.
  writing, necessity of, § 32.
enforcement,
  judgment, in disbarment proceedings, § 299.
  of liability of attorney,
    by action, §§ 135 et seq.
    by summary proceeding, §§ 143 et seq.
  of lien,
    charging lien, §§ 242 et seq.
    retaining lien, § 218.
equitable assignment, contingent fee contract as, § 167.
equities against client, enforceability against attorney taking under client, § 150.
equity,
  attorney's liability, enforcement of, § 135.
  compensation, action for, § 181.
  lien of attorney as enforceable in, § 244.
error, see "appeal and error," supra.
error of judgment, attorney's liability for, § 126.
estoppel,
  of attorney, to assert lien, § 230.
  of client,
    by attorney's stipulation, §§ 91, 92.
    by failure to object to attorney's purchase at tax or judicial sale, § 60.
    to deny attorney's unauthorized act, § 71.
    to repudiate compromise, § 99.
ethics, see "unethical conduct," infra.
evidence,
  actions against attorneys, § 140.
  admissions by attorneys, §§ 93, 94.
  appearance, authority as to, §§ 79, 81.
  application for certificate to practice, § 26.
  disbarment or suspension for fabricating or suppressing, § 263.
  disbarment proceedings, evidence in, §§ 293 et seq.
  value of services, §§ 190 et seq.
  variance, infra.
exactions, see "illegal exactions," infra.
examination of applicant for admission to practice, § 27.
examination of title, negligence or mistake in, § 132.
examination of witnesses by party without aid of, § 10.
exclusiveness of control over litigation, § 86.
execution,
  attorney's right to control, §§ 108 et seq.
  body execution, supra.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.

- executor—continued.
  - employment of new attorney to take out, § 44.
  - return of, authority as to, § 109.
  - stay of, authority as to, § 110.
  - supplementary proceedings, control over, § 115.
  - wrongful execution, attorney's liability for, § 148.
- execution of indemnity bonds, authority as to, § 88.
- execution sale, see "judicial sale," infra.
- exemptions of office, § 11.
- exorbitant fee,
  - contingent fee contracts, § 164.
  - disbarment or suspension for, § 268.
  - recovery back of, § 123.
- expenses,
  - attorney's agreement to pay, § 165.
  - attorney's liability for, § 149.
  - attorney's lien as covering, § 222.
  - attorney's right to, § 206.
  - authority to incur, § 95.
- expert witnesses,
  - authority to incur expense for, § 95.
  - testimony by attorney as to value of services, §§ 191, 192.
- extension of time, authority as to, § 70.
- extra services, recovery for, § 197.
- fabricating papers or evidence, disbarment or suspension for, § 263.
- failure of performance, compensation as affected by, § 171.
- failure to indict, disbarment proceedings as affected by, § 283.
- fairness,
  - attorney acquiring adverse interests, § 62.
  - attorney's duty of, §§ 48 et seq.
  - contract with client, burden of proof as to, § 189.
  - liability to client for unfair dealings, § 123.
- Federal court,
  - disbarment by state court for acts in, and vice versa, § 285.
  - disbarred or suspended attorney's right to practice in, § 256.
  - United States supreme court, infra.
- fees, see "compensation," supra.
- female, see "women's right to practice law," infra.
- fiduciary relations, §§ 45 et seq.
  - acquiring adverse interests, supra.
  - compensation, contract for, §§ 159, 160, 161.
  - dealings between attorney and client, §§ 48 et seq.
  - representing conflicting interests, infra.
- final judgment, authority after, §§ 102 et seq.
- fine for unauthorized practice of law, § 17.
- firm, see "partnership," infra.
- foreclosure,
  - attorney's retaining lien, § 218.
  - purchase for client at, § 114.
- foreign judgment based on unauthorized appearance by, attack on, § 83.
- formalities, authority as to, § 90.
- former client, disbarment or suspension for breach of duties owing to, § 268.
- former retainer, representation of both parties as affected by, § 66.
- former trial, client as bound by counsel's acts on, § 85.
- form of remedy to enforce attorney's liability, § 135.
- fraud and deceit,
  - compensation, defense to recovery of, § 169.
  - compromise by client, §§ 119, 184.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.

- fraud and deceit—continued.
  - contingent fee contracts, § 164.
  - dealings between attorney and client, §§ 48 et seq.
  - disbarment or suspension for fraud in procuring admission, § 259.
  - imputation of attorney's fraud to client, § 77.
  - increase of compensation, § 161.
  - liability to client for, § 123.
  - right to continue action where client fraudulently settles, § 184.
  - transfers from client to attorney, § 49.
- frauds, statute of, see "statute of frauds," infra.
- friendly action, authority as to, § 100.
- funds,
  - lien on,
    - charging lien, §§ 239, 240.
    - retaining lien, §§ 209 et seq.
  - public funds, infra.
  - retention of fees from, § 180.
- gaining advantage over client, § 48.
- general and special employment distinguished, § 68.
- general appearance, authority to enter, § 79.
- general balance, attorney's lien as extending to, § 223.
- general lien, see "retaining lien," infra.
- general retainer,
  - admissions of attorney employed under, § 94.
  - authority under, §§ 68, 85.
  - imputed notice under, § 75.
- gifts,
  - gratuitous services, infra.
  - validity of gift to attorney, § 51.
- good faith,
  - attorney acquiring interest, § 62.
  - attorney's duty of, § 46.
  - compensation, bad faith as defense to recovery of, § 169.
  - compromise by client, § 119.
  - contingent fee contract, § 164.
- good will, sale of, § 9.
- government, see "claims," supra.
- governor, admission to practice by, § 15.
- graduation as necessary before admission to practice, § 24.
- gratuitous services,
  - duty of care in case of, § 47.
  - whether services are gratuitous, §§ 153 et seq.
- hearing, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
- ignorance of law, see "knowledge of law," infra.
- illegal contract between attorney and client, §§ 54 et seq.
  - compensation under, §§ 176 et seq.
  - enforceability against attorney, § 121.
  - measure of compensation in case of, § 196.
- illegal exactions, liability of attorney to client for, § 123.
- illegal transactions between attorney and client, §§ 54 et seq.
- immorality, disbarment or suspension for, §§ 260, 276, 277.
- implied authority, see "authority," supra.
- implied contract,
  - extent of recovery under, § 198.
  - invalidity of contract, recovery in case of, §§ 178, 196.
  - liability of attorney on, § 149.
  - services, contract for, generally, §§ 154, 181.
  - withdrawal from case, recovery for services after, § 171.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
implied contract—continued.
  wrongful discharge, recovery for services, § 182.
implied notice, §§ 74 et seq.
imputation,
  attorney's fraud, to client, § 77.
  attorney's negligence, to client, § 78.
  notice, to client, §§ 74 et seq.
imputed notice, §§ 74 et seq.
incapacity of attorney, compensation as affected by, § 175.
incidental expenses, authority to incur, § 95.
incompatible office, acceptance of, as terminating relation, § 41.
incompetent persons,
  assignment of counsel for, § 33.
  employment of attorney by, § 30.
  insanity as defense in disbarment proceedings, § 271.
inconsistency,
  acquiring adverse interests, supra.
  representing conflicting interests, infra.
increase of compensation, § 161.
incrimination, see "self-incrimination," infra.
incurring incidental expenses, authority as to, § 95.
indemnity, see "reimbursement," infra.
indemnity bonds, authority as to execution of, § 88.
independent action, enforcement of charging lien in, § 245.
indictment,
  failure to indict, supra.
  necessity of, in disbarment proceedings, § 291.
indigents, see "assignment of counsel," supra.
indorsement of paper received in payment, § 69.
inexperience as defense in disbarment proceedings, § 271.
inferior courts, disbarment or suspension in, § 255.
information, attorney's use of, to own advantage, § 48.
injunction against practice of law, §§ 17, 18.
injury, attorney's liability to client for, §§ 120 et seq.
inns of court, admission to practice by, § 15.
in pari delicto, attorney and client as, § 121.
inquest, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
insanity, see "incompetent persons," supra.
inspection, see "records," infra.
instructions,
  authority generally, see "authority," supra.
  liability for violation of, § 122.
insurance policy, attorney's lien on, § 210.
interest (in subject matter),
  acquiring adverse interest, supra.
  representing conflicting interests, post.
interest (on money),
  attorney's liability to client for, § 142.
  on fees, § 199.
interstate commerce, necessity of license as affected by, § 14.
intoxication as defense in disbarment proceedings, § 271.
invalid, see "illegal," supra.
investigation, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
investigation of title, negligence or mistake in, § 132.
investment, liability for negligence in, § 124.
joinder in action for compensation, § 187.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
judge,
  disbarment of, §§ 252, 278.
  disbarment or suspension for misconduct of toward, §§ 264 et seq.
  disqualification of, in disbarment proceedings, § 286.
  relation of attorney and client as terminated by acceptance of office of, § 41.
judgment,
  action on, to enforce attorney's lien, § 248.
  assignment of, see "assignment," supra.
  authority after, §§ 102 et seq.
  collection of, authority as to, § 103.
  compensation as enforceable out of judgment recovered, § 183.
  confession of judgment, supra.
  consent to, authority as to, § 101.
  default judgment, supra.
  disbarment proceedings, § 299.
  enforcement of, attorney's rights as lienor in, § 248.
  final judgment, supra.
  foreign judgment, supra.
  lien of, see "judgment lien," infra.
  lien on, see "charging lien," supra.
  modification of, authority as to, § 106.
  negligence in enforcement of, liability for, § 129.
  negligence of attorney as ground for relief against, § 78.
  opening of, authority as to, § 106.
  payment of, authority as to, § 112.
  proceeds of,
    authority as to, § 104.
    lien on, § 239.
  reinstatement of judgment, infra.
  release of, authority as to, § 105.
  review of, authority as to, § 106.
  sale of, authority as to, § 104.
  satisfaction of judgment, infra.
  termination of authority by, §§ 102 et seq.
  transfer of, authority as to, § 104.
  unauthorized appearance, judgment entered on, § 83.
  vacation of, authority as to, § 106.
judgment lien, authority to release, § 105.
judicial sale,
  attorney acquiring adverse interest by purchase at, § 60.
  attorney's authority as to, § 111.
  authority to purchase for client at, § 114.
jurisdiction,
  admission to practice, § 15.
  disbarment or suspension, § 251.
  summary jurisdiction over attorneys, §§ 143 et seq.
jury question, see "questions of law and fact," infra.
jury service, exemption of attorneys from, § 11.
jury trial,
  disbarment proceedings, § 297.
  summary proceedings against attorney, § 144.
justice, see "obstructing justice," infra.
juvenile offenders, assignment of counsel for, § 33.
keeping papers, liability in connection with, § 133.
knowledge and notice, see "notice and knowledge," infra.
knowledge of law,
  disbarment or suspension for ignorance of law, § 268.
  duty to client with respect to, § 47.
  liability for lack of, § 127.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.

- knowledge of law—continued.
  - necessary before admission to practice, § 24.
- laches,
  - attorney's acquisition of adverse interest, objection to, § 63.
  - client's right to relief against attorney, § 53.
  - disbarment proceedings, § 288.
- law clerk,
  - agreement by, not to engage in practice, § 9.
  - attorney's liability to, § 151.
  - clerkship required before admission to practice, § 24.
  - liability for acts of, § 134.
  - work done by, as practice of law, § 4.
- law, duty to uphold, § 7.
- lawful, see "illegal," supra.
- layman, liability to, for procuring employment, § 152.
- lease, attorney's lien on, § 210.
- leave of court,
  - substitution of attorneys, § 44.
  - withdrawal from case, § 39.
- legacy to attorney, validity of, § 51.
- legal, see "illegal," supra.
- legislature,
  - admission to practice by, § 15.
  - contract with view to influencing action of, § 55.
  - qualifications of attorneys prescribed by, § 19.
  - reinstatement of disbarred attorney by, § 301.
- letter, admission by attorney in, § 93.
- liability of,
  - to client, §§ 120 et seq.
  - to third persons, §§ 147 et seq.
- liability of client, §§ 74 et seq.
- libel and slander, excluded, § 1.
- license, § 14.
  - admission to practice, supra.
  - client as bound despite lack of, § 67.
  - compensation as affected by, § 156.
  - liability for practice without, § 17.
  - mandamus to compel issuance of, § 14.
  - nonresident attorneys, § 16.
  - occupation tax distinguished from, § 12.
  - revocation of, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
  - unlicensed attorney, infra.
  - unlicensed person, infra.
  - vested right as conferred by, § 252.
  - who may raise question of lack of, § 18.
- license tax on, §§ 12, 13.
- lien, attorney taking subject to, on transfer from client, § 150.
- lien of, §§ 208 et seq.
  - associate counsel, lien of, § 151.
  - charging lien, supra.
  - compromise or settlement, §§ 117, 232, 246, 247.
  - dismissal by client as affected by, § 118.
  - express agreement for, compromise by client as affected by, § 117.
  - kinds of, § 208.
  - retaining lien, infra.
  - retention of fees from funds in hand, § 180.
- lien of judgment, see "judgment lien," supra.
- limitation of actions,
  - action against attorney, § 137.
  - compensation, action for, § 179.
  - disbarment proceedings, § 288.
  - laches, supra.
  - liability for failure to prosecute claim within limitation period, § 130.
- litigation, see "action or suit," supra.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.

- lobbying contracts, § 55.
- loss,
  - of lien,
    - charging lien, §§ 230 et seq.
    - retaining lien, §§ 216, 217.
  - of possession, as affecting lien, § 217.
- maintenance, excluded, § 1.
- malicious prosecution, liability for, excluded, § 147.
- malpractice, see "negligence," infra.
- mandamus,
  - review by, in disbarment proceedings, § 300.
  - to compel issuance of license, § 14.
- master and servant, see "employees," supra.
- meaning of terms, see "words and phrases," infra.
- medium of payment, attorney's authority as to, § 69.
- misappropriation by,
  - action based on, §§ 135 et seq.
  - attorney's liability for, § 131.
  - burden of proof, § 139.
  - disbarment or suspension, ground for, §§ 269 et seq.
  - evidence, § 140.
  - remedies for, §§ 135 et seq.
  - summary proceedings as remedy for, §§ 143 et seq.
- misconduct,
  - of attorney, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
  - of client, as ground for withdrawal from case, § 40.
- mistake,
  - abstracting title, § 132.
  - contingent fee contracts, § 164.
  - conveyance, mistake in, § 132.
  - drafting of legal documents, § 133.
  - investigation of title, § 132.
  - negligence, infra.
- mistake of law, liability for, § 126.
- modification of judgment, authority as to, § 106.
- money, see "funds," supra.
- moral character, showing of, before admission to practice, § 23.
- moral turpitude, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
- mortgage,
  - acquiring adverse interest by purchase of, § 59.
  - acting for both mortgagor and mortgagee, § 65.
  - examining title, negligence or mistake in, § 132.
  - foreclosure, supra.
  - lien on, § 210.
- motion,
  - attack on attorney's authority to appear, § 82.
  - for admission to practice, § 26.
- motive,
  - disbarment or suspension as affected by, § 261.
  - good faith, supra.
- municipal corporations,
  - admission as binding on, § 93.
  - appeal, authority as to, § 107.
  - city counsel representing conflicting interests, § 64.
  - compromise by attorney as binding on, § 98.
  - consent judgment, authority to bind municipality by, § 101.
  - tax by, against attorneys, § 13.
- nature of office of, § 6.
- nature of relation, §§ 45 et seq.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued. necessity,
  of representation by attorney, § 10.
  of retainer, § 29.
  of writing, in employment of attorney, § 32.
negligence, §§ 124 et seq.
  abstracting title, § 132.
  action to enforce liability for, §§ 135 et seq.
  agent, acts of, § 134.
  assistant, acts of, § 134.
  burden of proof, § 139.
  clerk, acts of, § 134.
  client's liability for, § 78.
  client's right to relief against, § 78.
  collection of claims, § 130.
  compensation, effect on, § 169.
  conveyance, negligence in, § 132.
  damages, § 142.
  disbarment or suspension, ground for, § 268.
  drafting of legal documents, § 133.
  errors of judgment, § 126.
  evidence, § 140.
  ignorance of law, § 127.
  imputing attorney's negligence to client, § 78.
  investigation of title, § 132.
  judgment, enforcement of, § 129.
  litigation, negligence in, § 128.
  mistakes of law, § 126.
  partner, acts of, § 134.
  preserving legal documents, § 133.
  proximate cause, infra.
  questions of law and fact, § 141.
  reasonable care and skill, exercise of, § 47.
  recording legal documents, § 133.
  remedies of client, §§ 135 et seq.
  third persons, liability to, §§ 147 et seq.
  trial, § 141.
  what amounts to, § 125.
negotiable instruments, see "bills and notes," supra.
negroes, discrimination against, in admission to practice, § 21.
new attorney, employment of, § 44.
new trial, authority as to, § 106.
nol. pros., disbarment proceedings as affected by, § 283.
nonresident attorney,
  admission of, without examination, § 27.
  license, necessity of, § 16.
  privileges and exemptions of, § 11.
  recovery of compensation as affected by license, § 156.
  right to appear in suit, § 16.
nonsuit, authority as to, § 97.
notes, see "bills and notes," supra.
notice and knowledge,
  act of client, notice by attorney as, § 67.
  authority,
    as to notices, § 90.
    debtor as bound by notice of, § 69.
  disbarment proceedings, § 289.
  discharge, notice of, § 35.
  imputed notice, §§ 74 et seq.
  lien, notice of,
    charging lien, §§ 225, 226.
    retaining lien, § 214.
  withdrawal from case, § 39.
notices, authority as to, § 90.
oath, § 28.
  duties imposed by, §§ 7, 8.
obedience, attorney's duty of, § 46.
objections,
  authority as to waiver of, §§ 91, 92.
  to attorney's authority to appear, § 82.
obligations of relation, §§ 45 et seq.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
obstructing justice,
  disbarment or suspension for, § 262.
  validity of contract having effect of, § 56.
occupation tax on, §§ 12, 13.
office of,
  duties of, §§ 7, 8.
  nature of, § 6.
  privileges and exemptions of, § 11.
officer of court, attorney as, § 6.
officers, see "public officers," infra.
old age as defense in disbarment proceedings, § 271.
opening judgment, authority as to, § 106.
opening statement, admission by attorney in, § 93.
opinion evidence, see "expert witnesses," supra.
opportunity to be heard in disbarment proceedings, § 289.
oral admissions by, § 93.
oral contract, employment of attorney by, § 32.
order of court,
  charging lien as enforceable by, § 243.
  leave of court, supra.
  summary proceedings against attorneys, §§ 143 et seq.
original action, charging lien as enforceable in, § 243.
other client, imputed notice where knowledge acquired in employment of, § 76.
other courts, right of disbarred or suspended attorney to practice in, §§ 255, 256.
other party, see "adverse party," supra.
other state, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
other transactions, imputed notice in case of, § 75.
outbreak of war as terminating relation, § 42.
outstanding titles or claims, purchase of, § 59.
own attorney, acting as, § 10.
own benefit, attorney acting for, § 48.
  imputed notice where knowledge acquired in acting for, § 77.
own motion, court inquiring on, into authority for appearance, § 82.
papers, see "documents and papers," supra.
pardon,
  contract to procure, § 57.
  disbarment proceedings as affected by, § 284.
  reinstatement of disbarred attorney by, § 301.
pari delicto, attorney and client as in, § 121.
parol, see "oral," supra.
parties to action,
  adverse party, supra.
  attorney as, acting as own attorney, § 10.
  necessity of representation by attorney, § 10.
  representing both parties, see "representing conflicting interests," infra.
partnership,
  accounting for fees, § 207.
  compensation, division of, § 207.
  death of member of, client's rights as affected by, § 41.
  disbarment or suspension for misappropriation by member of, § 270.
  dissolution of, as terminating relation of attorney and client, § 38.
  employment or retainer of, § 31.
  imputing notice in case of notice to, § 74.
  liability for acts of partner, § 134.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
partnership—continued.
  necessity of license where associated with licensed partner, § 14.
  occupation tax against members of, § 12.
part payment, authority to accept, § 69.
pauper, see "assignment of counsel," supra.
payment,
  authority to receive, § 69.
    judgment, payment of, § 103.
  medium of payment, supra.
  of compensation,
    adverse party's agreement as to, § 205.
    nonpayment as cause for withdrawal from case, § 40.
    relation of attorney and client as dependent on, § 31.
    remedies to obtain payment, §§ 180 et seq.
  of judgment, authority as to, § 112.
  of occupation tax, enforcement of, § 12.
pending prosecution, disbarment or suspension as affected by, § 282.
pensions, statutory limitation of fees, § 200.
performance,
  failure of performance, supra.
  prevention of performance, infra.
personal vices, disbarment or suspension for, § 277.
perverting justice, disbarment or suspension for, § 262.
petition, see "pleading," infra.
pleading,
  action against attorney, § 138.
  attack on attorney's authority to appear, § 82.
  authority as to, § 90.
  compensation, action for, § 187.
  demurrer, supra.
  disbarment proceedings, §§ 291, 292.
  liability in connection with, § 128.
  variance, infra.
poor person, see "assignment of counsel," supra possession, see "loss of possession," supra.
poverty,
  as defense in disbarment proceedings, § 271.
  assignment of counsel, supra.
power coupled with an interest, discharge of attorney, § 36.
power of, §§ 67 et seq.
  particular matters, see appropriate lines in this topic.
power of attorney, see "warrant of attorney," infra.
practice of law,
  admission to practice, supra.
  license, supra.
  regulation of, § 2.
  right to practice, § 14.
  sale of practice, § 9.
  unauthorized practice, liability for, § 17.
  what constitutes, §§ 3, 4.
  who may challenge right to practice, § 18.
preferences, see "priorities and preferences," infra.
prejudice of client,
  acquiring adverse interests, supra.
  representing conflicting interests, infra.
preliminary inquest before disbarment or suspension of, § 250.
preparation of papers, see "drawing up papers," supra.
preserving documents, liability for negligence or mistake in, § 133.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
presumptions,
  appearance, supra.
  authority, presumption as to,
    appeal, authority as to, § 107.
    appearance, authority for, § 80.
    in case of special employment, § 68.
  burden of proof, supra.
  compensation, action for, § 189.
  confession of judgment by attorney, § 101.
  contract between attorney and client, §§ 188, 189.
  disbarment proceedings, § 293 et seq.
  gift or bequest to attorney, validity of, § 51.
  services, agreement to pay attorney for, §§ 154, 155.
  transfer from client to attorney, § 49.
prevention of performance by client as affecting compensation of, § 172.
previous, see "former," supra.
principal and agent, see "agent," supra.
principal and surety,
  attorney's authority to release surety, § 96.
  attorney's right to act as surety, excluded, § 1.
printing briefs, authority to incur expense for, § 95.
prior, see "former," supra.
priorities and preferences,
  attorney giving own claim preference over client's claim, § 64.
  attorney taking from client as subject to equities against client, § 150.
  lien of attorney,
    charging lien, §§ 227 et seq.
    retaining lien, § 215.
prisoner, see "convict," supra.
private duties, precedence of public duties over, § 8.
privilege, see "self-incrimination," infra.
privileged communications,
  excluded, generally, § 1.
  duty to client as to, § 46.
  imputed notice, privilege as rebutting, § 76.
privileges of office, § 11.
privilege tax on, §§ 12, 13.
procedure,
  actions against attorneys, §§ 135 et seq.
  admission to bar, §§ 26 et seq.
  authority in matters of, §§ 85 et seq.
  disbarment or suspension, § 286 et seq.
  summary proceedings against attorney, § 146.
proceeds of judgment,
  authority as to, § 104.
  lien on, § 239.
process, see "writ and process," infra.
procuring employment, see "solicitation of business," infra.
prohibition, review by, in disbarment proceedings, § 300.
promissory notes, see "bills and notes," supra.
proof, see "evidence," supra.
property, lien on, § 209 et seq.
prosecuting attorney,
  disbarment or suspension,
    as affecting status, § 254.
    misconduct in office, § 278.
  representing conflicting interests, § 64.
proximate cause in action against, burden of proving, § 139.
public duties, precedence of, § 8.
public funds, lien on, § 240.
public officer,
  attorney as, § 6.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
public officer—continued.
  disbarment for misconduct in office, § 278.
  eligibility to office after disbarment, § 254.
  incompatible office, supra.
public policy,
  acquiring adverse interests, §§ 58 et seq.
  compensation, contract for, § 159.
  contingent fee contract, § 163.
  contracts to obstruct justice or to shield or promote crime, § 56.
  convict, contract to procure liberation of, § 57.
  costs, agreement to pay, § 165.
  disbarment or suspension for making contracts contrary to, § 272.
  expenses, agreement to pay, § 165.
  lobbying contracts, § 55.
  pardon, contract to procure, § 57.
  recovery by client against attorney as affected by, § 121.
  transactions between attorney and client, §§ 54 et seq.
public records, see "records," infra.
punishment of, §§ 249 et seq.
  disbarment or suspension, supra.
purchase,
  dealings between attorney and client, § 48.
    taking subject to equities, § 150.
  for client, at judicial sale, § 114.
  of adverse interest, see "acquiring adverse interest," supra.
purpose, see "accomplishment of purpose," supra.
qualifications for admission to bar, §§ 19 et seq.
quantum meruit, see "implied contract," supra.
questions of law and fact,
  actions against attorney, § 141.
  compensation, action for, § 194.
  ratification of attorney's unauthorized act, § 71.
quo warranto, questioning right to practice, § 17.
race, admission to bar made dependent on, § 21.
ratification by client, § 71.
  compromise, ratification of, § 99.
  consent to judgment by attorney, § 101.
  purchase at tax or judicial sale, § 60.
reasonable care and skill, exercise of, § 47.
reasonable doubt, proof beyond, in disbarment proceedings, § 295.
receiver, appointment of,
  as terminating relation of attorney and client, § 38.
  authority to procure, § 115.
receiving payment, see "payment," supra.
records,
  lien, recording of,
    charging lien, §§ 225, 226.
    retaining lien, § 214.
  necessity of showing authority for inspection of, § 68.
  negligence or mistake in recording, § 133.
recovery back from,
  exorbitant fee, § 123.
  where employment illegal, § 121.
reference,
  authority as to, § 100.
  examination before admission to practice, § 27.
  in disbarment proceedings, § 296.
  summary proceedings against attorney, § 146.
regulation of practice of law, § 2.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
reimbursement for fees of, client's right to, from persons benefited, § 155.
reinstatement,
  of action, authority as to, § 97.
  of attorney, after disbarment, § 301.
  of judgment, in order to protect lien, § 247.
relation of attorney and client, contracts for compensation during existence of, §§ 160, 161.
  creation of, §§ 29 et seq.
  duties attaching to, §§ 45 et seq.
  fiduciary relation, supra.
  nature or character of, §§ 45 et seq.
  necessity of, to warrant summary proceedings against attorney, § 145.
  obligations and disabilities of, §§ 45 et seq.
release, authority as to, §§ 69, 96.
  attachment, release of, § 89. judgment, release of, § 105.
  release of client's debtor, § 69.
remedies,
  action or suit, supra.
  compensation, recovery of, §§ 180 et seq.
  enforcement of attorney's liability, §§ 135 et seq.
  lien, enforcement of, §§ 218, 242 et seq.
  third persons' remedies against attorneys, §§ 147 et seq.
remittance by,
  interest, liability for, § 142.
  liability for failure to remit, § 131.
  remedies for failure to remit, §§ 135 et seq.
  summary proceedings to enforce, §§ 143 et seq.
remittitur, authority as to, § 106.
representation by, necessity of, § 10.
representing conflicting interests, §§ 64 et seq.
  compensation as affected by, § 170.
  consent of clients, § 65.
  disbarment or suspension for, § 268.
  former retainer, effect of, § 66.
  imputed notice in case of, § 76.
  where interests are not adverse, § 65.
reputation, see "moral character," supra.
residence,
  admission without examination of attorneys taking up residence in state, § 27.
  nonresident attorney, supra.
  prerequisite to admission to practice, § 21.
resignation of, see "withdrawal from case," infra.
restrictions on right to practice, § 14.
restrictive covenants, § 9.
retainer, see "employment or retainer," supra.
retaining fee, § 158.
retaining lien, §§ 209 et seq.
  charging lien distinguished from, § 208.
  compensation covered by, § 213.
  enforcement of, § 218.
  loss of, §§ 216, 217.
  money collected, § 211.
  notice of, § 214.
  possession, loss of, § 217.
  priorities, § 215.
  property not affected by, § 212.
  property subject to, §§ 210 et seq.
  services covered by, § 213.
  waiver of, §§ 216, 217.
retention of fees from funds in hand, § 180.
retraction of statements about court, disbarment or suspension as affected by, § 267.
retraxit, authority as to, § 97.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
return of execution, authority as to, § 109.
review, see "appeal and error," supra.
revocation of license, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
right of action, see "cause of action," ante.
right to practice, § 14.
rioting, disbarment or suspension for, § 280.
rule to show cause in disbarment proceedings, § 289.
sabotage, disbarment or suspension for, § 280.
sale,
  acquiring adverse interests, supra.
  dealings between attorney and client, § 48.
  judgment, authority as to sale of, § 104.
  judicial sale, supra.
  practice, sale of, § 9.
  purchase, supra.
  restrictive covenants, § 9.
same attorney for both parties, see "representing conflicting interests," supra.
satisfaction of judgment.
  authority as to, § 112.
  lien on property taken by client in, § 241.
  vacation of, to protect attorney's lien, § 247.
schooling, see "education," supra.
scope of article, § 1.
secrets, duty as to, § 46.
securities, lien on, § 210.
self-incrimination, privilege as to, in disbarment proceedings, § 296.
separate transactions, imputed notice in case of, § 75.
servant, see "employee," supra.
service of process,
  authority to accept, §§ 87, 90.
  exemption of attorney from, § 11.
  in disbarment proceedings, § 289.
services,
  compensation for, see "compensation," supra.
  completion of services, supra.
  contract for, see "contracts," supra.
  implied contracts, supra.
  lien, services covered by, § 213.
  presumption of agreement to pay for, §§ 154, 155.
  proof of value of, §§ 190 et seq.
  third person's liability for, § 155.
  value of services, infra.
set-off,
  admission of validity of, § 94.
  lien in case of recovery on, § 224.
  own debt, against client's claim, § 69.
  priority between set-off and charging lien, § 228.
setting aside,
  admissions of attorney, § 94.
  judgment, authority as to, § 106.
  settlement or dismissal, to protect attorney's lien, § 247.
settlement, see "compromise and settlement," supra.
sex as affecting admission to practice, § 22.
sister state, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
skill required of, §§ 47, 124, 125.
slander, excluded, § 1.
solicitation of business,
  disbarment or suspension for, § 274.
  liability of attorney on contract for, § 152.
  recovery of compensation under contract procured through, § 177.
solicitors distinguished from barristers, § 5.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
special and general employment distinguished, § 68.
special appearance, general appearance under authority for, § 79.
special lien, see "charging lien," supra.
special retainer, authority under, § 68.
specific performance of contract to purchase business of, § 9.
splitting fee, see "division of fees," supra.
state,
  other state, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
  power to regulate practice of law, § 2.
  right to employ attorney to prosecute claim against, § 55.
state's attorney, see "prosecuting attorney," supra.
statute of frauds, employment of attorney as within, § 32.
statute of limitations, see "limitation of actions," supra.
statutes,
  cause of action, giving attorney lien on, § 235.
  charging liens, provisions as to, § 220.
  constitutional law, supra.
  disbarment or suspension, stating grounds for, § 257.
  fees, limitation on, § 200.
statutory fees, § 206.
stay of execution, authority as to, § 110.
stay where appearance unauthorized, § 83.
stenographic expense, authority to incur, § 95.
stipulations,
  admissions, §§ 93, 94.
  authority as to, § 91.
  compensation as affected by adversary's agreement to pay fees, § 205.
  limitation on power as to, § 92.
striking out appearance by, § 84.
study necessary before admission to practice, § 24.
substitution of attorneys, § 44.
suit, see "action or suit," supra.
summary proceedings, enforcement of attorney's liability by, §§ 143 et seq.
summons, see "writ and process," supra.
supplementary proceedings after judgment, control over, § 115.
suppressing papers or evidence, disbarment or suspension for, § 263.
Supreme Court, see "United States Supreme Court," infra.
surrender of client's right, authority as to, §§ 70, 96.
surrender of property as affecting lien of, § 217.
suspension, see "disbarment or suspension," supra.
syndicalism, see "criminal syndicalism," supra.
taking advantage of client, § 48.
tampering with witnesses, disbarment or suspension for, §§ 263, 265.
taxation,
  municipal taxation of attorney, § 13.
  occupation tax, §§ 12, 13.
tax sale, acquiring adverse interest by purchase at, § 60.
technical formalities, authority as to, § 90.
termination of relation, §§ 34 et seq.
  acceptance of incompatible office, § 41.
  accomplishment of purpose, § 43.
  acquisition of adverse interest as affected by, § 61.
  act of attorney, § 39.
  act of client, §§ 34, 35, 36.
  combined act of attorney and client, recovery of compensation, § 174.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
termination of relation—continued.
  contracts for compensation made after, § 162.
  death of attorney, § 41.
  death of client, § 37.
  discharge, supra.
  dissolution of corporation or partnership, § 38.
  judgment, authority after, §§ 102 et seq.
  outbreak of war, § 42.
  receiver, appointment of, § 38.
  representing other party after, § 66.
  transactions between attorney and client after, § 52.
third person,
  liability of attorney to, §§ 147 et seq.
  liability of, for attorney's services, § 155.
time,
  attaching of attorney's lien, §§ 234, 235.
  extension of time, supra.
title,
  lien of attorney in litigation involving, § 238.
  negligence or mistake in connection with, liability for, § 132.
  purchase of outstanding title, § 59.
torts,
  liability to client, §§ 120 et seq.
  liability to third persons, §§ 147 et seq.
  lien in tort action, §§ 234, 236.
  negligence, supra.
transactions concerning subject matter of retainer, § 49.
transfer of judgment, authority as to, § 104.
treason, disbarment or suspension for, § 280.
trespass by, client as liable for, § 67.
trial,
  action against attorney, § 141.
  authority in conduct of, §§ 85 et seq.
  compensation, action for, § 194.
  disbarment proceedings, § 296.
  duty to client at, § 46.
  former trial, supra.
  jury trial, supra.
  negligence in connection with, liability for, § 128.
trust,
  money collected, § 131.
  purchase by attorney at tax or judicial sale, § 60.
  services in connection with, as practice of law, § 3.
trust relations, see "fiduciary relations," supra.
unauthorized acts,
  attorney's liability for, § 122.
  ratification or estoppel to deny, § 71.
unauthorized appearance by,
  effect of, § 83.
  liability to client for, § 122.
unauthorized practice of law, liability for, § 17.
undue influence,
  contingent fee contracts, § 164.
  gift or bequest to attorney, § 51.
  transactions between attorney and client, § 49.
unethical conduct, disbarment or suspension for, §§ 273 et seq.
unfairness, see "fairness," supra.
United States, claim against, see "claims," supra.
United States Supreme Court,
  admission to bar of, § 20.
  disbarment from practice in, § 251.
unlawful, see "illegal," supra.
unlicensed attorney,
  practice of law by, § 14.
  right to compensation, § 156.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
usage, see "custom," supra.
vacation, see "setting aside," supra.
validity of contract,
  acquiring adverse interest, supra.
  compensation, contract for, §§ 159 et seq., 176 et seq.
  contingent fee contracts, § 163.
  convict, contract to procure liberation of, § 57.
  costs, attorney's agreement to pay, § 165.
  dealings between attorney and client, §§ 48 et seq., 54 et seq.
  expenses, attorney's agreement to pay, § 165.
  illegal contract, supra.
  increase of compensation, § 161.
  lobbying contracts, § 55.
  obstructing justice for shielding crime, contract having effect of, § 56.
  pardon, contract to procure, § 57.
  procuring employment for attorney, § 152.
  retaining fee, § 158.
validity of statute, see "constitutional law," supra.
validity of stipulations by, §§ 91, 92.
value of services,
  proof of, §§ 190 et seq.
  recovery for, see "implied contract," supra.
variance in action for compensation, § 193.
vendor and purchaser, see "purchase," supra.
venue, see "change of venue," supra.
verbal, see "oral," supra.
verdict, assignment of, to attorney, § 229.
verification of pleadings, authority as to, § 90.
vested rights, license as conferring, § 252.
vices not affecting integrity, disbarment or suspension for, § 277.
violation of authority or instructions, liability for, § 122.
voluntary discontinuance, authority as to, § 97.
voucher, lien on, § 210.
waiver,
  appearance, objection to, §§ 80, 82.
  assistance of counsel, waiver of, § 10.
  authority as to, generally, §§ 70, 91, 92.
  defects, irregularities, etc., § 90. judgment lien, waiver of, § 105.
  lien of attorney,
    charging lien, §§ 230 et seq.
    retaining lien, §§ 216, 217.
war as terminating relation of attorney and client, § 42.
warrant of attorney,
  employment of attorney by, § 32.
  necessity of showing, to sustain appearance, § 81.
warrants, attorney's lien on, § 210.
what constitutes practice of law, §§ 3, 4.
who may employ, § 30.
withdrawal from case, § 39.
  charging lien as affected by, § 231.
  compensation as affected by, § 171.
  taking employment on other side, § 66.
  what is sufficient cause for, § 40.
withdrawal of appearance by, § 84.
will in favor of, validity of, § 51.
witnesses,
  attorneys as,
    on question of value of services, §§ 190 et seq.
    withdrawal from case, § 40.
  disbarment or suspension for tampering with, § 263.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW—continued.
witnesses—continued.
  examination of witnesses, supra.
  expert witnesses, supra.
  right to confront, in disbarment proceedings, § 296.
women's right to practice law, § 22.
words and phrases,
  attorneys, § 5.
  attorneys of record, § 5.
  barristers, § 5.
  civil officer, § 6.
  counsel, § 5.
  of counsel, § 5.
  public officers, § 6.
  quasi judicial office, § 6.
  retainer, § 158.
  retaining fee, § 158.
  solicitors, § 5.
work and labor, see "implied contracts," supra.
writing,
  admissions of attorney, § 93.
  appearance, authority for, § 81.
  employment of attorney, § 32.
writ and process,
  authority as to, § 90.
  service of process, supra.
writ of error, see "appeal and error," supra.
wrongful discharge, see "discharge," supra.
wrongful execution or attachment, liability for, § 148.
youth as defense in disbarment proceedings, § 271.

ATTORNMENT

See Landlord and Tenant.

ATTRACTIVE NUISANCES

See Negligence.

AUCTIONS

acceptance, see "offer and acceptance," infra.
action or suit,
  by auctioneer, in own name, § 44.
  enforcement of sale, generally, § 43.
adjournment, auctioneer's authority as to, § 9.
advertisements, § 14.
  as offer, §§ 14, 17.
  conflict between printed and oral conditions, § 16.
  inclusion of terms of, by reference in memorandum, § 36.
  resale on default of buyer, § 45.
  terms and conditions in, §§ 15, 16.
agency,
  auctioneer as agent, §§ 8 et seq., 51.
    authority to sign memorandum, §§ 30 et seq.
  bidding by agent, §§ 18, 21.
agreement not to bid, § 27.
auctioneers, see appropriate lines in this topic.
authority of auctioneer, §§ 8 et seq.
  necessity of writing, § 33.
  rescission of contract, § 47.
  to make memorandum, §§ 30 et seq.
authority of clerk to sign memorandum, § 34.
best evidence of memorandum, § 37.
bids and bidding, §§ 17 et seq.
  agreements not to bid, § 27.
  by-bidding or puffing, infra.
  liability of auctioneer, § 54.
  secret bids, §§ 18, 21, 22.
  security for bids, §§ 38, 39.

AUCTIONS—continued.
bids and bidding—continued.
  stifling of competition, §§ 26, 27.
  who may bid, § 21.
bond required from auctioneer, § 7.
by-bidding or puffing, §§ 22 et seq.
  rescission of sale to by-bidder, § 47.
caveat emptor, § 46.
checks, auctioneer's authority to receive, §§ 9, 38, 40.
child's right to bid at, § 21.
chilling bidding, §§ 26, 27.
claims based on defects in property, § 46.
clerk,
  action against, for return of purchase money, § 57.
  authority to sign memorandum, § 34.
compensation of auctioneer, § 52.
  failure to obtain license, effect of, § 6.
  lien for, § 53.
  recovery from purchaser, § 53.
competition, stifling of, §§ 26, 27.
conditions, see "terms and conditions," infra.
conduct of sale, §§ 14 et seq.
conflict between printed and oral conditions, § 16.
constitutionality of regulations as to, §§ 4, 5.
contracts,
  contracts not to bid, § 27.
  statute of frauds, infra.
  see also other appropriate lines in this topic.
conversion, auctioneer's liability for, § 60.
counterclaim, see "set-off," post.
credit, sale on, §§ 9, 40.
criminal liability for failure to obtain license, § 6.
damages, § 50.
deceit, see "fraud and deceit," infra.
defects in property, claims based on, § 46.
definitions, see "words and phrases," infra.
delegation of authority by auctioneer, § 12.
delegation of power to municipalities, § 3.
delivery, § 42.
  passing of title as affected by, § 41.
deposit or earnest money, §§ 38, 39.
  action by auctioneer for, §§ 44, 53.
  auctioneer's liability as to, § 55.
  auctioneer's lien on, § 53.
  forfeiture of deposit, infra.
  return of deposit, infra.
deputies, auctioneer's right to employ, § 12.
description of parties in memorandum, § 35.
disbursements, allowance to auctioneers for, § 52.
discretion of auctioneer, §§ 9, 20.
discrimination in regulations as to, §§ 4, 5.
divisibility of contract under statute of frauds, § 29. drunken person's right to bid at, § 21.
duration of agency, § 11.
earnest money, see "deposit or earnest money," supra.
effect of sale, §§ 38 et seq.
election to rescind, § 49.
employment of assistants by auctioneer, § 12.
enforcement of sale, §§ 38 et seq.
entirety of contract under statute of frauds, § 29.
estoppel of auctioneer to deny seller's title, § 56.
evidence,
  memorandum, § 37.
  parol evidence, infra.
expenses, allowance to auctioneers for, § 52.
failure to obtain license, § 6.

AUCTIONS—continued.
fees, see "compensation," supra.
fictitious bidding, see "by-bidding or puffing," supra.
forfeiture of deposit, § 39.
  damages as affected by, § 50.
fraud and deceit,
  auctioneer's liability for, § 57.
  by-bidding or puffing, supra.
  owner's responsibility for, § 9.
  representations in advertisement, § 14.
  rescission for, see "rescission," infra.
  stifling of competition, §§ 26, 27.
frauds, statute of, see "statute of frauds," infra.
gavel, see "hammer," infra.
garnishment of auctioneer, § 54.
hammer, acceptance by fall of, §§ 17, 19.
historical summary, § 2.
incompetent person's right to bid at, § 21.
incorporation by reference in memorandum, § 36.
infant's right to bid at, § 21.
insolvent person's right to bid at, § 21.
interest as element of damages, § 50.
interest of auctioneer in purchase, § 13.
intoxicated person's right to bid at, § 21.
joint owner's right to bid at, § 21.
judicial sales, excluded, § 1.
laches in rescinding contract, § 49.
letter, bid by, § 18.
liabilities of auctioneer, §§ 51 et seq.
licenses, §§ 3 et seq.
lien of auctioneer, § 53.
lien of vendor, § 40.
lunatic's right to bid at, § 21.
meaning of terms, see "words and phrases," infra.
meeting of minds, § 17.
memorandum, §§ 28 et seq.
  auctioneer's authority as to, §§ 30 et seq.
    necessity that authority be written, § 33.
  auctioneer's liability for failure to make, § 56.
  clerk's authority as to, § 34.
  form and contents of, §§ 35, 36.
  inclusion, by reference, of terms in separate writings, § 36.
  proof of, § 37.
  revoking auctioneer's authority before memorandum signed, § 17.
minor's right to bid at, § 21.
misrepresentations, see "fraud and deceit," supra.
mistake,
  in memorandum, § 35.
  rescission for, § 48.
mortgaged property, auctioneer's liability for sale of, § 60.
municipal corporations, regulation by, §§ 3 et seq.
names of parties, necessity that memorandum show, § 35.
negligence, auctioneer's liability for, § 56.
night, regulation of auctions at, § 7.
notice of resale on default of buyer, § 45.
notice of sale, see "advertisement," supra.
nuisance, auction as, § 54.
offer and acceptance, §§ 17 et seq.
  advertisement as offer, §§ 14, 17.
  discretion of auctioneer, § 20.
officers, see "public officers," infra.
operation of sale, §§ 38 et seq.
oral, see "parol," post.
ordinance, regulation by, §§ 3 et seq.
other writing, see "separate writing," infra.
own name, suit by auctioneer in, § 44.

AUCTIONS—continued.
owner,
  auctioneer as, authority to sign memorandum, § 32.
  right of, to bid, § 21.
  true owner, infra.
parol and printed conditions, conflict between, § 16.
parol contract, see "statute of frauds," infra.
parol evidence,
  proof of memorandum, § 37.
  to modify printed terms, § 16.
  writings other than memorandum, § 36.
passing of title, § 41.
payment of purchase price, § 40.
  auctioneer's authority to receive, § 40.
  checks, supra.
penalty for failure to obtain license, § 6.
personal liability of auctioneer, §§ 51 et seq.
power, see "authority," supra.
presumption as to effect of by-bidding, § 23.
principal and agent, see "agency," supra.
printed and oral conditions, conflict between, § 16.
proof, see "evidence," supra.
public officer, auctioneer as, § 8.
puffing, see "by-bidding or puffing," supra.
purchase by auctioneer, §§ 13, 21.
purchase price,
  auctioneer's authority to receive, § 9.
  auctioneer's liability for, § 56.
  checks, supra.
  delivery as condition of suit for, § 42.
  deposit or earnest money, supra.
  payment of, § 40.
  terms and conditions, §§ 15, 16.
recovery back of deposits, § 39.
reference in memorandum to terms in other writings, § 36.
refusal of bid, § 20.
regulation of auctioneers, § 3.
removal of goods, § 42.
replevin from auctioneer, § 60.
resale on default of buyer, §§ 45, 50.
rescission, §§ 47 et seq.
  agreement not to bid as ground for, § 27.
  authority of auctioneer as to, §§ 9, 47.
  by-bidding as ground for, § 23.
  mistake as ground for, § 48.
  return of deposit, § 39.
  return of property, § 49.
  time for, § 49.
retraction of bid, § 17.
return of deposit, § 39.
  auctioneer's liability for, § 55.
return of property on rescission, § 49.
revocation of agency of auctioneer, §§ 11, 30.
rights of auctioneer, §§ 51 et seq.
sale, §§ 14 et seq.
  particular matters, see appropriate lines in this topic.
sacrifice,
  refusal to sell at, § 20.
  right to employ by-bidding to prevent, §§ 23, 25.
scope of article, § 1.
secret bids, §§ 18, 21, 22.
secret profits, auctioneer taking, §§ 52, 56.
security,
  for bid, §§ 38, 39.
  sale on credit, § 40.
separability of contract under statute of frauds, § 29.
separate writing, incorporation in memorandum of terms in, § 36.
set-off in suit by auctioneer, § 44.

AUCTIONS—continued.
setting aside, see "rescission," supra.
severability of contract under statute of frauds, § 29.
signature,
  auctioneer's authority as to, §§ 30 et seq.
  auctioneer's liability as affected by manner of, § 59.
  to memorandum, sufficiency of, § 35.
specific performance, § 43.
stakeholder, auctioneer as, § 55.
statute of frauds, §§ 28 et seq.
  authority required to be in writing, § 8.
  entire and divisible contracts, § 29.
  memorandum, supra.
statutes, regulation by, §§ 3 et seq.
statutory fees of auctioneer, § 52.
stifling of competition, §§ 26, 27.
suit, see "action or suit," supra.
suppressing bidding, §§ 26, 27.
tax on auctioneers, § 5.
tender of property on rescission, § 49.
termination of agency, § 11.
  authority to sign memorandum, § 31.
terms and conditions, §§ 15, 16.
  necessity that memorandum show, § 35.
time for rescission, § 49.
title,
  estoppel to deny, see "estoppel," supra.
  passing of, § 41.
  warranty of, § 46.
trover, auctioneer's liability in, § 60.
true owner, auctioneer's liability to, § 60.
undisclosed principal, liability of auctioneer, § 58.
unfair competition, §§ 26, 27.
validity of regulations as to, §§ 4, 5.
validity of sale, §§ 14 et seq.
vendor's lien, § 40.
verbal, see "parol," supra.
warehouseman, auctioneer's liability as, § 54.
warranties, §§ 10, 46.
  auctioneer's liability on, §§ 57, 58.
  representations in advertisement, § 14.
  warranty of title, § 46.
withdrawal of bid, § 17.
withdrawal of property from sale, § 17.
words and phrases,
  approved security, § 40.
  auctioneer, § 2.
  auctions, § 2.
  deposit, § 38.
  Dutch auction, § 2.
  puffer, § 22.
written authority, necessity of, § 33.

AUDITA QUERELA

definition of, § 1.
general nature of, § 1.
joinder of parties, § 4.
legal representatives, action against, § 4.
modern practice, § 5.
parties to proceedings, § 4.
res judicata, § 1.
when available, § 2.
when not available, § 3.

AUDITORS

See Certified Public Accountants.

AUTOMOBILE FILLING STATION

See Gasoline Filling Stations.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

See Automobiles.

AUTOMOBILES

abatement of actions, § 582.
ability to stop, see "range of lights," infra.
abutting owners,
  right to control parking, § 59.
accelerator,
  defective,
    liability to guest, § 235.
accessory to homicide, lack of intent as defense, § 794.
accident,
  knowledge of, as affecting duty to stop, § 781.
  report of accident, infra.
  stopping after accident, infra.
actions, §§ 579 et seq.
  conditions precedent to, § 583.
  cross-actions, § 603.
  defenses, §§ 586, 587.
  findings, § 743.
  form of, § 580.
  instructions to jury, infra.
  joinder of, § 584.
  judgments, § 743.
  jurisdiction, § 588.
  limitation of actions, § 581.
  nature of, § 580.
  new trial, § 744.
  parties to action, §§ 592 et seq.
  pleading, §§ 596 et seq.
  splitting causes of action, § 585.
  trial, infra.
  venue, § 588.
  verdict, § 743.
address, duty to give, after accident, § 783.
admissibility of evidence, see "evidence," infra.
admissions, §§ 636 et seq.
  criminal prosecution, § 823.
  of agent, § 638.
  res gestæ, infra.
  silence, admission by, § 637.
  to prove negligence, § 617.
ad valorem taxes,
  limitations on, § 119.
affidavit of defense, § 602.
affirmative defenses,
  burden of proof as to, § 613.
  pleading of, § 602.
aged persons,
  contributory negligence of, § 467.
age, evidence of, § 620.
agent, see "principal and agent," infra.
aggravated assault, §§ 764, 765.
agriculture,
  exemption of cars engaged in, from licensing and registration, § 108.
aiding motorists,
  liability of master where employee furnishes aid, § 381.
allegations,
  in actions involving automobiles, §§ 596 et seq.
  in indictment or information, §§ 812 et seq.
ambulances,
  exemption from regulations, § 89.
    speed regulations, § 40.
  right of way at intersections, § 294.
    care required, § 298.
amendment, adding new parties by, § 592.
amount of license fees and taxes, § 127.
  graduated fees, see "graduated license fees and taxes," infra.
  under police power, § 128.
  under power of taxation, § 129.
animals on highway,
  care required toward, § 265.
  horses, infra.
  negligence in not discovering, § 168.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- answer in actions involving, § 602.
- anticipating presence of others,
  - at street corners, § 168.
  - duty to, § 168.
  - on highways, § 168.
  - on private lanes, § 168.
  - pedestrians, § 168.
  - when car traveling on wrong side of road, § 168.
- appeal and error, § 744.
  - reversible error, infra.
- arguments of counsel,
  - harmless error in, § 744.
  - showing carrying of liability insurance, § 666.
- arrest, attempt to elude, as excuse for speed, § 806.
- arterial or stop streets and highways,
  - care on entering, § 300.
  - effect of failure to comply with statute or ordinance, § 304.
  - hard-surface roads,
    - preference of traffic on, over traffic on intersecting unpaved roads, § 300.
  - how preference created, § 300.
  - regulations as to stopping at, § 65.
  - rights and duties of driver on favored street or highway, § 302.
    - assumption that other driver will yield right of way, § 302.
  - rights and duties of driver on unfavored street or highway, § 303.
    - duty to stop, § 303.
      - at what point required, § 303.
  - what streets are arterial or stop streets, § 300.
  - when statute or ordinance comes into operation, § 301.
- asleep, see "driving while asleep," infra.
- assault and battery, §§ 763 et seq.
  - aggravated assault, §§ 764, 765.
  - criminal liability for. §§ 763 et seq.
  - drunkenness as defense in prosecution for, § 765.
  - evidence in prosecution for, § 829.
  - indictment and information, § 812.
  - negligent operation as, §§ 763, 764.
- assistance, duty to render, after accident, § 784.
- associations, in what name car of registered, § 103.
- atmospheric conditions,
  - effect upon sufficiency of lights, § 32.
  - evidence of, § 629.
  - jury questions, §§ 699, 725.
  - obscuring view,
    - care required, § 272.
- attempt at crime,
  - driving while intoxicated, § 771.
  - larceny, § 798.
- attorneys, see "arguments of counsel," supra.
- attractive nuisance, automobile as, §§ 13, 247.
- authority,
  - burden of proof as to, § 615.
  - jury questions, § 672.
  - presumption of, § 612.
  - scope of employment, infra.
  - sufficiency of proof of, § 660.
- automobile,
  - as carriage, § 4.
  - as vehicle, § 3.
  - as wagon, § 4.
  - term defined, § 3.
- averments, see "allegations," supra.
- axles, defective,
  - liability for injuries, § 254.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- backing, § 328.
  - across sidewalk, § 332.
  - against prospective street car passenger, § 219.
  - at cab stand, § 332.
  - away from gasoline station, § 332.
  - care required, § 328.
  - contributory negligence in, § 434.
  - delivery trucks, § 332.
  - in or out of garage, driveway or alley, care required, § 332.
  - in turning around, § 332.
  - jury questions, §§ 328, 434, 687, 718.
  - liability for negligence,
    - must be proximate cause of injury, § 328.
  - lookout, § 330.
  - near intersections, § 332.
  - near street cars, § 332.
  - on right hand side of street,
    - care required, § 329.
  - on wrong side of street,
    - lookout required, § 330.
  - out of parking place, § 332.
  - road truck, § 332.
  - signaling, § 331.
    - effect of violation of statute, § 331.
    - failure to signal as contributory negligence. § 434.
- bailment,
  - degree of proof to show bailor's knowledge of defect, § 655.
  - imputing bailee's negligence to bailor, § 493.
- bar of judgments, § 743.
- beginners,
  - operation of car by, § 151.
- bicycle,
  - as including motorcycle, § 5.
- bicycle riders,
  - approaching intersections,
    - failure to look for traffic as contributory negligence, § 184.
  - care in crossing in front of automobile, § 184.
  - contributory negligence of, § 440.
  - duties of, § 184.
  - duty of automobile drivers toward, § 184.
  - injury to,
    - jury questions, §§ 184, 681, 703.
  - riding behind truck which obscures view as negligence, § 184.
    - turning into path of oncoming automobile when truck stops suddenly, § 184.
- blinding lights,
  - care required in proceeding toward, § 270.
    - effect of fault of other driver in not dimming, § 270.
  - criminal liability for use of, § 778.
  - driving when blinded by, as negligence, § 205.
    - as contributory negligence, § 429.
    - as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  - jury questions, §§ 697, 726.
  - regulations as to, § 30.
- blindness,
  - in one eye as disqualifying operator, § 178.
- blind pedestrians,
  - duty of automobilist toward. § 188.
- blind persons,
  - alighting from street car,
    - duty of motorist toward, § 217.
  - contributory negligence of, § 465.
- blowing horn, see "signals and warnings," infra.
- blow-outs,
  - judicial notice as to, § 604.
  - res ipsa loquitur, §§ 607, 608.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
boy, see "children," infra.
brakes,
  condition of,
    jury questions as to, § 695.
  defective,
    as contributory negligence, § 428.
    liability for injuries,
      in emergencies, § 252.
      necessity of proximate cause, § 252.
    liability of owner, § 252.
    liability to guest, § 235.
  evidence as to, § 631.
  expert evidence as to, § 653.
  failure to function,
    conclusiveness as to negligence, § 252.
  invading province of jury by instruction as to, § 733.
  locking as negligence toward guest, § 233.
  presumptions as to, § 605.
  setting when parking car, § 338.
  sufficiency of, § 252.
  testing, see "testing equipment," infra.
  violation of law, infra.
bridges,
  restrictions as to use, § 10.
brother,
  as member of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
brother-in-law,
  as member of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
built-up territory, indefiniteness of statute as to traffic in, § 807.
burden of proof, §§ 613 et seq.
  as to value, in action on insurance policy, § 754.
  criminal prosecution, § 822.
  proof sufficient to discharge, § 655.
bus, see "motor transportation companies," infra.
business portion of municipalities,
  speed regulations in, § 43.
busy streets, indefiniteness of statutes as to speed on, § 807.
bystander's statements, as part of res gestæ, § 642.
cab stands,
  delegation of power as to designation, § 61.
  right of abutting owner to control, § 59.
care,
  instructions to jury as to, §§ 673 et seq., 735, 739.
  measure of care, infra.
  opinion evidence as to, § 650.
care required as to particular matters, § 250.
  chains, § 274.
  equipment, infra.
  speed, infra.
care required in particular situations, §§ 264 et seq.
  animals on highway, § 265.
  atmospheric conditions, supra.
  backing, § 328.
    see also "backing," supra.
  blinding lights, supra.
  curves and hills, infra.
  dust obstructing view, § 272.
  fog, supra.
  frightening horses, see "horses," infra.
  intersections, infra.
  measure of care, infra.
  meeting and passing, infra.
  motorcyclist, toward horses, § 266.
  noises frightening horses, § 267.
  parking, infra.
  passing, infra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
care required in particular situations—continued.
  racing, § 268.
  railroad crossings, infra.
  rain obstructing view, § 272.
  right of way, infra.
  skidding, infra.
  smoke obstructing view, § 272.
  snow obstructing view, § 272.
  stopping, infra.
  street cars, infra.
  towing cars, § 343.
  traffic rules, right and duty to violate, § 322.
  traffic signals, infra.
  turning, infra.
  vehicles proceeding in same direction, § 280.
  vision obstructed, § 269.
  windshield obstructed, § 271.
carriage,
  defined, § 6.
carriers, see "motor transportation companies," infra.
carrying liability insurance, evidence, arguments, etc., tending to show, §§ 622, 666.
case, see "trespass on case," infra.
cause,
  intervening cause, infra.
  proximate cause, infra.
caution as to danger, evidence of, § 624.
certainty, see "indefiniteness," infra.
chain of events,
  liability of one starting, § 164.
chains,
  failure to use, as negligence where car skids, § 274.
changing numbers on, criminal liability for, § 800.
chattel mortgages,
  discussion of excluded, § 2.
  on insured property, see various forms of insurance.
  pleading and proof as to value, in action on insurance policy, § 754.
chauffeurs, see "operators," infra.
child,
  liability of parent for negligence of, § 360.
    see also "family purpose doctrine," infra.
    when child is agent, § 361.
  presumption, when car driven by, § 612.
children,
  age of operator, see "operators," infra.
  alighting from or boarding street car, contributory negligence of, § 473.
  boy helper on milk wagon,
    as invitee, § 232.
  breaking away from custodian and darting in front of car, § 199.
  bridge, injury in crossing, § 199.
  coasting along road,
    contributory negligence of, § 472.
    liability of motorist, § 249.
  coming from behind or around vehicle, § 199.
  contributory negligence of, § 470.
  crossing street,
    jury questions, § 711.
    measure of care required, § 199.
  crowds and groups, injury to children in, § 200.
  darting or stepping into path of car, § 198.
    application to factual situations, § 199.
    contributory negligence of, § 474.
    jury question as to negligence, § 708.
  duty of motorist as to speed, § 205.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- children—continued.
  - duty of motorist toward children at other than regular crossings, § 213.
  - duty of motorist toward children in crowds, groups, etc., § 200.
  - evidence of party's infancy, § 620.
  - imputing negligence of parent to infant child riding with him, § 497.
  - joinder of parent's cause of action with child's cause of action, § 584.
  - jury question as to competency and authority of, § 672.
  - liability for injuries to, § 246.
    - jury questions, §§ 682, 711.
  - liability of parent for negligence, excluded, § 344.
  - measure of care toward, §§ 185, 186.
  - passing through procession of vehicles, § 199.
  - playing in street,
    - contributory negligence of, § 471.
    - jury question, § 711.
    - measure of care toward, § 186.
  - private driveway, injury in crossing, § 199.
  - prohibition against driving by, § 151.
  - right of child to sue parent, excluded, § 2.
  - running from behind building or other object, § 199.
  - running or walking in street, § 199.
  - stopping and starting, injury to children in, § 199.
  - turning, injury to children in, § 199.
- circumstances, evidence of, §§ 626 et seq.
- circumstantial evidence, sufficiency of, § 829.
- class legislation, § 23.
- closely built up sections in municipalities, speed regulations in, § 43.
- coasting,
  - children in road,
    - contributory negligence of, § 472.
  - liability for injuries to persons coasting, § 249.
  - questions of law and fact, § 249.
- collector,
  - liability of employer for negligence of, § 391.
  - when independent contractor, § 392.
- collision,
  - admissions, §§ 636 et seq.
  - circumstances, evidence of, § 626.
  - contributory negligence,
    - jury question as to, §§ 715 et seq.
  - evidence as to, § 617.
  - instructions to jury, § 737.
  - intersection, infra.
  - jury question, §§ 692, 693, 715 et seq.
  - opinion evidence, § 647.
  - proximate cause of, sufficiency of proof of, § 659.
  - res ipsa loquitur, § 609.
  - sufficiency of evidence as to negligence, § 657.
  - traveling in same direction, jury questions, § 693.
- collision insurance, § 554.
  - definition of collision, § 555.
  - pleading and proof as to value in action on, § 754.
  - what constitutes collision, § 555.
    - collision with land or water, § 556.
    - collision with objects, § 556.
    - contact with bank of ditch, § 556.
    - falling of loaded scoop of steam shovel upon truck, § 556.
    - rolling down hill, § 556.
    - running off ferryboat, § 556.
    - sinking of road bed, § 556.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- collision insurance—continued.
  - what constitutes collision—continued.
    - skidding, § 556.
    - striking elevator in garage, § 556.
    - striking ground at bottom of declivity, § 556.
    - striking paved roadway, § 556.
    - upsetting of machine, §§ 556, 557.
- combinations of, see "dimensions or combinations," infra.
- commerce, see "interstate commerce," infra.
- commercial vehicles,
  - motor transportation companies, infra.
  - sufficiency of proof to establish prima facie case of negligence, § 664.
- commissioner of public safety,
  - delegation of authority to, to prohibit parking, § 58.
- common owners,
  - liability, § 346.
- community property,
  - liability of husband and wife owning an automobile as, § 346.
- comparative negligence, § 503.
  - application where pedestrian crossing between crossings is injured by motorist, § 214.
  - jury questions, § 673.
- competency of driver, see "incompetent or inexperienced driver," infra.
- competency of evidence, §§ 616 et seq.
- complaint in action involving, §§ 597 et seq.
- compulsory insurance, see "liability insurance—compulsory," infra.
- conclusiveness of judgments, § 743.
- conditional sale,
  - insurable interest of buyer, § 514.
  - insurance, see various forms of insurance.
  - parties in action for injuries, § 592.
  - pleading and proof as to value, in action on insurance policy, § 754.
  - registration of car in name of buyer or seller, § 107.
  - vendee's recovery for damage to car as affected by payment of insurance, § 587.
- condition of vehicle,
  - defective car, infra.
  - equipment, see "equipment," infra.
  - expert evidence as to, § 653.
  - jury questions, §§ 695 et seq.
  - opinion evidence as to, § 653.
- conditions precedent to action, § 583.
- conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 68.
  - as to age of operator, § 68.
  - driving or stopping on right side, § 81.
  - intoxicated drivers, regulations as to, §§ 88, 769.
  - jitney routes, § 79.
  - licenses or taxes, § 73.
    - amount of fee as affecting validity, § 77.
    - on vehicles other than those for hire, § 74.
    - statutes forbidding more than one license number, § 76.
    - vehicles for hire, § 78.
    - where statute purports to be exclusive, § 75.
  - lights, regulations as to, § 84.
  - nonresidents, regulations as to, § 86.
  - parking regulations, § 83.
  - passing of street cars, § 80.
  - prohibition of noxious gases, smoke, steam, etc., § 85.
  - regulation as to use of city streets, § 79.
  - right of way at street intersections, § 82.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- conflict between statutes and local regulations—continued.
  - speed, § 69.
    - definite and indefinite rates, § 72.
    - fixing rate higher than statutory rate, § 71.
    - fixing rate lower than statutory rate, § 70.
  - weight regulations, § 87.
- conflict of laws,
  - extraterritorial operation of statutes imposing liability upon owner, § 405.
- consent of owner,
  - criminal offense of taking or using car without, § 809.
  - one operating car with, joinder of, with owner, § 594.
  - owner's liability generally, see "owner," infra.
  - statutory liability based on, see "statutory liability of owner," infra.
- conspiracy,
  - in taking or using car without owner's consent, § 809.
  - to steal automobiles,
    - discussion excluded, § 2.
- constitutional law,
  - assistance, requiring rendition of, after accident, § 785.
  - burden of proof to show unconstitutionality, § 613.
  - constructive service on nonresident motorists, provisions for, § 590.
  - criminal statutes, § 762.
  - delegation of legislative power, infra.
    - as to fixing dimensions or weight of motor vehicles, § 57.
  - driving while intoxicated, statutes as to, § 767.
  - guaranty against compulsory testimony,
    - applicability to license legislation, § 16.
  - identifying numbers, statute as to change or defacement of, § 800.
  - motor carriers, statutes fixing venue in action against, § 588.
  - reporting accident, statutes as to, § 785.
  - special and discriminatory legislation,
    - one way streets, § 49.
  - speed regulations, indefiniteness of, § 807.
  - stolen vehicles in interstate or foreign commerce, statutes as to, § 801.
  - stopping after accident, statute requiring, § 785.
  - unreasonable searches and seizures, infra.
- constructive service on nonresident motorist, §§ 590, 591.
- contract or tort, actions, as one in, § 580.
- contributory negligence, § 407.
  - see also appropriate lines in this topic.
  - aged persons, § 467.
  - as defense where defendant's negligence is wanton, § 414.
  - backing vehicle, § 434.
  - bicycle riders, supra.
  - blind persons, § 465.
  - burden of proof as to, § 614.
  - children, § 470.
  - collisions at intersections, § 431.
  - collision with street car on slippery road, § 425.
  - compliance with or violation of traffic rules, §§ 408, 421.
  - condition of automobile, §§ 408, 428.
  - condition of highway, § 408.
  - conditions of visibility, §§ 408, 429.
  - control, §§ 408, 420.
  - cripples, § 469.
  - deaf persons, § 466.
  - defective brakes, § 428.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- contributory negligence—continued.
  - degrees of negligence, § 418.
  - disregard of traffic signal, § 436.
  - driver or operator of vehicle, § 420.
  - drivers of horse-drawn vehicles, §§ 438, 441.
  - emergencies, § 415.
  - excessive speed, § 423.
  - factors affecting defense of, § 413.
  - homicide as affected by, § 796.
  - impaired vision, § 429.
  - instructions to jury as to, §§ 735, 740.
  - insufficient lights, § 426.
  - intoxicated persons, § 468.
    - driver, § 430.
  - jury questions, §§ 703 et seq.
  - lights, presence or absence of, §§ 408, 412.
  - motorcyclists, § 439.
  - motorists repairing vehicle in road, § 442.
  - necessity of negligence being proximate cause, § 417.
  - occupant of car, see "passenger and guests," infra.
  - parking on wrong side, § 435.
  - parking without lights, § 427.
  - pedestrians, infra.
  - persons alighting from or boarding street car, § 445.
  - persons subject to fainting spells, § 469.
  - persons subject to vertigo, § 469.
  - persons under disability, § 464.
  - persons working in road, § 444.
  - pleading of, § 602.
  - police officer, § 443.
  - presumption as to, § 606.
  - railroad crossings, § 437.
  - relation to proximate cause, § 164.
  - riders of horse, § 441.
  - skidding, § 424.
    - slippery road, § 425.
  - speed, §§ 408, 410.
  - sufficiency of evidence as to freedom from, § 658.
  - traffic officer, § 443.
  - turning between intersections, § 432.
  - turning without signaling, § 433.
  - violation of law of road, § 422.
  - violation of statute or ordinance, § 421.
  - what constitutes, § 408.
- control of car,
  - defined, § 166.
  - duty to keep control, § 166.
  - lack of,
    - as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  - pleading of, § 598.
  - test of, § 166.
- corporations,
  - in what name car registered, § 102.
  - statutes as to service on nonresident motorists as applicable to, § 591.
- cost,
  - of removal and storage, as part of damages for injury to car, § 753.
  - of repairs, as damages for injury to, § 749.
- costs,
  - discussion excluded, § 2.
- counterclaim, pleading of, § 603.
- counties,
  - power to determine weight or load, § 51.
- court,
  - evidence, comment on, § 734.
  - findings of, § 743.
  - invading province of jury, § 733.
  - open court, infra.
  - province of,
    - criminal prosecution, § 831.
  - question for, see "questions of law and fact," infra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- cousin,
  - as member of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
- cranking machine, noise frightening horses, § 267.
- credibility of witnesses, as jury question, § 671.
- crimes, §§ 755 et seq.
  - accessory to homicide, supra.
  - assault and battery, supra.
  - attempt at crime, supra.
  - burden of proof, § 822.
  - consent, taking or using car without, § 809.
  - constitutionality of statutes, § 762.
  - defenses, infra.
  - driving without operator's license, § 777.
  - drunkenness as defense, § 765.
  - evidence, §§ 820 et seq.
  - exclusion of cars from highway, § 756.
  - felonies, infra.
  - former jeopardy, see "previous jeopardy," infra.
  - homicide by, infra.
  - indeterminate sentence, infra.
  - indictments and informations, §§ 811 et seq.
  - instructions to jury, §§ 832, 833.
  - intoxication of driver, infra.
  - judicial notice, § 821.
  - jury questions, § 831.
  - jury trial, § 758.
  - larceny, § 798.
  - lending license plates, § 799.
  - lights, noncompliance with regulations as to, § 778.
  - motorcycles, § 761.
  - numbers, change or defacement of, § 800.
  - particular crimes, §§ 763 et seq.
  - persons liable, § 759.
  - prosecutions for, generally, §§ 810 et seq.
  - province of court and jury, § 831.
  - proximate cause,
    - evidence as to, § 829.
  - public officials or employees, criminal liability of, § 760.
  - punishment, infra.
  - reasonable doubt, proofs beyond, §§ 829, 830.
  - reckless driving, §§ 802 et seq.
  - separate offenses, infra.
  - speed laws, violation of, §§ 806 et seq.
    - indefiniteness as affecting validity of law or regulation, §§ 42 et seq.
  - stopping after accident, infra.
  - sufficiency of evidence, §§ 829, 830.
  - transporting or receiving stolen vehicles in interstate or foreign commerce, § 801.
  - transporting stolen vehicles in interstate commerce, indictment for, § 819.
  - trial in prosecution for, §§ 831 et seq.
  - witnesses, in prosecution for, § 834.
- criminal intent, § 757.
  - lack of, as defense in homicide prosecution, § 794.
  - speed statutes, § 806.
- criminal negligence,
  - assault and battery, supra.
  - homicide, infra.
- crimination, see "self-incrimination," infra.
- cripples,
  - contributory negligence of, § 469.
  - right to drive car, § 178.
- cross-actions, § 603.
- cross-examination in criminal prosecution, § 834.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- crossings,
  - intersections, infra.
  - private crossings, infra.
  - railroad crossings, infra.
- crossing street or road,
  - at unusual place or diagonally, §§ 211 et seq.
    - children, § 213.
    - duty of driver as affected by statute or ordinance, § 214.
    - duty of driver between crossings, § 212.
    - jury questions, §§ 212, 706.
  - children, supra.
  - contributory negligence, §§ 450 et seq.
    - crossing at intersections, § 452.
    - crossing between intersections, § 454
    - crossing private driveway, § 461.
    - crossing street diagonally, § 456.
    - crossing where view obstructed, § 459.
    - failure to look, §§ 451, 458.
  - jury questions, §§ 212, 675, 705, 706.
  - street cars, infra.
- crowding pedestrian in passing, § 202.
  - as negligence, § 206.
  - striking with door of car, § 206.
- curves and hills,
  - care in operation, § 341.
  - keeping on right side of road, § 341.
    - effect of violation of statute or regulation, § 341.
  - operating on wrong side of road or outside it as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  - speed on, § 342.
    - indefiniteness of statute as to, § 807.
    - violation of statute as negligence, § 342.
- custom as evidence, § 618.
- cutting corners,
  - in making turns, § 326.
  - jury question as to proximate cause, § 669.
- dairy business, exemption of cars engaging in, from licensing and registration, § 108.
- damages,
  - destruction of car, § 745.
  - hire of another car, as part of damages for injury to car, § 750.
  - injury to car, § 745.
  - interest, infra.
  - loss of profits, infra.
  - loss of use, infra.
  - market value as basis of, §§ 746 et seq.
  - pleading of, § 597.
  - punitive, liability of youth, § 170.
  - removal, expenses of, § 753.
  - repairs, cost of, § 749.
  - storage, expenses of, § 753.
- damage to vehicles, §§ 745 et seq.
  - damages for, §§ 745 et seq.
  - insurance against, see "insurance," infra.
  - joinder of parties, § 593.
  - payment of insurance as defense to action for, § 587.
  - splitting cause of action by separate suit for, § 585.
- danger,
  - evidence of warning as to, § 624.
- dangerous instrumentality,
  - automobile as, § 11.
    - defective, §§ 11, 12.
    - limitations upon rule, § 12.
- danger to public as element in offense of reckless driving, § 804.
- darting in front of, see also "children," supra and "pedestrians," infra.
  - jury question as to negligence, §§ 679, 708.
- deadly weapon, automobile as, § 764.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
deaf persons,
  contributory negligence of, § 466.
  instructions to jury in injury actions, § 740.
dealers,
  classification of, by themselves for taxation purposes, § 121.
  dealer driving at purchaser's request, liability for injuries, § 344.
  liability for injuries from operation, § 347.
    negligence of inexperienced member of purchaser's family, § 347.
    purchasers' negligence, § 347.
  liability of, for injuries from defects in car sold, § 349.
  plates, see "dealer's plates," infra.
  sufficiency of proof as to agency of, § 660.
dealer's plates,
  liability of dealer lending plates to another, § 112.
  use of car in business as shown by use of, § 661.
death,
  homicide, infra.
  of insured,
    effect of on policy, § 531.
death action,
  burden of proof, § 614.
  contributory negligence,
    jury questions as to, § 703.
  habit or custom, evidence of, § 618.
  parties, §§ 592 et seq.
  payment of insurance as defense in, § 587.
  pleading contributory negligence in, § 602.
declaration in action involving, §§ 597 et seq.
declarations,
  evidence of, §§ 636 et seq.
defacing numbers of, criminal liability for, § 800.
defective cars,
  brakes, supra.
  injuries to guests, §§ 235, 243.
  liability of one loaning, § 358.
    nature of action for injuries, § 580.
defects in road, see "highways and streets," infra.
defenses, §§ 586, 587.
  affirmative defenses, supra.
  drunkenness as, in prosecution for assault, § 765.
  failure to stop after accident, § 786.
  homicide, prosecution for, §§ 793 et seq.
definiteness, see "indefiniteness," infra.
definitions and descriptive terms, §§ 3 et seq.
  automobile, § 3.
  carriage, § 4.
  cause, § 738.
  causing, § 780.
  collision, § 555.
  control of car, § 166.
  drive, § 806.
  driving an automobile, §§ 3, 771.
  having a car under control, § 166.
  highways, § 9.
  horseless carriage, § 3.
  in an intoxicated condition, § 774.
  intersect, § 288.
  intersecting roads, § 288.
  intersection, §§ 288, 296.
  jitneys, § 3.
  last known address, § 591.
  light locomotive, § 6.
  motor car, §§ 3, 6.
  motorcycle, §§ 5, 6.
    as used in insurance policies, § 7.
  motor vehicle, §§ 3, 772.
    in insurance law, § 506.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
definitions and descriptive terms—continued.
  nonresident, § 591.
  operate,
    in insurance law, § 506.
  operating automobile, § 771.
  operating the car with due care, § 166.
  operator,
    in insurance law, § 506.
  owner,
    in insurance law, § 506.
  pneumatic tires,
    in insurance law, § 506.
  preponderance of evidence, § 736.
  reckless driving, § 802.
  ride, § 806.
  public conveyances, § 8.
  public road or highway, § 9.
  streets, § 9.
  taxicabs, § 8.
  theft, § 568.
  under the influence of an intoxicant, § 774.
  vehicle,
    in insurance law, § 506.
  wagon, § 4.
degree of care, see "measure of care," infra.
degree of proof, § 655.
  instructions to jury as to, § 736.
degrees of negligence, § 418.
delegation of legislative power, § 762.
  to local board,
    designation of hack or cab stands, § 61.
  to prohibit parking, § 58.
  to revoke license or permit, § 157.
demurrer to evidence, § 667.
depots,
  control of parking at, § 59.
depreciation of,
  judicial notice as to, § 604.
description of, in indictment for larceny, § 816.
descriptive terms, see "definitions and descriptive terms," supra.
destruction of, see "damage to vehicle," supra.
diagonal crossing, contributory negligence of pedestrian, § 456.
diagrams as evidence, § 645.
dimensions or combinations of,
  effect upon injuries from operation, § 258.
  evidence of, § 634.
  regulations as to, § 54.
    delegation of legislative authority, § 57.
    height, § 56.
    length, § 55.
    validity, § 54.
    width, § 55.
dimming lights, §§ 26, 31.
  failure to dim as affecting care required of other driver, § 270.
direction of verdict, § 667.
disability, see "physical disability," infra.
disclosure of identity after accident, duty as to, § 783.
distance within which car can be stopped,
  experimental evidence as to, § 644.
  opinion evidence as to, § 649.
  range of lights, infra.
distinct offenses, see "separate offenses," infra.
dizziness, see "vertigo," infra.
doctor, see "physician," infra.
doors, liability to guest for defects in, § 235.
dozing, see "driving while asleep," infra.
drivers, see "operators," infra.
driveways, see "private crossings or driveways," infra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- drive-yourself system,
  - licensing and registration of vehicles, § 98.
  - power of municipality, § 19.
  - regulation of, § 17.
- driving,
  - as defined in insurance laws, § 506.
  - see also other appropriate lines in this topic.
- driving on wrong side, see "wrong side," infra.
- driving while asleep,
  - as negligence, generally, § 180.
  - as negligence toward guest, §§ 233, 243.
  - jury questions as to, §§ 180, 688.
- driving while intoxicated see "intoxication of driver," infra.
- drunkenness, see "intoxication," infra.
- due care, instructions as to, § 739.
- due process, see "constitutional law," supra.
- dust,
  - care required, § 272.
  - evidence of, § 629.
  - jury questions as to, §§ 699, 725.
- duty, generally, see appropriate lines in this topic.
- Dyer Act, § 801.
- emergency rule, § 171.
  - ability to stop within range of lights, § 263.
  - accidents at intersection of highway and private way, § 175.
  - accidents at railroad crossings, § 173.
  - accidents at street or highway intersections, § 174.
  - accidents near street cars, § 172.
    - negligence causing emergency, § 172.
  - application as between motorist and street car at intersection, § 311.
  - application where party invoking is negligent, §§ 176, 177.
  - as justifying violation of traffic regulations, § 176.
  - contributory negligence in, § 415.
  - driving on sidewalk, § 177.
  - emergency resulting from driver's own negligence, § 171.
  - instructions to jury, § 741.
  - judicial notice, § 604.
  - jury questions, §§ 701, 721.
  - meeting other vehicles, § 176.
  - necessity of actual emergency, § 171.
  - passing other vehicles, § 176.
  - skidding, § 171.
- engine,
  - criminal liability for changing or defacing numbers on, § 800.
  - stalling, see "stalling car," infra.
- equipment,
  - care required as to, § 251.
  - defects in, see "defective cars," supra.
  - see also various items of equipment.
- evidence, § 604 et seq.
  - admissibility of, §§ 616 et seq.
    - criminal prosecution, §§ 823, 824.
  - admissions, supra.
  - assault, prosecution for, § 829.
  - atmospheric conditions, § 629.
  - brakes, condition of, § 631.
  - burden of proof, supra.
  - caution as to danger, § 624.
  - circumstantial evidence, supra.
  - comment by court on, § 734.
  - competency of, §§ 616 et seq.
  - criminal prosecutions, §§ 820 et seq.
  - damage to car, evidence of value, § 748.
  - declarations, §§ 636 et seq.
  - degree of proof, supra.
  - diagrams, § 645.
  - experiments, §§ 643 et seq.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- evidence—continued.
  - expert evidence, infra.
  - failure to stop at accident, § 826.
  - financial standing, § 619.
  - habit or custom, § 618.
  - harmless error in, § 744.
  - homicide, prosecution for, § 829.
  - illness, § 635.
  - infancy of party, § 620.
  - inferences, infra.
  - insurance, evidence as to value, § 754.
  - intoxication of driver, infra.
  - intoxication, proof of, § 824.
  - judicial notice, § 604.
  - larceny, prosecution for, § 827.
  - liability insurance, § 622.
  - maps, § 645.
  - materiality of, §§ 616 et seq.
  - motion to strike out, § 666.
  - motive, § 623.
  - negative testimony, § 656.
  - negligence, proof of, §§ 316, 617.
    - sufficiency of, § 657.
  - noises, evidence of, § 267.
  - operator's license, lack of, § 621.
  - opinion evidence, §§ 646 et seq.
  - other accidents, § 627.
  - ownership, infra.
  - parked car starting, § 338.
  - photographs, § 645.
  - physical defects, § 635.
  - physical facts, evidence contrary to, §§ 654, 667.
  - pleading of, §§ 596, 597.
  - position of car, § 628.
  - positive testimony, § 656.
  - preponderance of evidence, infra.
  - presumptions, infra.
  - previous acts and conduct, § 624.
  - reasonable doubt, infra.
  - reckless driving, prosecution for, §§ 828, 829.
  - registration, lack of, § 621.
  - relevancy of, §§ 616 et seq.
  - report of accident, § 625.
  - size of vehicle, § 634.
  - skidding, §§ 273, 632.
  - speed, infra.
  - statements, §§ 636 et seq.
  - sufficiency of, §§ 654 et seq.
    - criminal prosecutions, §§ 829, 830.
  - suppression of evidence, infra.
  - surrounding circumstances, §§ 626 et seq.
  - tests, §§ 643 et seq.
  - type of vehicle, § 634.
  - value, infra.
  - venue, proof of, § 829.
  - violation of law, infra.
  - weight of, §§ 654 et seq.
    - instructions to jury as to, § 736.
  - weight of vehicle, § 634.
  - witnesses, infra.
- excavation, evidence of freedom from contributory negligence in running into, § 658.
- excessive speed, see "speed," infra.
- exclamations, evidence of, §§ 639 et seq.
- exclusion from particular highways and districts, § 48.
  - delegation of power to municipality, officers to designate, § 19.
  - jitneys, § 50.
  - legislative power as to, § 756.
  - motor vehicles for hire, § 50.
  - one-way streets, § 49.
  - taxicabs, § 50.
- exemption from execution, § 4.
  - as tool or implement of trade, § 14.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
exemption from licensing and registration, §§ 108, 136.
  based upon weight, § 136.
  governmental vehicles, § 109.
  of persons, § 137.
expense, see "cost," supra.
experience, see "incompetent or inexperienced driver," infra.
experiments as evidence, §§ 643 et seq.
expert evidence, §§ 648, 653.
  homicide, prosecution for, § 825.
  value of car, § 748.
    rental value, § 750.
eyewitnesses,
  evidence of habit or custom in absence of, § 618.
  necessity of proof by, § 654.
failure to comply with licensing and registration provisions, § 138.
  criminal liability, §§ 138, 777, 779.
  effect of equipping with improper license plates, § 147.
  effect upon civil rights and liabilities, § 139.
  effect upon liability for negligence, § 144.
    Massachusetts rule, § 145.
    owner of car operated by unlicensed driver, § 146.
    unlicensed operator, § 146.
  effect upon right to recover for injuries, §§ 139, 140, 141.
    against municipality, § 142.
    under express statutory provision, § 143.
    unlicensed operator, § 141.
  evidence of, § 621.
  liability of one intrusting car to unlicensed driver, § 355.
failure to stop, see "stopping," infra.
fallen pedestrians, liability of motorist for striking, § 192.
falling asleep, see "driving while asleep," supra.
false pretenses, obtaining property under, see "theft insurance," infra.
family, owner's liability for acts of, §§ 358 et seq.
  child of owner, § 360.
    child as agent of parent, § 361.
  family purpose doctrine, infra.
  wife or husband of owners, § 362.
family purpose doctrine, § 365 car driven by servant or employee, § 372.
  car owned by other than head of family, § 371.
  car used by child alone, § 368.
  car used by owner's relative, § 370.
  car used by spouse of owner, § 369.
  child driving with other members of family, § 367.
  effect of statute, § 366.
  instructions to jury, § 734.
  liability when member of family forbidden to take car, § 368.
  pleading, § 598.
  presumption of authority, § 662.
Federal agencies,
  municipal regulation of, § 21.
  state regulation of, § 21.
Federal government,
  exemption of cars of, from licensing and registration provisions, § 109.
  power to regulate automobiles, § 15.
felonies, § 755.
  driving while intoxicated, § 767.
  failure to stop after accident, § 780.
financial standing, evidence of, § 619.
findings, § 743.
fines, § 755.
  failure to register car, § 779.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
fire and police vehicles,
  criminal liability for acts in operation of, § 760.
  exemption from regulations, §§ 89, 760.
    licensing and registration provisions, § 109.
    speed regulations, § 40.
      calls outside municipalities, § 40.
  right of way at intersections, § 294.
    care required, § 298.
fire and protective associations, legislative power as to exemption from regulation, § 89.
fire insurance, § 558.
  see also "insurance," infra.
  amount of recovery, § 566.
  description of car, § 560.
  destruction while in possession of prospective purchaser, § 559.
  fire originating within vehicle, § 563.
  identification of car, § 560.
  mortgaged property, § 559.
    temporary mortgage, § 559.
  negligence of insured, § 564.
  place of keeping car, § 562.
  pleading and proof as to value in action on, § 754.
  proof of loss, § 565.
  provision as to renting or use for hire, § 561.
  provisions against encumbrances, § 558.
  violation of law by insured, § 564.
fog, driving in,
  as affecting sufficiency of lights, § 32.
  as contributory negligence, § 429.
  as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  care required, § 272.
  evidence of fog, § 629.
  jury questions, §§ 699, 725.
foreign commerce, transporting or receiving stolen vehicles in, § 801.
former, see "previous," infra.
frightening horses, see "horses," infra.
frost obscuring windshield, care required, § 271.
funeral cars,
  as vehicle for compensation or hire within licensing provisions, § 98.
  liability of owners for negligence of driver, § 388.
gases, see "noxious gases," infra.
gasoline stations, discussion of, excluded, § 2.
glare, see "blinding lights," supra.
going to sleep, see "driving while asleep," supra.
governmental motor vehicles, see "public motor vehicles," infra.
graduated license fees and taxes, § 130.
  based on horse power, § 132.
  based on seating capacity, § 133.
  based on weight, § 131.
    validity of, § 126.
gross negligence,
  as homicide, §§ 789, 790.
  guest, injury to, see "passengers and guests," infra.
  instructions to jury as to, §§ 733, 735.
  jury questions, §§ 673, 683.
  pleading of, § 600.
  speed as, § 259.
guests, see "passengers and guests," infra.
guest statutes, see "passengers and guests, statutes as to liability to," infra.
habit as evidence, § 618.
hack stands, see "cab stands," supra.
harmless error, see "reversible error," infra.
haste, see "speed," infra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
height of, regulations as to, § 56.
high school student as guest in school bus, § 239.
highway department's power to determine weight or load, § 51.
highways and streets,
  busy streets, supra.
  children in, see "children," supra.
  crossing street or road, supra.
  defects and obstructions in,
    excluded, generally, § 2.
    jury questions as to, §§ 696, 700, 727.
    notice of injuries due to, § 583.
    other accidents as admissible to show, § 627.
  definition of terms, § 9.
  driving on, under statute as to driving while intoxicated, § 773.
  equality with other vehicles, § 10.
  exclusion from, supra.
  highways as including streets, and vice versa, § 9.
  laborers in, see "laborers," infra.
  repairing car in road, infra.
  restrictions as to use, § 10.
  right to use, § 10.
  sidewalk, infra.
  slippery roads, infra.
  tracks on, see "tracks," infra.
  walking along road, infra.
hire of,
  as part of damages, see "damages," supra.
  defective cars, supra.
  drive-yourself system, supra.
  motor vehicles for hire, infra.
  owner's liability generally, see "owner," infra.
  statutory liability of owner, infra.
hit and run, see "stopping after accident," infra.
home-rule municipalities, conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 68.
homicide by, §§ 787 et seq.
  accessory to homicide, supra.
  contributory negligence, effect of, § 796.
  defenses, §§ 793 et seq.
  degree of negligence necessary, § 790.
  evidence, §§ 825, 829.
  former jeopardy, § 797.
  indictment or information, § 815.
  instructions to jury, § 833.
  intent, lack of, § 794.
  intoxication as defense, § 795.
  jury questions, § 831.
  murder, § 792.
  negligence, generally, §§ 789, 790.
  persons liable, § 759.
  proximate cause, § 791.
  reckless driving, §§ 789, 790.
  unlawful acts resulting in, § 788.
  witnesses in prosecution for, § 834.
horn, see "signals and warnings," infra.
horse-drawn vehicles,
  passing by automobile, regulations as to, § 65.
  stopping of automobiles on meeting, regulations as to, § 65.
horseless carriage, defined, § 3.
horse power, basing fees and taxes upon, §§ 119, 132.
horses,
  care required toward, § 265.
    effect of failure to comply with statute, § 266.
    stopping, § 266.
  contributory negligence of driver or rider of horse, §§ 438, 441.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
horses—continued.
  noises frightening, evidence of negligence, § 267.
hotel's right to control parking in adjoining street, § 59.
husband and wife,
  see also "family purpose doctrine," supra.
  imputing negligence of one to the other, § 498.
  instructions to jury as to husband's liability where car driven by wife, § 734.
  in what name car registered, § 100.
  joinder of causes of action of, § 584.
  joinder of, in action for injuries, § 595.
  joint enterprise between, § 501.
  liability of husband for negligence of wife, § 362.
  liability of one to the other for negligence, excluded, § 344.
  presumption in case of husband driving wife's car, § 612.
  proof of authority of husband to drive wife's car, § 660.
  right to sue each other for injuries, excluded, § 2.
hypothetical questions, opinion based on, § 647.
ice,
  driving on, as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  obscuring windshield, care required, § 271.
identification, driver's duty as to, after accident, § 783.
identifying numbers, see "number," infra.
identity of owner of, sufficiency of proof of, § 660.
illegal acts, see "violation of law," infra.
illness,
  evidence of, § 635.
  jury questions as to, §§ 702, 722.
impaired vision, see "obscured vision," infra.
impeachment of witnesses in criminal prosecution, § 834.
impossibility, evidence tending to establish, § 654.
imprisonment for offenses, § 755.
imputed negligence, § 492.
  both members of joint enterprise, § 500.
  imputing bailee's negligence to bailor, § 493.
  imputing driver's negligence to other occupant, § 494.
  imputing negligence of driver to passenger, § 492.
    effect of owner's presence, § 496.
    passengers for hire, § 495.
  imputing negligence of one relative to another, § 498.
  imputing negligence of one spouse to another, § 498.
  imputing negligence of parent to child, § 497.
  imputing negligence of servant to master, § 499.
incompetent or inexperienced driver,
  evidence of competency, power of municipality to require, § 19.
  evidence of inexperience, § 620.
  jury question, § 672.
  liability of one intrusting car to, § 355.
  liability to guest, § 236.
inconsistency of verdict, § 743.
incrimination, see "self-incrimination," infra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
indefiniteness of regulations as to,
  assistance after accident, § 784.
  speed regulations, §§ 41 et seq., 807, 808.
  stopping after accident, §§ 784, 785.
independent contractor, liability of employer for negligence of, § 392.
indeterminate sentence for driving while intoxicated, § 776.
indictments for crimes involving, §§ 811 et seq.
inevitable accident, liability for, § 162.
inexperienced driver, see "incompetent or inexperienced driver," supra.
infants, see "children," supra.
inferences, §§ 605 et seq.
  of negligence, from falling asleep, § 180.
information,
  prosecution by, §§ 811 et seq.
  stopping to give, see "stopping after accident," infra.
injuries due to defects in, see "defective cars," supra.
injuries from operation of, § 161.
  particular injuries, see appropriate lines.
injury to vehicle, see "damage to vehicle," supra.
insanity, evidence as to, § 626.
instructions to jury, §§ 728 et seq.
  after retirement, § 731.
  assuming facts in, § 733.
  criminal prosecution, §§ 832, 833.
  duplication of, § 732.
  form and contents of, § 729.
  homicide, prosecution for, § 833.
  invading province of jury, § 733.
  particular matters, §§ 734 et seq.
  request to charge, § 730.
insurable interest, § 511.
  beneficial interest, § 513.
  change of ownership, § 515.
  nature and extent, § 513.
  necessity of, § 512.
  necessity of legal or equitable title, § 513.
  purchaser under invalid contract, § 513.
insurance, § 504.
  age of operator, § 509.
  change of ownership, § 515.
  collision insurance, supra.
  construction of policies, § 507.
  definitions, § 506.
    drive, § 506.
    driving, § 506.
    motor vehicle, § 506.
    operate, § 506.
    operated, § 506.
    operator, § 506.
    owner, § 506.
    pneumatic, § 506.
    policy, § 504.
    vehicle, § 506.
  false representations, § 508.
  fire insurance, supra.
  insurable interest, supra.
  liability for depreciation of injured machine, § 530.
  liability insurance, infra.
  motorcycle, meaning of, § 7.
  nature of automobile insurance, § 505.
  payment of, as defense in action for injuries, § 587.
  pleading and proof as to value in action on, § 754.
  provisions as to carrying passengers, § 510.
  provisions as to uses of car, § 509.

AUTOMOBILES—continued
insurance—continued.
  representation and warranties, 508.
    distinction between, § 508.
    falsity as necessary to avoid policy, § 508.
    validity when not printed in form required by statute, § 508.
  sole and unconditional ownership, chattel mortgage on property, § 514.
    conditional buyer, § 514.
    falsity of statement known to insurer, § 508.
    of insured, § 514.
    purchaser of stolen car, § 514.
    where note given is part of price, § 508.
  theft insurance, infra.
intent to commit offense, § 757.
interest as part of damages for injury to, § 752.
intersections,
  acts and conduct at, as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  arterial or stop streets and highways, supra.
  care required at, generally, §§ 287 et seq.
  contributory negligence of pedestrians, § 452.
  duty to anticipate presence of others, § 168.
  emergency rule as applied to, § 174.
  highway and private way, turning to left in emergency, §§ 174, 175.
  instructions to jury as to accidents at, § 737.
  jury questions as to accidents at, §§ 692, 715.
  passing at, regulations prohibiting, § 47.
  private crossings or driveways, infra.
  right of way, infra.
  right to assume observance of law by others, § 431.
  street cars, infra.
  traffic signals, infra.
  what constitutes, § 288.
    for right of way purposes, § 296.
interstate commerce,
  effect upon validity of license fees and taxes, § 124.
    for highway purposes, § 125.
  Federal regulation of, § 15.
  prohibition of, by states, § 18.
  state regulation of, § 18.
  transporting or receiving stolen vehicles in, § 801.
    indictment for, § 819.
intervening cause, § 164.
  jury question as to, § 670.
  proximate cause, infra.
intoxicated persons,
  contributory negligence of, § 468.
  driver, see "intoxication of driver," infra.
  duty of automobilist toward, § 188.
intoxicating liquors, transportation of, excluded, § 2.
intoxication of driver,
  common-law offense, § 766.
  conflict between statute and ordinance, §§ 88, 769.
  construction of statutes, § 768.
  contributory negligence,
    intoxication of driver as, § 430.
    of passenger riding with intoxicated driver, § 483.
  criminal liability for, generally, §§ 766 et seq.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
intoxication of driver—continued.
  defense, intoxication as,
    assault, prosecution for, § 765.
    homicide, defense to, § 795.
    negligence toward guest, § 233.
  elements of offense, §§ 770 et seq.
  evidence,
    in prosecution for driving while intoxicated, § 824.
      sufficiency of, § 830.
    of intemperate habits, § 618.
  homicide, liability for, §§ 788, 789.
  indictment or information, § 814.
    highway as including street, § 9.
  instructions to jury, § 734.
  jury questions, §§ 430, 831.
  jury trial, § 758.
  murder, § 792.
  negligence, driving by intoxicated person as, § 181.
  persons criminally liable, § 759.
  presumption as to wilful injury, § 606.
  prohibition against driving by intoxicated persons, §§ 151, 767 et seq.
  punishment, § 776.
  reckless driving,
    evidence of, § 802.
    prosecution for, where acts specifically punishable, § 805.
  statutes as to, §§ 151, 767 et seq.
  what constitutes offense of, §§ 770 et seq.
  when person intoxicated, §§ 774, 775.
jeopardy, see "previous jeopardy," infra.
jitneys,
  conflict between statutes and local regulations as to routes, § 79.
  defined, § 8.
  placing in separate class for taxation purposes, § 121.
  prohibition from using streets, § 50.
joinder of causes of actions, § 584.
joinder of parties, see "parties," infra.
joint enterprise,
  criminal liability, § 759.
  imputing negligence as between members, § 500.
    to prevent recovery against driver, § 502.
  jury question as to, § 668.
  liability of participants as dependent upon ownership, § 346.
  test of, § 501.
    between husband and wife, § 501.
    guest and driver, § 501.
joint liability for injuries, §§ 345, 593.
joint negligence, § 164.
joint owners, see "part owners," infra.
judgments, § 743.
  revocation of license for nonpayment, of, § 158.
judicial notice, § 604.
  criminal prosecutions, § 821.
jurisdiction, § 588.
jury,
  instructions to jury, supra.
  polling of, § 743.
  province of, § 733.
    criminal prosecution, § 831.
  retirement of jury, infra.
  taking case from, § 667.
jury questions, see "questions of law and fact," infra.
jury trial, § 665.
  criminal prosecutions, § 758.
killing, see "homicide," supra.
knowledge, duty to stop after accident as affected by, § 781.
knowledge of law, presumption as to, § 605.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
laborers on street or highways, injuries to, § 194.
  contributory negligence, § 444.
  jury questions, § 714.
language of statute, see "statutes," infra.
larceny, see "theft," infra.
last clear chance, §§ 489, 490.
  application of doctrine to street cars, § 320.
    collisions between automobiles and street cars at intersections, § 491.
  application where danger not discovered, § 490.
  running into car parked on wrong side, § 335.
law of the road, § 46.
  application where automobile is being turned, § 184.
  driving or stopping on right side, conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 81.
  in operating trailers, § 256.
  jury question as to negligence in violation of, §§ 685, 723.
  regulations generally, see "public regulation and control," infra.
  right of way, infra.
  right to assume that persons will obey, § 169.
  stopping, infra.
  turning to left, infra.
  violation of, as contributory negligence, §§ 411, 422.
laws of nature, see "physical facts," infra.
leaving place of accident, see "stopping after accident," infra.
left, see "turning to left," infra.
legislature,
  power to exclude cars from highway, § 756.
  presumption as to intent of, § 605.
lending car,
  owner's liability generally, see "owner," infra.
  statutory liability based on, see "statutory liability of owner," infra.
  to employee, master's liability, § 396.
lending license plates, criminal liability for, § 799.
length of, regulations as to, § 55.
liability, see "persons liable," infra.
liability insurance, § 516.
  capacity to grant consent under omnibus clause, § 535.
  carrying liability insurance, supra.
  compulsory insurance, § 519.
    validity, § 520.
  co-operation by insured, § 545.
    estoppel to set up breach of clause, § 546.
    waiver of right, § 546.
    when excused, § 545.
  death of insured, effect of, § 531.
  defense of suit by insurer, § 529.
  determination of insurer's liability, § 524.
  duties and liabilities of insured, § 544.
  duties and liabilities of insurer, § 521.
  evidence, § 622.
  infant, use of car by, § 523.
  intentional acts, liability of insurer for, § 518.
  joinder of insurer in action against owner, § 593.
  liability of insurer to person injured, § 527.
  medical or surgical expenses, provisions for, § 526.
  no-action clause,
    effect of, § 525.
    recovery by person injured, § 527.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- liability insurance—continued.
  - notice of accident or claim, § 547.
    - accident subject to notice, § 548.
    - agents of corporation, notice by, § 550.
    - excuse for not giving, § 549.
    - immediate notice, § 549.
    - officers of corporation, notice by, § 550.
    - oral notice, § 551.
    - prompt notice, § 549.
    - scope of notice, § 552.
    - telephone notice, § 551.
    - time of notice, § 549.
    - waiver of right to notice, § 553.
    - who may or must give notice, § 550.
    - written notice, § 551.
  - omnibus clause, consent or permission of assured to use by another, §§ 534 et seq.
    - bailee's consent, § 535.
    - capacity to grant, § 535.
    - consent by adult member of family, § 535.
    - consent of conditional vendor, § 535.
    - continuous consent, § 536.
    - effect of deviations, § 538.
    - implied, § 537.
    - inapplicability to certain clases of persons, § 541.
    - legal responsibility for operation, § 540.
    - liability of insurer under, §§ 532 et seq.
    - nature and extent, § 533.
    - necessity that car be lawfully operated, § 539.
    - officer of corporations, § 535.
    - preferential protection of assured, § 542.
    - right of action against insurer, § 543.
  - payment of claim by insured as condition precedent to insurer's liability, § 524, 525.
  - power to issue policy, § 517.
  - recovery by person injured, § 527.
    - under omnibus clause, § 543.
  - settlement with injured person, effect of, § 528.
  - suit papers, waiver of provisions as to, § 553.
  - use of car by infant, § 523.
  - use of car by other than insured, § 522.
    - effect of owner's presence in car, § 522.
    - under omnibus clause, § 533.
  - use of car by unauthorized person, § 523.
  - validity, § 518.
    - compulsory insurance, § 520.
    - unlicensed operator, § 518.
- license fees and taxes, §§ 113 et seq.
  - amount of, see "amount of license fees and taxes," supra.
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations, supra.
  - exemption from licensing and registration, supra.
  - graduated license fees and taxes, supra.
  - highway purposes, § 135.
  - nature of, § 114.
    - as a "toll," § 114.
  - purpose of, § 134.
  - validity, § 115.
    - as affected by enforcement by criminal proceedings, § 115.
    - as affected by general principles of taxation, § 118.
    - as question relates to interstate commerce, § 124.
    - dealers segregated from others, § 121.
    - discrimination, § 121.
    - double taxation, § 120.
    - exemption from payment of ad valorem tax, § 118.
    - formal requisites of statute, § 118.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- license fees and taxes—continued.
  - validity—continued.
    - graduated fees, § 126.
    - horse power as basis, § 119.
    - imposition for revenue purposes, § 115.
    - imposition under police power, § 115.
    - interference with local taxing districts, § 123.
    - jitneys, discrimination as to § 121.
    - limitation on ad valorem taxes, § 119.
    - local and special legislation, § 122.
    - manufacturers segregated from private owners, § 121.
    - motor carriers and others, discrimination between, § 121.
    - municipal fees and taxes, § 116.
    - municipality, imposition upon vehicles of, §§ 115, 760.
    - pleasure and business cars, discrimination between, § 121.
    - private owners segregated from manufacturers, § 121.
    - seating capacity, discrimination based on, § 121.
    - tax upon automobiles though other vehicles are not taxed, § 121.
    - uniformity, § 121.
    - vehicles for hire placed in separate class, § 121.
    - vehicles used inside and outside municipalities, discrimination between, § 121.
    - vendors exempted as to stock kept for sale, § 121.
- license plates, see "registration cards and license plates," infra.
- licensing and registration of cars, §§ 90 et seq.
  - agent, registration in name of, § 101.
  - application for, offenses in connection with, § 779.
  - burden of proof, § 613.
  - classifying automobiles by themselves, § 95.
  - conditional buyer and seller, § 107.
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations, supra.
  - corporations, registration in corporate name, § 102.
  - death of owner, registration after, § 99.
  - exemptions from licensing and registration, supra.
  - failure to comply with licensing and registration provisions, supra.
- fees,
  - see "license fees and taxes," supra.
  - motorcycles, statutes applicable to, § 6.
  - municipalities, power of, §§ 19, 94, 116.
  - municipal vehicles, §§ 115, 760.
  - name in which registered, § 99.
    - married women, § 100.
  - nature and purpose, § 91.
  - nonresidents, infra.
  - number, supra.
  - partners, § 104.
  - part owners, § 105.
  - penalties, § 779.
  - persons who may or must obtain registration, § 99.
  - plates, see "registration cards and license plates," infra.
  - presumptions, § 605.
    - of ownership, from registration, § 661.
  - procedure relating to, § 110.
  - renewal of registration, § 110.
  - state, power of, §§ 16, 93.
  - taxes, see "license fees and taxes," supra.
  - tradenames, § 106.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
licensing and registration of cars—continued.
  unincorporated associations, § 103.
  validity of fees and taxes, see "license fees and taxes," supra.
  validity of statutes and ordinances, § 95.
    requirement of payment of property taxes as condition precedent to license, § 96.
  vehicles within scope of provisions, §§ 97, 98.
    motorcycles, § 97.
    vehicles for compensation or for hire, § 98.
  who may license, § 93.
licensing and registration of operators, § 151.
  criminal liability for driving without license, §§ 138, 777.
  evidence of lack of license, § 621.
  failure to comply with licensing and registration provisions, supra.
  nonresidents, § 153.
    construction of provisions, § 154.
    exemption, § 153.
      effect of driving after exemption expired, § 155.
    holder of nonresident's license driving resident's car, § 156.
  possession of license as consideration in determining due care, § 170.
  qualifications, § 151.
  reinstatement of revoked license or permit, § 160.
  revocation of, §§ 157 et seq.
    arbitrary revocation, § 157.
    delegation of power, § 157.
    for nonpayment of judgment, § 158.
    operating during period of revocation, § 159.
  validity of regulations, § 152.
lien, statutes creating, for injuries by car, § 406.
light locomotive as including motorcycle, § 6.
lights,
  absence of,
    as contributory negligence, § 412.
    as negligence toward guest, § 243.
    as negligence toward pedestrians, § 204.
  atmospheric conditions, effect of, § 32.
  blinding lights, supra.
  cars not on highway, § 34.
  casting beam down, § 31.
  defective lights,
    as contributory negligence, § 426.
    liability for injuries, § 253.
  dirt on tail lights as proximate cause, § 659.
  disabled cars, § 35.
  dimming lights, supra.
  glare of, see "blinding lights," supra.
  insufficient lights as negligence toward pedestrians, § 204.
  intensity, § 30.
  judicial notice as to, § 604.
  jury question as to, §§ 674, 697, 695.
    contributory negligence in having insufficient lights, § 426.
    proximate cause, § 669.
  location on car, § 33.
  opinion evidence as to, § 649.
  parking, infra.
  regulation and control, § 25.
    atmospheric conditions, effect of, § 32.
    cars not in motion, § 35.
    cars not on highways, § 34.
    casting beam down, § 31.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
lights—continued.
  regulation and control—continued.
    conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 84.
    construction, § 27.
      as affected by purpose, § 28.
      regulation of lights on "motor cars," § 27.
    criminal prosecution for violation of regulations § 778.
      complaint in, § 819.
    dimming, §§ 26, 31.
    glaring lights, § 30.
    intensity or visibility requirements, § 30.
    location of car, § 34.
    location on car, § 33.
    motorcycles, applicability to, § 6.
    testing agencies, § 26.
    time requirements, § 29.
    towed cars, § 36.
    validity, §§ 26, 63.
      lights on trailers, § 26.
  stalled cars, § 35.
  time required, § 29.
  towed cars, § 36.
  traffic lights, see "traffic signals," infra.
  trailers, § 256.
  visibility, § 30.
limitation of actions, § 581.
limitations upon weight of vehicles or loads, § 51.
  definiteness of enactment, § 53.
  effect of condition of road, § 53.
  effect of width of tires, § 52.
  reasonableness of enactments, § 53.
listening, see "stopping, looking and listening," infra.
loan, see "lending," supra.
local improvement district, power to tax automobiles, § 117.
lookout, see "stopping, looking and listening," infra.
loss of profits as damages for injury to, § 751.
loss of use of, as damages for injury to car, § 750.
main road or street, see "arterial or stop streets and highways," supra.
malicious mischief in using car without owner's consent, § 809.
mandamus to compel turnpike company to permit operation of, § 66.
manslaughter, see "homicide," supra.
manufacturers of,
  as liable for injuries from defects in car sold, to purchaser from dealer, § 350.
  criminal liability for changing or defacing manufacturer's number, § 800.
  evidence in action against, § 616.
  exemption of, from license fees and taxes, §§ 127, 137.
  license tag, proof of ownership by, § 661.
  tractor, liability of manufacturer of, § 350a.
maps as evidence, § 645.
market value as basis for estimating damages for injury to, §§ 746 et seq.
marks, see "tracks," infra.
married women, see "husband and wife," supra.
master and servant,
  admissions of servant, § 638.
  authority generally, see "authority," supra.
  burden of proof as to authority, § 615.
  chauffeur furnished with borrowed car, master's liability, § 390.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- master and servant—continued.
  - chauffeur furnished with hired car, master's liability, § 384.
    - car hired for extended period, § 387.
    - funeral cars, § 388.
    - particular factors to be considered, § 386.
    - presumption of owner's control § 385.
    - when returning car to owner, § 389.
  - collector, supra.
  - criminal liability for acts of servant, § 759.
  - employee driving own car, master's liability, § 393.
  - employee using employer's car for own pleasure or benefit, master's liability, § 375.
    - car furnished employee for business uses, § 378.
    - chauffeur using car while waiting for employer, § 381.
    - departure or deviation from direct line of duties, §§ 376, 377.
    - effect of fact that employer derives incidental benefit, § 380.
    - employee aiding another motorist on road, § 381.
    - employee taking car to earn money for himself, § 381.
    - other employees, personal pleasure, convenience or business of, § 381.
    - taxi driver using car to earn money for himself, § 381.
    - use of car to go to meals or to and from home, § 379.
  - imputing negligence of servant to master, § 499.
  - joinder of, in action for injury, § 594.
  - jury question as to competency and authority of servant, § 672.
  - liability of master to person whom employee permits or invites to ride, § 394.
    - sufficiency of proof of authority, § 660.
    - where employee violates instructions, § 395.
  - loan of car to employee, master's liability, § 396.
  - master's liability for negligence of servant, generally, §§ 373 et seq.
  - person whom employee permits to drive, master's liability for acts of, § 382.
    - theory of constructive service where employee is present at time of accident, § 383.
  - pleading in action based on servant's negligence, § 598.
  - prima facie case, proof of ownership together with proof of agency as creating, § 663.
  - public employees, infra.
  - relationship of,
    - presumptions based on, §§ 611, 612.
    - sufficiency of proof of, § 660.
    - when relationship exists, § 374.
  - res gestæ, servant's statements as, § 641.
  - respondeat superior, in guest injuries, see "passengers and guests, injuries to," infra.
  - salesman, infra.
  - scope of employment, infra.
  - service on nonresident motorists where car operated by employee, § 591.
- materiality of evidence, §§ 616 et seq.
- measure of care required, §§ 165 et seq.
  - adults darting or stepping into path of car, § 195.
  - anticipating presence of others, § 168.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- measure of care required—continued.
  - as dependent upon place, circumstances, etc. § 165.
  - bicycle riders, § 184.
  - children, supra.
  - coasting in street, § 249.
  - control of car, § 166.
  - differing theories of statement, § 165.
  - emergency rule, supra.
  - instructions to jury as to, § 739.
  - lookout, § 167.
  - motorist engaged about automobile on highway, § 183.
  - passengers and guests, infra.
  - pedestrians, infra.
  - persons on running board or outside of car, § 248.
  - persons walking along street or highway, §§ 201 et seq.
  - persons working on streets or highways, § 194.
  - reliance upon presumption that others will exercise due care, § 169.
  - traffic officers, § 193.
  - trespassers, infra.
  - youth of operator, § 170.
- mechanical defects, see "defective cars," supra.
- medical treatment, duty to provide, after accident, § 784.
- meeting and passing, § 286.
  - duty to keep to the right, § 286.
  - on left-hand side, § 286.
  - right to turn to the left in violation of law, § 286.
- military, transporting members of, liability to licensing provisions, § 109.
- minors, see "children," supra.
- misdemeanors, § 755.
  - driving while intoxicated, § 767.
- mortgage, see "chattel mortgage," supra.
- motion to strike out evidence, § 666.
- motive, see "purpose," infra.
- motor car, defined, § 3.
- motor club service, excluded, § 2.
- motorcycles,
  - applicability of regulations to, § 761.
    - licensing or registration provisions, § 97.
  - as bicycle, § 5.
  - as carriage, § 6.
  - as light locomotive, § 6.
  - as motor car, § 6.
  - as motor vehicle, §§ 6, 772.
  - as term is used in insurance policies, § 7.
  - care of operator toward horses, § 266.
  - care to avoid skidding, § 278.
  - carrying persons on, regulations as to, § 62.
  - contributory negligence of operators, § 439.
  - defined, § 5.
  - lights, regulatory statutes as to, § 6.
  - penalties against, for violation of regulations, § 761.
  - registration, regulatory statutes as to, § 6.
  - speed, regulatory statutes as to, § 6.
- motorist repairing car, see "repairing vehicle in road," infra.
- motor transportation companies,
  - excluded, generally, § 2.
  - authority of driver, sufficiency of proof of, § 660.
  - identity of owner, sufficiency of proof of, § 660.
  - judicial notice as to, § 604.
  - ownership, presumption from, § 664.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
motor transportation companies—continued.
  placing in separate class for taxation purposes, § 121.
  prima facie case, sufficiency of proof to establish, § 664.
  res ipsa loquitur, §§ 608, 609.
  venue of action against, § 588.
motor vehicle, defined, §§ 3, 506.
motor vehicles for hire,
  application to, of licensing or registration provisions, § 98.
  exclusion from use of certain streets, § 50.
  parking regulations, §§ 60, 61.
  placing in separate class for taxation purposes, § 121.
  states' regulation of, § 17.
  muffler scaring horse, liability of owner, § 251.
municipal corporations,
  discrimination against nonresidents, § 150.
  fees and taxes imposed by, validity of, §§ 116, 117.
  highways and streets, supra.
  liability of,
    excluded, generally, § 2.
    to one who has failed to comply with licensing and registration provisions, § 142 license regulations as applicable to, §§ 115, 760.
  notice to, of claim, § 583.
  ordinances, infra.
  power of, § 19.
    determining weight or load, § 51.
    home-rule municipalities, § 68.
    license regulations, §§ 19, 94, 116.
    over Federal agencies, § 21.
    parking, §§ 58, 339.
    permitting races, § 67.
    requiring evidence of competency of operator, § 19.
    requiring exhibition of license numbers, 19.
    safety appliances, § 19.
    safety zones, § 64.
    speed, § 19.
    status affecting, § 20.
    traffic on streets and alleys not public, § 19.
  state tax on vehicles of, §§ 115, 760.
municipal ordinance, see "ordinance," infra.
murder, see "homicide by," supra.
name, duty to give, after accident, § 783.
name on car, identification of owner by, § 660.
National Motor Vehicle Theft Act, § 801. natural laws, see "physical facts," infra.
nature of automobile law, § 1.
negative testimony, § 656.
negligence, § 162.
  burden of proof as to, § 614.
  care, supra.
  contributory negligence, supra.
  degrees of, § 165.
  homicide by, supra.
  instructions to jury as to, § 735.
  intervening cause, supra.
  jury questions, §§ 673 et seq.
  measure of care, supra.
  opinion evidence as to, § 650.
  pleading of, § 599.
  presumption as to, § 606.
  violation of law, infra.
  wilful and wanton negligence, infra.
  see also other appropriate lines in this topic.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
nephew as member of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
new trial, § 744.
noises,
  as evidence of negligence, § 267.
  frightening horses, see "horses," supra.
nominal damages for injury to, § 745.
nonresidents,
  conflict between statutes and local regulations as to, § 86.
  constructive service on, §§ 590, 591.
  discrimination as to, in municipal regulations, § 150.
  licenses and taxes,
    discrimination in, § 148.
    exemption from, §§ 137, 149.
nonsuit, § 667.
notice,
  in insurance matters, see "insurance," supra.
  of claim or injury, § 583.
noxious gases, conflict between statutes and local regulations as to, § 85.
nuisance, automobile as, § 13.
number,
  constitutionality of requirements as to, § 762.
  criminal liability for changing or defacing, § 800.
  duty to give, after accident, § 783.
  statutes forbidding more than one number, effect upon municipal regulations, § 76.
object extending beyond car as negligence toward pedestrian, § 209.
obscured vision,
  atmospheric conditions, supra.
  blinding lights, supra.
  care required, § 269.
  driving with, as contributory negligence, § 429.
  dust, supra.
  evidence of, § 629.
  fog, supra.
  jury questions, § 725.
  rain, infra.
  smoke, infra.
  snow, infra.
  windshield, infra.
obstruction, see "highways and streets," supra.
occupants, see "passengers and guests," infra.
offenses, see "crimes," supra.
officers, see "public officers," infra.
omnibus clause, see "liability insurance," supra.
one way streets, validity of regulations as to, § 49.
open court, instructions to jury in, § 731.
"operate" or "operated" as defined in insurance laws, § 506.
operators,
  age of,
    conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 68.
    effect of possession of license, § 170.
    evidence of, § 620.
    fact to be considered in determining care, § 170.
    provision in insurance policy, § 509.
    violation of age limit as negligence, § 163.
  as defined in insurance laws, § 506.
  authority of, see "authority," supra.
  illness of, evidence of, § 635.
  incompetent or inexperienced driver, supra.

- AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- operators—continued.
  - liability of, § 346.
  - licensing and registration of operators, supra.
  - master and servant, supra.
  - owner's liability for acts of, see "owner," infra.
  - physical disability, infra.
  - presumption that driver acted for owner, § 612.
  - res gestæ, driver's statement as, § 641.
  - state and municipal regulation of qualifications of drivers of United States government vehicles, § 21.
  - turning head to look at horses as disregard of the rights of guests, § 233.
  - see also other appropriate lines in this topic.
- opinion evidence, §§ 646 et seq.
- ordinances,
  - as evidence, § 617.
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations, supra.
  - constitutionality of, see "constitutional law," supra.
  - crossing of street by pedestrians, § 214.
  - judicial notice of, § 604.
  - pleading of, § 601.
  - violation of, see "violation of law," infra.
- other accidents, evidence of, § 627.
- other car, statements of occupants of, as part of res gestæ, § 642.
- outside car, see "riding outside car," infra.
- overturning, see "upsets," infra.
- owner,
  - as defined in insurance laws, § 506.
  - consent of owner, supra.
  - control by, § 354.
    - as jury question, § 672.
  - criminal liability of, § 759.
  - liability for negligence of another driving car, §§ 353 et seq.
    - furnishing driver of leased automobile, § 357.
    - husband driving wife's car, § 354.
    - intrusting to incompetent or unlicensed driver, § 355.
    - invited guest of member of family, liability to, § 362.
    - liability where car loaned, § 356.
      - lending defective automobile, § 358.
    - master's liability for act of servant, see "master and servant," supra.
    - one undertaking to sell car, negligence of, § 348.
    - presence of owner in car, infra.
    - statutory liability, see "statutory liability of owner," infra.
    - third person whom member of family permits to drive, acts of, § 364.
    - wife driving husband's car in presence of husband, § 354.
  - liability of owner of one car for injuries inflicted by another, § 352.
  - sufficiency of proof of identity of, § 660.
- ownership of,
  - burden of proof as to, § 613.
  - pleading of, § 598.
  - presumption from, see "presumptions," infra.
  - prima facie case, proof of, §§ 662 et seq.
  - sufficiency of proof of, § 661.
- parent, see "children," supra.
- park, regulations as to use in, § 66.
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 69.
  - effect of state law on, § 66.
  - power of park commissioners, § 66.
- AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- parking,
  - abutting owners' rights, § 59.
  - cab stands, control of, § 59.
  - care required, § 334.
  - charge for, in streets, § 58.
  - contributory negligence in crossing road in front of parked car, § 658.
  - duty to guard against interference by trespassers, § 338.
  - duty to guard against machine moving, § 338.
  - evidence of improper parking, § 628.
    - sufficiency of, § 657.
  - in highways outside municipalities,
    - care required, § 340.
    - regulation, § 340.
      - application to disabled cars, § 340.
  - in municipalities, generally, §§ 58, 339.
  - in violation of ordinance, as negligence, § 339.
  - jury questions, §§ 338, 691, 719.
  - limitations as to time, § 58.
  - limitations in certain specified hours, § 58.
  - near hydrants, conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 83.
  - on wrong side of street or highway, § 335.
    - application of rule of proximate cause, § 335.
    - as contributory negligence, 435.
    - right of approaching driver to assume that car is in motion, § 435.
    - wilful and wanton negligence, § 336.
  - parked car starting down grade, § 338.
    - res ipsa loquitur, § 608.
  - prohibiting, in certain congested blocks, § 58.
  - prohibition of vehicles operated for hire, § 58.
  - regulation, § 58.
    - conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 83.
    - lights on parked cars, § 35.
    - manner of parking, § 58.
    - municipalities, § 58.
    - validity of, §§ 58, 60.
    - violation of, as negligence, § 339.
  - setting brakes, § 338.
  - without lights, § 337.
    - as contributory negligence, § 427.
    - regulations as to, § 35.
- particular matters, care required as to, see "care required as to particular matters," supra.
- particular situations, care required in, see "care required in particular situations," supra.
- parties to action, §§ 592 et seq.
  - joinder of, §§ 345, 593, 594, 595.
- partnership, in what name car registered, § 103.
- part owners, in what name car registered, § 105.
- passengers and guests,
  - criminal liability of, § 759.
  - exclamations of, as part of res gestæ, § 640.
  - injuries to, see "passengers and guests, injuries to," infra.
  - joint enterprise with driver, § 501.
  - liability of, for negligence in operation of car, § 351.
  - one guest injuring another, § 232.
  - servant, guest of, see "master and servant," supra.
  - silence, admission by, § 637.
  - statements of, as part of res gestæ, §§ 640, 642.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
passengers and guests—continued.
  statutes as to, see "passengers and guests, statutes as to liability to," infra.
passengers and guests, injuries to, §§ 229 et seq.
  application of general rule, § 233.
  brakes, negligence in applying, § 233.
  condition of car, § 235.
    absence of windshield wiper, § 235.
    accelerator defective, § 235.
    defective brakes, § 235.
    defective door, § 235.
    defective spring, § 235.
    defective steering gear, § 235.
    majority rule, § 235.
    minority rule, § 235.
  contributory negligence, §§ 475 et seq.
    care at street intersections, § 488.
    care at street railway crossings, § 487.
    duty at railroad crossings, § 486.
    duty to leave vehicle, § 481.
    duty to observe danger, § 480.
    duty to warn driver, § 478.
    interfering with driving, § 482.
    intoxicated driver, § 483.
    jury questions, §§ 477, 712.
    knowledge of driver's habits, § 477.
      questions of law and fact, § 477.
    observation of danger, § 480.
    protest to driver, § 479.
    reliance upon driver, § 476.
    remaining in automobile driven after dark without lights, § 479.
    riding in dangerous position, § 484.
    warning to driver, § 478.
  crossing railroad track ahead of train as negligence, § 233.
  falling asleep as negligence, § 233.
  guests at sufferance, § 234.
  inexperience or lack of skill of driver, § 236.
    guest a child of tender years, § 236.
  instructions to jury, § 737.
  invited guests, §§ 230, 234.
    jury questions, §§ 683, 712.
  lack of skill of driver, § 236.
  minority rule, § 231.
    gross negligence, what constitutes, § 231.
      driving around corner on wet street, § 231.
      increasing speed on meeting car on curve, § 231.
      speed, § 231.
        violating statute, § 231.
  one guest injuring another, § 232.
  passengers for hire, § 244.
  person requesting ride, § 230.
  respondeat superior, § 232.
    driver of school truck, § 232.
    one guest injuring another, § 232.
  servant, guest of, see "master and servant," supra.
  speed as negligence, §§ 233, 243.
  speed laws, violation of, as negligence, § 233.
  statutes as to, see "passengers and guests, statutes as to liability to," infra.
  turning head to look at horses as negligence, § 233.
  voluntary drunkenness as negligence, § 233.
passengers and guests, statutes as to liability to, §§ 237 et seq.
  construction of statutes, § 237.
  intoxicated driver, exception of, § 237.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
passengers and guests, statutes as to liability to—continued.
  parents' right to recover for injury to child, § 237.
  questions of law and fact,
    negligence within guest statutes, § 240.
    who is a guest, § 239.
  validity of statutes, § 238.
    depriving guest of all remedy, § 238.
  what constitutes negligence under, §§ 240 et seq.
    acts and conduct at intersections, § 243.
    acts and conduct at railroad crossing, § 243.
    conduct in getting out of rut, § 243.
    curve, operating on wrong part of road, § 243.
    dozing while driving, § 243.
    driving in fog, ice, rain, or snow, § 243.
    driving when blinded by glare of lights or sun, § 243.
    driving with defective brakes, § 243.
    driving with knowledge of mechanical defects, § 243.
    failure to look before slamming rear door, § 243.
    failure to observe, § 243.
    failure to see car in front by reason of turning to look at horses, § 243.
    failure to stop at end of road, § 243.
    failure to stop or slow down, § 243.
    gross negligence, §§ 240, 241.
    lack of control, § 243.
    operating on wrong side of road, § 243.
    operating outside road, § 243.
    operating without lights, § 243.
    passing other vehicles on road, § 243.
    paying attention to young lady guest, § 243.
    reckless operation, § 242.
    skidding when trying to pass other car, § 243.
    slamming door on guest's fingers, § 241.
    slowing up without stopping in obedience to stop sign, § 243.
    speed, § 243.
    wilful and wanton misconduct, §§ 240, 241.
  who is guest, § 239.
    effect of compensation or lack thereof, § 239.
      expectation of compensation, § 239.
    high school student in school bus, § 239.
    invitee waiting to enter automobile, § 239.
    prospective buyer of automobile, § 239.
    prospective purchaser of real estate in real estate company's automobile, § 239.
    when relationship begins, § 239.
      injury in door before starting, § 239.
passengers for hire, injuries to, § 244.
passing,
  crowding pedestrian in passing, supra.
  street cars, infra.
  vehicles proceeding in opposite directions, see "meeting and passing," supra.
  vehicles proceeding in same direction, §§ 282, 283.
    at street intersections, § 282.
      prohibition by statute or ordinance, §§ 47, 282.
    care required, § 282.
    driving too close, § 285.
    duty of car ahead, § 282.
      as affected by knowledge of rear cars' desire to pass, § 282.
      as to speed, § 282.
      to turn to the right, § 282.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- passing—continued.
  - vehicles proceeding in same direction—continued.
    - duty of rear car, § 282.
    - jury questions, § 715.
    - negligence toward guest, § 243.
    - street cars, § 283.
    - wrong side, passing on, § 284.
- payment of insurance as defense in action for injuries, § 587.
- peace officers, see "police officer," infra.
- pedestrians, injuries to, § 187.
  - alighting from vehicle, § 196.
  - anticipating action of pedestrian, § 202.
  - anticipating presence of pedestrians, §§ 168, 202.
  - backing vehicle, contributory negligence of pedestrian, § 463.
  - children, supra.
  - colliding with side of car, § 191.
  - coming from behind or around vehicle, § 196.
  - contributory negligence of, §§ 446 et seq.
    - presumption as to, § 606.
    - particular acts, see appropriate lines.
  - crossing street or road, supra.
  - darting or stepping into path of car, §§ 195 et seq.
    - jury question as to negligence, § 679.
  - disability, pedestrians under, § 188.
    - evidence of physical defect, § 635.
  - falling and being struck by automobile, § 192.
  - illness of pedestrian, evidence of, § 635.
  - instructions to jury as to, §§ 737, 740.
  - intersections, supra.
  - judicial notice as to, § 604.
  - jumping back, §§ 197, 457.
  - jury questions, §§ 674 et seq.
  - lookout, pedestrian's neglect as to,
    - failure to look behind, § 458.
    - failure to observe backing vehicle, § 463.
    - jury questions, § 705.
  - nature of pedestrians' rights, § 448.
  - obstructed view of pedestrian, § 459.
  - repairing vehicle in road, infra.
  - res ipsa loquitur, § 608.
  - sidewalk, infra.
  - stepping around vehicle, § 462.
  - stepping backwards, §§ 197, 457.
  - street cars, infra.
  - traffic signal, reliance on, § 453.
  - turning or stepping backwards, §§ 197, 457.
  - violation of statute or ordinance, by pedestrian, § 455.
  - walking along highway, infra.
  - warning as to danger, evidence of, § 624.
- penalties, §§ 755 et seq.
  - crimes generally, see "crimes," supra.
  - driving while intoxicated, § 776.
  - lights, violation of regulations as to, § 778.
- pending action, abatement of, § 582.
- permit, see "licensing and registration," supra.
- persons liable, § 344.
  - common owners or operators, § 346.
  - dealer, supra.
  - guests, § 351.
  - husband and wife owning car as community property, § 346.
  - learner under tutelage of dealer, § 344.
  - owner, supra.
  - school for instruction in automobile driving, § 347.
  - tort-feasors, § 345.
- petition in action involving, §§ 597 et seq.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- petting, as negligence toward guest, § 243.
- photographs as evidence, § 645.
- physical disability,
  - as disqualifying operator, § 179.
  - driver, § 178.
    - blind in one eye, § 178.
    - cripple, § 178.
    - effect of knowledge or lack of knowledge, § 179.
    - evidence of, § 635.
    - jury questions as to, §§ 178, 702.
  - of person injured, §§ 464 et seq.
    - jury questions, § 722.
- physical facts, evidence contrary to, §§ 654, 667.
- physician, duty to take person to, after accident, § 784.
- pictures, see "photographs," supra.
- place,
  - of accident,
    - photograph of, § 645.
    - stopping at, see "stopping after accident," infra.
  - of keeping car, misstatement to insurer as to, § 508.
  - of valuation, in estimating damages for injury to car, § 747.
- playing in street, see "children," supra.
- plea in actions involving, § 602.
- pleading, §§ 596 et seq.
  - action against dealer for defects, § 349.
  - as to value, in action on insurance policy, § 754.
  - evidence confined to issues raised by, § 616.
  - harmless error in, § 744.
- pleasure cars,
  - discrimination in taxation of, § 121.
  - sufficiency of proof to establish prima facie case of negligence, § 664.
- pleasure ride, persons criminally liable, § 759.
- pneumatic tires as defined in insurance laws, § 506.
- police officer,
  - contributory negligence of, § 443.
  - traffic officers, infra.
- police power,
  - amount of taxes under, § 128.
  - constitutional law, supra.
- police vehicles, see "fire and police vehicles," supra.
- polling jury, § 743.
- position of, evidence of, § 628.
- positive testimony, § 656.
- possession of car with changed or defaced numbers, criminal liability for, § 800.
- post-office, see "United States mails."
- poverty, evidence of, § 619.
- power to regulate, see "public regulation and control," infra.
- prejudicial error, see "reversible error," infra.
- prenatal injuries, damages for, excluded, § 344.
- preponderance of evidence, § 655.
  - instructions to jury as to, § 736.
- presence, anticipation of, see "anticipating presence," supra.
- presence of owner in car as affecting liability, § 354.
  - car driven by member of family, § 354.
  - husband driving wife's automobile, § 354.
  - imputed negligence, § 496.
- presumptions, §§ 605 et seq.
  - driver acting for owner, § 612.
  - driving while intoxicated, § 181.
    - power of state to create conclusive presumption, § 181.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
presumptions—continued.
  of owner's control, where chauffeur furnished with hired car, § 385.
  ownership, presumption from, § 611.
    prima facie case created by, §§ 662 et seq.
    weight and sufficiency of, §§ 661 et seq.
  rebuttal of presumption, infra.
  res ipsa loquitur, infra.
  sidewalk, injury to pedestrian on, § 189.
  street car, negligence of, § 316.
  that others will exercise due care, § 169.
    right to rely upon, § 169.
  that others will obey the law of the road, § 169.
previous accidents, evidence of, § 627.
previous acts and conduct, evidence of, § 624.
previous jeopardy in prosecution for homicide, § 797.
price, see "purchase price," infra.
prima facie case, see "presumptions," supra.
principal and agent,
  see also "master and servant," supra.
  admissions of agent, § 638.
  burden of proof as to authority, § 615.
  joinder of, in action for injury, § 594.
  presumption as to agency, § 611.
  proof of ownership together with proof of agency as creating prima facie case, § 663.
  provisions as to service on nonresident motorists, as applied to car operated by agent, § 591.
  registration of car in name of agents, § 101.
prior, see "previous," supra.
private crossings or driveways, § 305.
  contributory negligence of pedestrian crossing, § 461.
  duty to anticipate presence of others on, § 168.
  duty toward others using, § 307.
  entering street from, § 306.
    duty toward pedestrian on sidewalk, § 305.
  lights, requirement of, § 34.
  turning into, § 305.
    duty as to vehicular traffic, § 305.
    warning required, § 305.
      lack of, as contributory negligence, § 433.
process, §§ 589 et seq.
profits, see "loss of profits," supra.
property damage, see "damage to vehicle," supra.
property taxes, payment of, as condition precedent to license, § 96.
prosecution, see "crimes," supra.
prospective buyer,
  of automobile, as guest, § 239.
  of real estate, as guest of real estate company, § 239.
prostitution, use for purpose of, excluded, § 2.
protective associations, see "fire and protective associations," supra province of court and jury, see "questions of law and fact," infra.
proximate cause, § 164
  burden of proof as to, § 614.
  crimes, supra.
  homicide, § 791.
  instructions to jury, § 738.
  intervening cause, supra.
  jury question as to, § 669.
    parking on wrong side of street, § 435.
  pleading of, § 597.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
proximate cause—continued.
  sufficiency of proof of, § 659.
  violation of law, infra.
  violation of non-statutory duty, § 164.
  violation of statutory duty, § 164.
  what constitutes, § 164.
public, reckless driving endangering, § 804.
public conveyances, defined, § 8.
public employees, criminal liability of, § 760.
public motor vehicles,
  exemption from licensing and registration provisions, § 109.
  exemption from regulations, § 760.
  fire and police vehicles, supra.
public officers,
  criminal liability of, § 760.
  exemption of, from regulations, § 760.
  report of, as evidence, § 625.
  state officers, infra.
  traffic officer, infra.
public regulation and control, § 15.
  applicability to roads and streets not public highways, § 16.
  carrying persons on motorcycles, § 62.
  conflict between statutes and local regulations, supra.
  constitutionality of, see "constitutional law," supra.
  criminal regulations, see "crimes," supra.
  dimensions or combinations, supra.
  evidence as to violation of regulations, § 617.
  exclusion from particular highways and districts, supra.
  exemption of particular vehicles, § 89.
  Federal agencies, § 21.
  Federal government, § 15.
  interstate commerce, supra.
  licensing and registration, supra.
  lights, supra.
  limitations upon weight or load, supra.
  motorcycles as bound by, § 761.
  municipal corporations, supra.
  parking, supra.
  power of regulation, § 15.
  public officials or employees as exempt from, § 760.
  races, § 67.
  reporting accident, §§ 780 et seq.
  safety appliances, § 63.
  safety zones, § 64.
  speed, § 16.
  speed contests, § 67.
  states, regulation by, § 16.
    dimensions or combinations of vehicle, § 54.
    Federal agencies, § 21.
    interstate traffic, § 18.
    licenses and registration, § 93.
    vehicles for hire, § 17.
    weight or load, § 51.
  stopping, § 65.
    after accident, see "stopping after accident," infra.
    at main thoroughfares, § 65.
    in meeting or passing horse-drawn vehicles, § 65.
    in overtaking street cars, § 65.
  street cars, infra.
  use in parks, § 66.
  use on toll roads, § 66
  validity of regulations, § 22.
    class legislation, § 23.
  constitutional law, supra.
    power of courts to determine, § 48.
  violation of regulations, see "violation of law," infra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- public road or highway,
  - defined, § 9.
  - see also "highways and streets," supra.
- punctures,
  - blow-outs, supra.
  - fixing, see "repairing vehicles in road," infra.
  - judicial notice as to, § 604.
- punishment for driving while intoxicated, § 776.
- purchase price of, as evidence of value, § 754.
- purpose, evidence of, §§ 617, 623.
- questions of law and fact, §§ 668 et seq.
  - cause of accident, §§ 669, 670.
  - contributory negligence, §§ 703 et seq.
  - criminal prosecutions, § 831.
  - negligence of defendant, §§ 673 et seq.
  - particular matters, see appropriate lines.
- quotient verdict, § 743.
- racing,
  - as negligence, § 268.
  - contributory negligence of injured person, § 268.
  - liability for, § 268.
    - effect of municipal authority, § 268.
    - persons liable, § 268.
    - persons to whom liable, § 268.
  - use of highways for, § 67.
    - power of municipality, § 67.
- railroad crossings,
  - acts and conduct at, as negligence toward guest, §§ 233, 243.
  - attempts to cross ahead of train in emergency, § 173.
  - contributory negligence at, §§ 416, 437.
    - of passenger, § 486.
  - disregard of train, evidence of, § 658.
  - duty to stop, look, and listen, § 321.
  - emergency rule in case of accidents, § 173.
  - measure of care at, § 321.
  - negative testimony as to signals at, § 656.
  - reversing when partly over track in emergency, § 173.
  - stalling engine on track in emergency, § 173.
  - stopping, looking, and listening, supra.
  - sufficiency of evidence as to negligence at, § 657.
- railroads, favoring, in regulations as to dimensions or combinations of motor vehicles, § 54.
- railroad stations, control of parking by, § 59.
- rain,
  - care required where view obscured by, §§ 271, 272.
  - driving in, as negligence toward guest, § 243.
- range of lights, ability to stop within,
  - application of rule to emergencies, § 263.
  - as test of due care, § 263.
  - where lights have been dimmed, § 263.
- rate of speed, see "speed," infra.
- real party in interest, action by, § 592.
- rear lights, see "lights," supra.
- reasonable doubt, proof beyond, in criminal prosecution, §§ 829, 830.
- rebuttal of presumption as question for jury, § 668.
- receiving stolen vehicles in interstate or foreign commerce, § 801.
- reckless driving,
  - as assault, §§ 763, 764.
  - criminal offense of, §§ 802 et seq.
    - indictment or information, § 817.
  - danger to public, § 804.
  - evidence in prosecution for, §§ 828, 829.
  - homicide by, supra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
- reckless driving—continued.
  - intoxication, supra.
  - murder, § 792.
  - persons criminally liable for, § 759.
  - prosecution for, where act otherwise punishable, § 805.
  - reputation for, evidence of, § 618.
  - speed, rate of, § 803.
  - what constitutes, § 802.
  - within guest statutes, see "passengers and guests, statutes as to liability to," supra.
- records of weather bureau, evidence of, § 629.
- red lights, see "traffic signals," infra.
- reflector, absence of, as proximate cause of rear-end collision, § 251.
- registration, see "licensing and registration," supra.
- registration cards and license plates, § 111.
  - as raising prima facie case of ownership, § 662.
  - dealer's plates, supra.
  - display of plates, § 111.
    - criminal liability for failure to display, § 779.
    - limitation to plate of state in which car is being operated, § 111.
    - power of municipality to require, § 19.
    - validity of requirement, § 111.
  - evidence of value in prosecution for stealing, § 827.
  - lending license plates to another,
    - liability, § 112.
    - criminal liability, § 799.
  - number, supra.
- regulation and control, see "public regulation and control," supra.
- relatives as members of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
- relevancy of evidence, § 616.
- reliance on traffic signals, jury questions as to, § 690.
- removal, expense of, as part of damages for injury to car, § 753.
- rent of, see "hire of," supra.
- repairing vehicle in road,
  - contributory negligence, § 442.
  - jury questions, §§ 678, 709.
  - measure of care required by other motorist, § 183.
- repairmen, discussion of, excluded, § 2.
- repairs,
  - cost of, as damages for injury to car, § 749.
  - evidence of value of, § 748.
  - loss of use during, as damages for injury to car, § 750.
- report of accident, §§ 780 et seq.
  - as evidence, § 625.
  - stopping after accident, infra.
- reputation for carelessness, evidence of, § 618.
- requests to charge jury, § 730.
- res gestæ, §§ 639 et seq.
- res ipsa loquitur, §§ 607 et seq.
  - application of doctrine to parked car starting, § 338.
  - application of doctrine where skidding shown, § 273.
  - application where after accident tire was found to have blown out, § 254.
- res judicata, § 743.
- respondeat superior, see "master and servant," supra.
- retirement of jury, charges after, § 731.
- retroactive operation of statutes as to service on nonresident motorist, § 591.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- reversible error, § 744.
  - court invading province of jury, § 733.
  - emergency, instruction as to, § 741.
  - evidence, arguments, etc., showing carrying of liability insurance, § 666.
  - failure to charge, in absence of request, § 730.
- review, § 744.
- revival of actions, § 582.
- riding outside car,
  - jury question as to negligence, § 684.
  - running board, infra.
- right of way, §§ 289 et seq.
  - ambulances, § 294.
    - care required, § 298.
  - as between horse-drawn vehicle and automobile, § 292.
  - as between pedestrian and automobile, § 293.
    - effect of proceeding according to traffic regulations, § 293.
  - as between street car and automobile, § 311.
    - as affected by statutes or ordinances, § 312.
  - conditions of, §§ 291, 297.
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 82.
  - distance from crossing, § 297.
  - driver having right of way,
    - care required of one having, § 298.
    - contributory negligence of, § 431.
    - right to assume care or observance of law by others, §§ 299, 431.
  - effect of ignorance of regulations, § 295.
  - extent of rights, § 291.
    - necessity that cars approach at same time, § 291.
  - fire apparatus, § 294.
  - ignorance of regulations, § 295.
  - instructions to jury, § 737.
  - jury questions as to, § 692.
  - lawfulness of driving, § 297.
  - necessity of reaching intersection at same time, § 297.
  - police vehicles, § 294.
  - regulation by statute or ordinance, § 290.
    - effect of violation, § 290.
  - right to assume care on part of other traveler, § 299.
  - speed, effect of, § 297.
  - streets or roads subject to rule, § 296.
  - violation of law, infra.
- road, see "highways and streets," supra.
- roller skates, avoiding collision with boy on, in emergency, § 174.
- rope, towing by, see "towing," infra.
- rules of road, see "law of road," supra.
- running board, injury to person on, § 248.
  - jury questions, §§ 248, 684, 724.
- running in front of, see "darting in front of," supra.
- safety devices, regulations as to, §§ 19, 63.
- safety zones, regulations as to, § 64.
- sales,
  - conditional sale, supra.
  - dealers, supra.
  - discussion of, excluded, § 2.
  - prospective buyer, supra.
  - purchase price, supra.
- salesman,
  - joint enterprise, liability for negligence, § 346.
  - liability of employer for negligence of, § 391.
  - when independent contractor, § 392.
- same direction, see "vehicles proceeding in same direction," infra.
- sanity, evidence as to, § 626.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- school children,
  - liability of owner of truck carrying, for driver's negligence, § 232.
  - stepping in front of car, § 200.
  - student as guest in school bus, § 239.
- school, duty of motorist in driving past, § 213.
- school for instruction in driving, liability of, for negligence of pupil, § 347.
- scientific principles, evidence contrary to, § 667.
- scope of article, § 2.
- scope of employment,
  - see also "master and servant," supra.
  - burden of proof as to, § 615.
  - jury questions, § 672.
  - presumption as to, §§ 611, 612.
  - sufficiency of proof that servant acted outside, § 661.
- search and seizure, see "unreasonable searches and seizures," infra.
- seating capacity, taxation based on, §§ 121, 133.
- second jeopardy, see "previous jeopardy," supra.
- self-incrimination, statute as to giving information after accident as violation of immunity from, § 785.
- sentence, see "indeterminate sentence," supra.
- separate offenses, distinct from reckless driving, § 805.
- serial numbers, criminal liability for changing or defacing, § 800.
- service of process, §§ 589 et seq.
  - on nonresident motorists, §§ 590, 591.
- set-off, pleading of, § 603.
- shifting of burden of proof, § 613.
- sickness, see "illness," supra.
- sidewalk,
  - driving on, in emergency, § 177.
  - injury to pedestrians on, § 189.
    - attempt to avoid collision, § 190.
    - contributory negligence, § 460.
    - injury by car driven on sidewalk by another car, § 190.
    - jury questions, §§ 676, 710.
    - right of way, § 189.
- signals and warnings,
  - evidence of, §§ 624, 626.
    - sufficiency of, § 657.
  - in operation of trailers, § 256.
  - jury questions as to, §§ 674, 695.
  - negative testimony as to, § 656.
  - pedestrians, failure to give warning to, § 203.
  - regulations as to, validity of, § 63.
  - traffic signals, infra.
- silence, admissions by, § 637.
- similar accidents, evidence of, § 627.
- sister as member of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
- size, see "dimensions or combinations," supra.
- skidding,
  - as collision, within insurance, § 556.
  - as contributory negligence, §§ 424, 425.
    - conclusive inference, § 658.
  - as emergency, § 171.
  - as evidence of negligence, § 273.
  - care required to avoid, § 273.
    - toward occupant of car, § 275.
    - toward other vehicles, § 279.
    - toward pedestrians, § 278.
      - pedestrians on sidewalk, § 277.
  - evidence, § 632.
    - skid marks, § 630.
  - jury questions as to, § 686.
  - res ipsa loquitur, § 610.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- skid marks, see "tracks," infra.
- sled as a motor vehicle, § 3.
- sleep, see "driving while asleep," supra.
- slippery roads, jury questions as to, § 698.
- slowing down, failure as to, as negligence toward guest, § 243.
- smoke,
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations as to, § 85.
  - evidence of, § 629.
  - jury questions as to, §§ 699, 725.
  - noxious gases, supra.
  - obscuring view, care required, § 272.
- snow,
  - driving in, as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  - obscuring view, care required, § 272.
- social standing, evidence of, § 619.
- sole and unconditional ownership, see "insurance," supra.
- son-in-law as member of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
- sounding horn, see "signals and warnings," supra.
- special findings, § 743.
- special legislation, § 762.
- speed,
  - ability to stop within range of lights, § 263.
  - arrest, attempt to elude, as defense, § 806.
  - at common law, §§ 37, 259.
  - contributory negligence of passenger in acquiescing in, § 485.
  - curves and hills, § 342.
  - evidence, §§ 617, 630.
  - fire department as exempt from regulations as to, §§ 89, 760.
  - gross negligence, speed as, § 259.
  - guest, negligence toward, §§ 233, 243.
  - homicide as affected by, § 789.
  - instructions to jury as to, § 742.
  - jury question as to, §§ 68, 674.
  - motive for, evidence of, § 623.
  - opinion evidence as to, §§ 651, 652.
  - pedestrians, negligence toward, § 205.
  - police as exempt from regulations as to, §§ 89, 760.
  - proximate cause,
    - necessity that speed be, § 164.
    - of collision, § 259.
  - public officers as exempt from regulations as to, §§ 89, 760.
  - reckless driving, speed as affecting offense of, § 803.
  - regulations as to, see "speed regulations," infra.
  - street car tracks, motorist crossing, § 315.
  - trailers, operation of, § 256.
  - violation of regulations as to, see "speed regulations," infra.
  - wrong side of street or highway, proximate cause of collision, § 259.
- speed contests, see "races," supra.
- speed limit,
  - at common law, §§ 37, 259.
  - speed regulations, infra.
- speed regulations, §§ 37, 260.
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations, supra.
  - driving in excess of speed limits as negligence, § 262.
  - driving within speed limits as due care, § 261.
  - exemption from, § 40.
  - indefiniteness of, §§ 41 et seq., 807, 808.
  - motorcycles as within, § 6.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.

- speed regulations—continued.
  - municipalities, § 39.
    - power of, § 19.
  - parks, speed in, § 66.
  - public officials or employees as bound by, § 760.
  - purpose of, § 37.
  - reputation for, evidence of, § 618.
  - states, regulation by, §§ 16, 38.
    - in municipalities, § 38.
    - uniformity of, § 38.
  - validity, §§ 38 et seq.
  - violation of,
    - as contributory negligence, § 410.
    - as negligence, generally, § 262.
    - as negligence toward guest, § 233.
    - as reckless driving, § 803.
    - criminal offense of, §§ 806 et seq.
    - crossing street car tracks, § 315.
    - evidence as to, § 829.
    - homicide resulting from, §§ 788, 789.
    - indictment or information, § 818.
    - street cars, regulation as to, § 319.
  - warning as to, evidence of, § 624.
- splitting causes of action, § 585.
- spontaneous statements, evidence of, §§ 639 et seq.
- stalling car, § 333.
  - as evidence, § 333.
  - on railroad track, as negligence, § 173.
- standard of care, see "measure of care," supra.
- standing car, see "parking," supra.
- statement of claim in action involving, §§ 597 et seq.
- statements, evidence of, §§ 636 et seq.
- state officers, service on, in action against nonresident motorists, §§ 590, 591.
- state, regulation by, see "public regulation and control," supra.
- status, § 10.
  - as nuisance, see "nuisance," supra.
  - as tool or implement of trade, § 14.
  - dangerous instrumentality, supra.
  - use of highway, § 10.
- statute of limitations, § 581.
- statutes,
  - conflict between statutes and local regulations, supra.
  - constitutionality of, see "constitutional law," supra.
  - construction of statutes, supra.
  - crossing by pedestrians between crossings, § 214.
  - driving while intoxicated, §§ 767 et seq.
  - evidence of, § 617.
  - guest statutes, see "passengers and guests, injuries to," supra.
  - imposing liability upon owners, see "statutory liability of owner," infra.
  - indefiniteness, supra.
  - indictment in language of, § 811.
  - instruction in language of, § 740.
  - judicial notice of, § 604.
  - pleading of, § 601.
  - regulation by, see "public regulation and control," supra.
  - violation of, see "violation of law," infra.
- statutory liability of owner, for negligence of person intrusted with car, §§ 397 et seq.
  - acts for which owner is liable, § 402.
  - consent of owner to use by another, § 401.
  - construction and application, § 399.
  - extraterritorial operation of statute, § 405.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
statutory liability of owner—continued.
  liability for act of third person allowed by borrower to drive, § 404.
  liability of joint owners, § 400.
  liability to invitee or licensee of user, § 403.
  parties in action for injuries, § 592.
  statutes creating lien, § 406.
  use of car for purpose beyond consent, § 402.
  validity of statutes, § 398.
  who are "owners," § 400.
steam, conflict between statutes and local regulations as to, § 85.
steering gear defective,
  liability for injuries, § 255.
  liability to guest, § 235.
step-daughter as member of family within family purpose doctrine, § 370.
stepping in front of, see "darting in front of," supra.
stolen cars, see "theft," infra.
stopping,
  after accident, see "stopping after accident," infra.
  arterial or stop streets and highways, supra.
  care required, § 333.
  distance in which car can be stopped, supra.
  experimental evidence as to, § 644.
  failure to stop as negligence toward guest, § 243.
  horse frightened, stopping when, § 266.
  in passing street car, in absence of specific regulation, § 216.
  instead of passing to the left in emergency, § 176.
  in traffic,
    care required, § 281.
    districts governed by traffic signals, § 281.
    signals, § 281.
  on street car tracks, § 333.
  parking, see "parking," supra.
  regulations as to, see "public regulation and control," supra.
  stalling car, supra.
  sufficiency of evidence as to negligence in, § 657.
  wrong side of road, infra.
stopping after accident, §§ 780 et seq.
  constitutionality of statutes as to, § 785.
  construction of regulations as to, §§ 782 et seq.
  defenses, § 786.
  evidence, §§ 826, 829.
  indictment and information, § 813.
stopping, looking, and listening,
  at railroad crossings, § 321.
    contributory negligence in failure, § 437.
  by pedestrian, see "pedestrian," infra.
  contributory negligence of passenger, § 486.
  duty to maintain lookout, § 167.
  guest, negligence toward, § 243.
  in crossing street car tracks, § 314.
  in operation of trailers, § 256.
  street cars, infra.
stop streets, see "arterial or stop streets and highways," supra.
storage,
  discussion of, excluded, § 2.
  expense of, as part of damages for injury to car, § 753.
strangers meddling with machine causing injury, liability of owner, § 164.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
street cars,
  accidents near, emergency rule, § 172.
  injuries to persons alighting or waiting for, §§ 215 et seq.
    absence of specific regulation, § 216.
    alighting at stopping place other than intersection, § 218.
    application of rules, § 217.
    backing automobile, § 219.
    blind person, § 217.
    contributory negligence, § 445.
    moving car, passenger alighting from, § 218.
    passing from curb to street, § 219.
    person running after street car, § 219.
    prescribing distance for passing, § 221.
    prospective passengers, generally, § 219.
    speed regulations, § 222.
    transferring to another car, § 217.
    under specific regulation, §§ 220 et seq.
    waiting upon alighting, § 217.
    walking around rear or front of car upon alighting, § 217.
    warning, § 228.
  intersections, accidents at, §§ 311 et seq.
    application of emergency rule, § 311.
    care at, §§ 311 et seq.
    effect of violation of statute or ordinance, §§ 315, 319.
    last clear chance, § 320.
    looking and listening, §§ 314, 318.
    notice of approach, §§ 313, 317.
    right of way, recognition of, § 313.
    speed, §§ 315, 319.
    statutes or ordinances as to right of way, § 312.
    stopping, § 314.
  looking and listening, §§ 314, 318.
    jury question as to, § 716.
  negligence in passing standing street cars, § 216.
  questions of law and fact,
    colliding with street car, §§ 313, 716.
    contributory negligence, § 716.
    looking and listening, § 716.
    negligence of street cars at intersections, § 316.
    striking person alighting from or waiting for street car, §§ 216, 677, 707.
  regulations as to passing, §§ 65, 220.
    conflict between statutes and local regulations, § 80.
    enactments requiring warning, § 228.
    prescribing distance, § 221.
      applicability where car and automobile are going in opposite directions, § 221.
      violation of, as negligence, § 221.
    requiring absolute stop, §§ 223 et seq.
      applicability where passenger alights from moving street car, § 227.
      applicability where street car and automobile approach from opposite directions, § 225.
      duty of motorist, § 223.
      effect of violation, § 224.
      passenger alighting from moving street car, § 227.
      stops at other than regular stopping place, § 226.
      requiring slowing down or stopping, violation as negligence, § 222.
  violation of law, infra.
street intersections, see "intersections," supra.
streets, see "highways and streets," supra.
street sweepers, duty of motorist toward, § 194.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
substituted service on nonresident motorist, §§ 590, 591.
sufficiency of evidence, see "evidence," supra.
suits, see "actions," supra.
sun, driving when blinded by glare of, as negligence toward guest, § 243.
suppression of evidence, instruction as to, § 734.
surgeon, see "physician," supra.
surrounding circumstances, evidence of, §§ 626 et seq.
survival of actions, § 582.
swerving car striking pedestrian, § 208.
tail lights, see "lights," supra.
taking car without owner's consent, criminal liability for, § 809.
taking case from jury, § 667.
taxation,
  license fees and taxes, supra.
  wheel tax, infra.
taxicabs,
  authority of driver,
    jury question as to, § 672.
    sufficiency of proof of, § 660.
  conveying United States soldiers, exemption from licensing and registration provisions, § 109.
  defined, § 8.
  exclusion from particular highways and districts, § 50.
  liability of owner where driver has taken car to earn money for himself, § 381.
  parking regulations applicable to, § 61.
test as evidence, §§ 643 et seq.
testimony,
  evidence, supra.
  witnesses, infra.
testing equipment,
  by testing agencies, to determine sufficiency of lights, § 26.
    effect of use of light not tested as required by statute, § 30.
  evidence of, § 626.
theft,
  consent of owner, taking or using car without, § 809.
  criminal liability for, § 798.
  description of property in indictment, § 816.
  evidence as to, § 827.
  indictment or information, § 816.
  insurance against, see "theft insurance," infra.
  transporting or receiving stolen vehicles in intestate or foreign commerce, § 801.
theft insurance, § 567.
  description of car, § 574.
  false pretenses, obtaining property under, § 570.
  locking safety device, § 576.
  persons excepted from coverage, § 573.
  place of keeping car, § 575.
  pleading and proof as to value in action on, § 754.
  proof of loss, § 577.
  recovery of stolen car, § 578.
  waiver of breach of conditions, § 576.
  what constitutes theft, § 568.
    borrower diverting car, § 570.
    conversion by conditional vendee, § 572.
    conversion by mortgagor, § 571.
    intent to steal, § 569.
    licensee, § 568.
    obtaining property under false pretenses, § 570.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
theft insurance—continued.
  what constitutes theft—continued.
    open taking under claim of ownership, § 571.
    pilferage, § 568.
thoroughfare, see "highways and streets," supra.
time of valuation in estimating damages for injury to, § 747.
tires,
  blow-out, supra.
  defective, liability for injuries, § 254.
  fixing, see "repair vehicle in road," supra.
  width of, as affecting weight limitations, § 52.
toll roads,
  applicability of regulations relating to highways, § 66.
  power to exact tolls from automobiles, § 66.
  power to exclude automobiles, § 66.
  regulation of traffic on, §§ 16, 66.
tool or implement of trade, automobile as, § 14.
tort-feasors, joint liability of, §§ 345, 593.
tort or contract, action as one in, § 580.
towing car,
  as driving while intoxicated, § 772.
  care in, § 343.
  jury question as to negligence in, § 694.
  lights, § 36.
  towed car as "motor vehicle," § 772.
tracks of,
  evidence of, §§ 626, 630, 633.
  expert evidence as to, § 653.
  opinion evidence as to, § 649.
  opinion evidence as to speed based on, § 651.
tractors, liability of manufacturer, § 350a.
trade name, registration of car under, § 106.
traffic, judicial notice as to, § 604.
traffic officer,
  contributory negligence of, § 443.
  jury question as to injury to, §§ 680, 711.
  liability of motorist for striking, § 193.
traffic regulations, see "public regulation and control," supra.
traffic signals,
  change during crossing, §§ 293, 308.
  disregard of, § 310.
    as contributory negligence, § 436.
    jury questions as to, § 720.
    unauthorized signals, § 310.
  duty to check speed upon seeing, § 183.
  jury questions as to, §§ 690, 720.
  reliance upon, §§ 308 et seq.
    as between vehicles, § 309.
    as between vehicles and pedestrians, § 308.
    contributory negligence of pedestrian, § 453.
    jury question as to, § 720.
  right to assume that light marks limit of danger, § 183.
  stopping in obedience thereto, duty of cars proceeding in same direction, § 281.
trailers,
  care in the operation of, § 256.
    law of the road, § 256.
    lights, § 256.
    lookout, § 256.
    speed, § 256.
    warning signals, § 256.
  defective fasteners, § 257.
  equipment of, § 256.
  regulation of, § 256.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
transporting stolen vehicles in interstate or foreign commerce, § 801.
  indictment for, § 819.
traveling salesman, see "salesman," supra.
trespass, action of, for injuries, § 580.
trespassers, §§ 245 et seq.
  children as, § 246.
    attractive nuisance doctrine, § 247.
    liability for injuries to, § 246.
  guest at sufferance, injuries to, § 234.
  liabiilty for injuries to, §§ 245 et seq.
  meddling with machine causing injury, liability of owner, § 164.
trespass on the case, action as in nature of, § 580.
trial, §§ 665 et seq.
  conduct of, § 666.
  criminal prosecution, §§ 831 et seq.
  questions of law and fact, supra.
  submission to jury where nothing to show whether accident was caused by negligent driving or blowing out of tire, § 254.
trial by jury, see "jury trial," supra.
trolley poles, presumption as to proper location of, § 605.
truck driver, sufficiency of proof of authority of, § 660.
trucks, see "motor transportation companies," supra.
turning, §§ 323 et seq.
  between intersections,
    as contributory negligence, § 432.
    violation of ordinance, § 432.
  care in, §§ 323 et seq.
  cutting corners, § 326.
  duty to anticipate presence of others, § 168.
  into intersecting street, § 324.
    cutting corners, § 326.
    regulations as to line of traffic, § 325.
    warning, § 324.
  left, see "turning to left," infra.
  regulations as to line of traffic, 325.
  signals, § 327.
    effect of violation of statute or ordinance, § 327.
  violation of law, infra.
  warning required, § 323.
  without signalling, as contributory negligence, § 433.
turning to left,
  as contributory negligence, § 422.
  in emergency, §§ 174, 175, 176.
  in meeting and passing vehicles, § 322.
turnpikes, see "toll roads," supra.
twice in jeopardy, see "previous jeopardy," supra.
type of vehicle, evidence of, § 634.
unavoidable accident, liabiilty for, § 162.
uncertainty, see "indefiniteness," supra.
unincorporated associations, in what name car registered, § 103.
United States, see "Federal government," supra.
United States mails, contract to transport, liability to licensing and registration provisions, § 109.
  regulation of vehicle transporting, by state or municipality, § 21.
unlawful act, see "violation of law," infra.
unlicensed person, see "failure to comply with licensing and registration provisions," supra.
unreasonable searches and seizures, violation of guaranty against, licensing provisions, §§ 16, 762.
  requiring display of license plates, § 111.
unskillful operator, see "incompetent or inexperienced drivers," supra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
upsets.
  collision insurance, supra.
  proximate cause of, proof of, § 659.
  res ipsa loquitur, §§ 608, 609.
usage as evidence, § 618.
used car, evidence as to value of, § 748.
use of,
  as larceny, § 798.
  consent of owner, supra.
  legislative power to prohibit, § 756.
  loss of, see "loss of use," supra.
  owner's liability based on, see "owner;" "statutory liability," supra.
validity of law as to,
  constitutional law, supra.
  public regulation and control, supra.
value of,
  as basis of damages for injury to vehicle, §§ 745 et seq.
  evidence as to, § 748.
    larceny, prosecution for, § 827.
  pleading and proof as to, in action on insurance policy, § 754.
value of use of, see "loss of use," supra.
vehicle as defined in insurance laws, § 506.
vehicles proceeding in same direction,
  care required, § 280.
    streets of cities, § 280.
  passing, § 282.
    see also "passing," supra.
  stopping, see "stopping," supra.
venue, § 588.
verdict, § 743.
  against weight of evidence, discussion excluded, § 2.
vertigo, contributory negligence of persons subject to, § 469.
vigilant watch, ordinances requiring of street car operators, § 318.
violation of law,
  adequate brakes, statute requiring,
    as contributory negligence, § 428.
    as negligence, § 252.
  as negligence, generally, § 163.
  assault, effect on criminal liability for, § 763.
  civil or criminal proceedings, § 755.
  contributory negligence, generally, §§ 409, et seq. 421.
  criminal liability for, see "crimes," supra.
  crossing between intersections, statute prohibiting, § 455.
  curves and hills, statute governing operation on, § 341.
  duty to violate law, § 322.
  emergency, § 176.
  evidence as to, § 617.
    as conclusive, § 659.
    sufficiency of, § 657.
  homicide, supra.
  insurance matters, see "insurance," supra.
  intoxicated person, prohibiting driving by, § 181.
  invading province of jury by instruction as to, § 733.
  lights, regulations as to, § 253.
  parking regulations, §§ 339, 340.
  pleading of, § 601.
  proximate cause, §§ 164, 423.
    jury question as to § 669.
  right of way, law fixing, § 290.
    at arterial highways and stop streets, § 304.
  right to violate law, § 322.
  signal on backing, requirement of, § 331.
  signal on turning, requirement of, § 327.
  speed regulations, supra.
  stopping to avoid frightening horses, statute requiring, § 266.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
violation of law—continued.
  street cars, regulations as to,
    prescribing distance for passing, § 221.
    requiring absolute stop in approaching, § 224.
    slowing down or stopping in passing as negligence, § 222.
  turning regulations, § 411.
    signals on turning, § 327.
    turning between intersections, § 432.
  warning to pedestrian, statute requiring, § 203.
violation of law of the road, see "law of the road," supra.
visibility, see "obscured vision," supra.
walking along road, injury by automobile, §§ 201 et seq.
  see also "pedestrians," supra.
  absence of lights, § 204.
  care owing by motorist, § 210.
  contributory negligence, § 449.
  crowding pedestrian in passing, supra.
  driving on wrong side, § 207.
  duty to anticipate action of pedestrians, § 202.
  duty to anticipate presence, § 202.
  failure to give timely warning, § 203.
  failure to stop or slow up, § 205.
  inability to see, § 204.
  jury questions as to injuries, §§ 674, 704.
  object extending beyond car, § 209.
  on left side of road, § 210.
  speed, § 205.
  swerving car, § 208.
wanton negligence, see "wilful and wanton negligence," infra.
warnings, see "signals and warnings," supra.
wealth, evidence of, § 619.
weather, see "atmospheric conditions," supra.
weather bureau records, evidence of, § 629.
weight of car or load,
  as affecting use of highway, § 10.
  basing fees and taxes upon, § 131.
  conflict between statutes and local regulations as to, § 87.
  effect upon injuries from operation, § 258.
  evidence of, § 634.
  limitations upon weight, supra.

AUTOMOBILES—continued.
weight of evidence, see "evidence," supra.
wheel,
  application of res ipsa loquitur in case of loss of, § 608.
  defective, liability for injuries, § 254.
  expert evidence as to, § 653.
  marks of, see "tracks," supra.
  opinion evidence as to condition of, § 646.
wheel tax, enforcement of, by fine, § 755.
width of, see "dimensions or combinations," supra.
wife, see "husband and wife," supra.
wilful and wanton negligence,
  contributory negligence as defense, § 414.
  parking on wrong side of street or highway, § 335.
  within guest statutes, see "passengers and guests, statutes as to liability to," supra.
windshield, obstruction of,
  care required, § 271.
  jury question as to proximate cause, § 669.
  obscured vision generally, see "obscured vision," supra.
windshield wiper, absence of, liability to guest, § 235.
witnesses,
  credibility of witnesses, supra.
  criminal prosecution, § 834.
  expert witnesses, §§ 648, 653.
  numerical preponderance of, § 654.
  opinions of, §§ 646 et seq.
  positive and negative testimony, § 656.
  value of car, testimony as to, § 748.
words and phrases, see "definitions and descriptive terms," supra.
workmen in road, see "laborers," supra.
workmen's compensation, discussion of, excluded, § 2.
wrong side of road,
  driving on,
    duty toward pedestrians, §§ 207, 210.
    guest, negligence toward, § 243.
    injury to person alighting from or waiting for street car, § 216.
    rear vehicle attempts to pass on wrong side, § 284.
  parking on, see "parking," supra.
youth, see "operators—age of," supra.

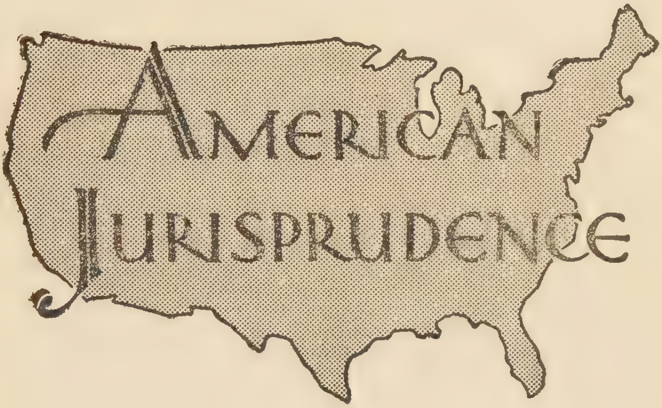
END OF VOLUME

1963

CUMULATIVE SUPPLEMENT

TO

VOLUME 5



AMERICAN JURISPRUDENCE

For Use July 1963—July 1964

New Developments in the Law

New Analytical Text—Hundreds of New Sections—New Factual Footnotes

References to New Cases and Annotations

★ ★ ★

New Material is Completely Indexed in Supplement to General Index Volumes

KEYED TO

AM JUR
LEGAL FORMS ANNOTATED
PLEADING AND PRACTICE FORMS ANNOTATED
PROOF OF FACTS ANNOTATED

BANCROFT-WHITNEY COMPANY · SAN FRANCISCO · CALIFORNIA
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY
ROCHESTER · NEW YORK
1963

Copyright © 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962

by

JURISPRUDENCE PUBLISHERS, INC.

Copyright © 1963

by

JURISPRUDENCE PUBLISHERS, INC.

AMERICAN JURISPRUDENCE

VOLUME 5

1963 SUPPLEMENT

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Titles and sections in this supplement follow the order of the original text. The omission of a title or of sections within titles indicates there has been no new material to add thereto.

New Footnote Material. Later cases, annotations and propositions supporting or illustrating the application of the original text are indicated thus: "p. 12, n. 9."

New Text. New text is indicated by the larger type. The more important developments in the law since publication of the original text are incorporated under new section headings, in text and footnote style. A list of the new sections added to each title appears at the beginning of that title.

New text material added to original sections is indicated by the following statement: "Page 12. Add, following Note 10." This means that the new text statement is to be read into the original text on the page indicated, following the note number indicated. Other new text material in an original section is indicated by the statement, "Add new paragraph at end of section," and by other similar statements.

Index. The new material in the supplement is indexed in the cumulative supplements to Vols. 1–4 of the General Index.

ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT
(Continued)

New sections added in this Supplement:

§ 768.1. Taking Case from Jury.

§ 788.1. Waiver of Right.

§ 846.1. Effect of Release or Modification of Lien to Which Property Was Subject When Attachment Was Levied.

§ 656. Constitutionality of Garnishment Statutes.

Page 13. Add, following note 18: A statute authorizing foreign attachment against foreign corporations, construed as authorizing such attachment in an action by a nonresident plaintiff upon a foreign cause of action, does not, as applied to a foreign corporation not doing or qualified to do business in the state but owning property in the state (stock in domestic corporations), deprive it of property without due process of law.[18.1]

No unconstitutional deprivation of property without due process of law involved in the action of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin in denying to a German corporation the right to priority of lien of foreign attachment, by garnishing in the hands of a local bank a fund belonging to a German citizen (principal defendant) who had been declared bankrupt by a German court, as against the claims of local intervening creditors, where the effect of sustaining the attachment would have been to remove the fund to a foreign country there to be administered in favor of foreign creditors, contrary to the public policy of Wisconsin forbidding discrimination against its own citizens.[18.2]

It has been held that attachment pursuant to local law, at the instance of a foreign creditor, of bonds of a foreign corporation, for a debt of their nonresident individual owner, does not deny such owner either the equal protection of the laws or the due process of law guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, where such bonds had been deposited with a custodian in the state, under the direction of the state court, in the exercise of admittedly lawful powers, and could not be removed therefrom without ob taining the authority of the state court—such authority not being affected by the fact that the bonds were registered in the name of the attachment debtor's minor children, they being so registered solely because of the previous action of the state court.[18.3]

[18.1] Standard Oil Co. v. Superior Court, 44 Del 538, 62 A2d 454, 14 ALR2d 405, app dismd without op 336 US 930, 93 L ed 1090, 69 S Ct 738, 739, reh den 336 US 955, 93 L ed 1109, 69 S Ct 879.
Anno: 14 ALR2d 432.

[18.2] Disconto Geselischaft v. Umbreit, 208 US 570, 52 L ed 625, 28 S Ct 337.
Anno: 14 ALR2d 444.

[18.3] De Bearn v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. 233 US 24, 58 L ed 833, 34 S Ct 584.
Anno: 14 ALR2d 446.

§ 658. Garnished Property as Impounded.

Am Jur cited in Marvins Credit, Inc. v Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. (Mun Ct App Dist Col) 130 A2d 777.

§ 659. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Midland Loan Finance Co. v. Kisor, 206 Minn 134, 287 NW 869

p. 14, n. 7. Cole v Randall Park Holding Co. 201 Md 616, 95 A2d 273, 41 ALR2d 1084.

§ 662. Generally.

Am Jur cited in United States v Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (CA4th NC) 237 F2d 137.

Johnson v Dutch Mill Dairy, Inc. 237 Minn 117, 54 NW2d 1.

R. C. L. quoted in Valley Bank & T. Co. v. Parthum, 47 Ariz. 496, 56 P. (2d) 1342, rehearing denied in 48 Ariz. 87, 59 P. (2d) 335.

§ 665. Right to Discharge Prior Liens.

Am Jur cited in Hamilton Nat. Bank v. Long, 189 Tenn 562, 226 SW2d 293.

§ 669. Where No Property or Credits of Defendant Held at Time of Garnishment.

Am Jur cited in Everson v. Atlas Tie Co. 73 Idaho 91, 245 P2d 773.

§ 673. Liability for Interest.

Page 21. Add, following note 9: A successful plaintiff suing to enforce an attachment of a bank account has been held entitled to interest only from the date of his judgment, and not from that of the attachment.[9.1]

[9.1] Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 A.L.R. 1259.

§ 675. Liability as Limited by Ignorance of Service of Garnishment.

p. 22, n. 17.
It appears, however, that the account of a customer of a foreign branch of a bank is not subject to attachment or garnishment served on the parent bank at the home office. Anno: 136 ALR 491.

§ 678. Liability as Limited by Surrender of Payment under Legal Compulsion.

Am Jur cited in Sequoyah Feed & Supply Co. v First Nat. Bank 223 Ark 576, 267 SW2d 310.

§ 682. Duty to Make Defense or to Notify Defendant.

p. 24, n. 16. Cole v. Randall Park Holding Co. 201 Md 616, 95 A2d 273, 41 ALR2d 1084.

§ 685. Duty where Defendant Succeeds in Suit, and as to Surplus.

Am Jur cited in Standard Ins. Co. v Hodge (Okla) 294 P2d 567.

§ 694. Generally.

p. 31, n. 11. See also Vol. 4, § 258 (Supplement).

§ 696. Generally.

Am Jur cited in Sequoyah Feed & Supply Co. v. Robinson, 221 Ark 660, 255 SW2d 425.

§ 703. Generally.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:749.

§ 706. Pleadings, Motions, and Rules.

p. 39, n. 15.
Where a garnishee has admitted indebtedness to the defendant but alleges that the nature of the indebtedness renders it exempt from garnishment and the plaintiff has filed a traverse attacking the exemption statute as unconstitutional and alleging that defendant is not entitled to the exemption, the questions for determination upon such answer and traverse relate only to the claimed exemption from garnishment and do not include any question as to liability of the defendant to the plaintiff in attachment or as to the assignability of the claim giving rise to such indebtedness. Smith v. Georgia Granite Corp. 186 Ga. 634, 198 S. E. 772, 119 ALR 550.

§ 711. With Respect to Judgment in Main Action and in Garnishment.

Am Jur quoted in Seaporcel Metals, Inc. v Ciccone, — RI —, 166 A2d 130.

Am Jur cited in L. C. Jones Trucking Co. v. Superior Oil Co. 68 Wyo 384, 234 P2d 802.

p. 41, n. 17. Anno: 75 ALR 1359.

p. 41, n. 18 Anno: 75 ALR 1359

§ 719 Surrender or Payment of Garnished Property of Debtor to Officer or into Court.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1056.

§ 720. Investiture of Garnished Property in Receiver or Trustee.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1103.

§ 722. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:991–2:998.

§ 723. Form, Contents, Sufficiency, and Amendment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:992–2:998.

Page 46. Add, following note 17: And it has been held that the affidavit in a garnishment proceeding did not conform with the provision authorizing its issuance in aid of judgment but was worded in accordance with the provision authorizing its issuance where the plaintiff sues for a debt, in which latter case the plaintiff is required to give a bond, does not affect the validity of the garnishment where no one raised the point that no bond had been given and everyone proceeded upon the theory that the garnishment was issued in aid of a judgment.[17.1]

[17.1] Holliday v. Salling, 54 Ariz 496, 97 P (2d) 221, 126 ALR 145.

§ 724. — Setting Forth Claim against Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:992–2:998.

§ 725. — Averment of Property of, or Debts Owing to, Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:992–2:998.

§ 726. — Setting Forth Grounds for Garnishment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:991–2:998.

§ 727. Service on Garnishee.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:882, 2:887, 2:901, 2:999-2:1010, 2:1012–2:1014; 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:721, 8:725, 8:741.

Page 48. Add, following note 16: Where "personal service" is required in garnishment proceedings, leaving a summons of garnishment at the residence of the garnishee is not "personal service."[16.5]

[16.5] Anno: 172 ALR 523.

Page 48. Add at end of section: Questions as to what persons may serve garnishment process, are generally subject to statutory regulation. In any event, the relatively few cases indicate that the problem is largely one of determining whether the particular officer or individual who made service of the garnishment process was within the category of those authorized to do so by the applicable statutes.[19.5] The practice statutes and rules of practice in many jurisdictions variously authorize a summons to be served, and in some instances authorize service of process in general, by any person, persons over an authorized age, electors of a county, disinterested persons, etc.[19.51] Some courts have held, however, that such a statute could not be utilized for service of a process in garnishment.[19.52] In other cases, service of process in garnishment by private individuals has been upheld.[19.53]

[19.5] Anno: 75 ALR2d 1438.

It has been held that service of a writ of garnishment by a private individual, rather than by the sheriff as required by statute, is void, and no jurisdiction is acquired thereunder to render a judgment against the garnishee. Mendoza v Acme Transfer & Storage Co. 66 NM 32, 340 P2d 1080, 75 ALR2d 1433.

[19.51] See 42 Am Jur, Process § 25.

[19.52] Anno: 75 ALR2d 1443.

The provision of the Rules of Civil Procedure permitting process, "excepting writs of attachment . . .," to be served by any person not a party to the action, has been held not to permit a writ of garnishment to be served by one other than the sheriff, to whom the writ is required by statute to be addressed. Mendoza v Acme Transfer & Storage Co. 66 NM 32, 340 P2d 1080, 75 ALR2d 1433.

[19.53] Anno: 75 ALR2d 1444.

§ 728. Form, Contents, and Sufficiency of Writ or Summons.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:882. 2:887, 2:901, 2:999–2:1107, 2:1010; 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:721, 8:725, 8:741.

§ 729. Service on Officer of Garnishee Corporation.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:887, 2:1010, 2:1011; 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:721, 8:742.

Page 49. Add, following note 7: By the phrase "any other officer," in a statute providing that to attach a bank deposit a copy of the writ and notice must be left "with the manager or any other officer" of the bank at the office or branch at which the deposit account is carried, is intended any representative of the bank whose duties, functions, and responsibilities are such that service upon him will reasonably inform the bank of such service, even though he is not an officer, but only an employee with executive responsibilities.[7.1] Service of garnishee process upon a corporation in the manner prescribed by law charges it with full knowledge thereof; and where a bank conducts its business through several departments, service upon one department is notice to all.[7.2]

[7.1] Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839. 110 A.L.R. 1259.

Such a requirement is satisfied by service upon an assistant cashier who, though not an officer, is the person designated by the bank to see that proper notice of any attachment is carried through the bank. Walters v. Bank of America National Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 A.L.R. 1259.

[7.2] Kossover v. Willimantic Trust Co. 122 Conn. 166, 187 A. 907. 107 A.L.R. 693.

§ 730. Service on Member of Garnishee Firm.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:887. 2:1010; 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:721.

§ 731. Return.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:887, 2:1027, 2:1030; 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:721.

§ 732. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1015. 2:1016, 2:1021.

§ 734. Waiver of Defects.

Page 50. Add following note 19: In ordinary garnishment proceedings it is readily observable that matters in personam may be easily waived or relinquished by the garnishee through a general appearance, answer, answer to interrogatories, or similar general pleading or participation in the proceedings. He may, therefore, easily renders himself amenable to the jurisdiction of the court and waive or relinquish defects or omissions having to do with matters of process, etc., which affect him alone, by appearing generally and making a disclosure respecting his obligations to the principal defendant.[19.5] By general pleading a garnishee may waive a right to assert that he is not amenable to the jurisdiction of the court by reason of a defect or irregularity occurring subsequent to service of process upon him, if the defect or irregularity concerns a matter affecting his personal status and does not involve avoidance of an express provision of a statute which is jurisdictional in nature or imposes in that regard a condition to the further exercise of jurisdiction over him, or the rendition of judgment against him.[19.51] If jurisdiction is otherwise established and a valid judgment against the principal defendant has been rendered, a judgment against a garnishee will be sustained even though he became amenable to the jurisdiction of the court, through general pleading, by a waiver or other relinquishment of the right to object to some act or omission which related only to jurisdiction over his person, or affected only his personal status as a party.[19.52] If all that is lacking in a garnishment proceeding is jurisdiction of the person of a garnishee who is a nonresident of the state, the garnishee may, by general pleading, waive the right to object upon that ground.[19.53]

In garnishments where the jurisdiction over the res is the principal concern the garnishee cannot, by general pleading, waive or relinquish the necessity for the existence or performance of the statutory requirements for obtaining jurisdiction, whatever may be his power over matters personal to him. The conditions of the statute precedent to the acquirement of jurisdiction of the res must be complied with, whether relating to the initial steps, issuance and service of process and returning evidence thereof, intermediate procedure, requirements relating to either the principal defendant or the garnishee, the final determination of the rights of the parties and the status of the res, and the rendition of a judgment.[19.55]

Garnishment in which the principal defendant cannot be served personally is, of course, the subject of special statutory provisions. It includes proceedings against nonresident principal defendants and those who for other reasons cannot be personally served, and in the decided cases of this character instances of matters which are considered susceptible of waiver by the garnishee through generally pleading are rare, if not nonexistent, although in theory the rule permitting a garnishee to waive something which can affect him alone may subsist.[19.57]

[19.5] Coffee v Haynes, 124 Cal 561, 57 P 482, 71 Am St Rep 99.

Cromwell v Royal Canadian Ins. Co. 49 Md 366, 33 Am Rep 258; Peters v League, 13 Md 58, 71 Am Dec 622; Cockey v Leister, 12 Md 124, 71 Am Dec 588.

People's Wayne County Bank v Stott, 246 Mich 540, 224 NW 352, 64 ALR 427.

Marx v Hart, 166 Mo 503, 66 SW 260, 89 Am St Rep 715.

Bristol v Brent, 36 Utah 108, 103 P 1076, 140 Am St Rep 804, 21 Ann Cas 1125.

Anno: 41 ALR2d 1097–1109.

[19.51] Anno: 41 ALR2d 1109.

[19.52] Anno: 41 ALR2d 1111–1114.

[19.53] Anno: 41 ALR2d 1114.

[19.55] United Collieries, Inc. v Martin, 248 Ky 808, 60 SW2d 125, 89 ALR 971.

Friedman v First Nat. Bank, 39 Okla 486, 135 P 1069, 49 LRA NS 548

Bristol v Brent, 36 Utah 108, 103 P 1076, 140 Am St Rep 804, 21 Ann Cas 1125.

Pennsylvania R. Co. v Rogers, 52 W Va 450, 44 SE 300, 62 LRA 178.

Anno: 41 ALR2d 1118–1136.

[19.57] National Bank v Furtick, 16 Del (2 Marv) 35, 42 A 479, 44 LRA 115, 69 Am St Rep 99.

Cole v Randall Park Holding Co. 201 Md 616, 95 A2d 273, 41 ALR2d 1084; Cromwell v Royal Canadian Ins Co. 49 Md 366, 33 Am Rep 258; Stone v Magruder (Md) 10 Gill & J 383, 32 Am Dec 177; Shivers v Wilson (Md) 5 Harr & J 130, 9 Am Dec 497.

McKinney v Mills, 80 Minn 478, 83 NW 452, 81 Am St Rep 278

Bristol v Brent, 36 Utah 108, 103 P 1076, 140 Am St Rep 804, 21 Ann Cas 1125.

Dorr v Rohr, 82 Va 359, 3 Am St Rep 106.

Anno: 41 ALR2d 1097, 1136–1155.

Under the rule that pleading by a garnishee in an attachment does not necessarily amount to a manifestation of consent to jurisdiction, a motion to quash on jurisdictional grounds may be filed either by the garnishee or by the defendant, after pleas by the garnishee. Cole v Randall Park Holding Co. 201 Md 616, 95 A2d 273, 41 ALR2d 1084.

It has been held that a foreign corporation not subject to suit as a garnishee within the state does not confer jurisdiction by filing a plea of nulla bona and answering interrogatories. Cole v Randall Park Holding Co. 201 Md 616, 95 A2d 273, 41 ALR2d 1084.

p. 51, n. 1. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1118–1155.

§ 735. — Defective Service.

p. 51, n. 2. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1100 et seq.

It has been held that by a general appearance or answer, or their equivalents, a garnishee waives or relinquishes the right to assert that by reason of a matter connected with process or service of process he did not become amenable to the jurisdiction of the court, if it can be ascertained from the record that jurisdiction otherwise is established and the matter affects only his person or personal status as a party to the proceeding. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1100.

p. 51, n. 4. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1123–1129, 1148–1155.

It has been held that a garnishee may not voluntarily waive or accept service of the proceedings required by law to make a seizure of effects or property in his hands. Cole v Randall Park Holding Co. 201 Md 616, 95 A2d 273, 41 ALR2d 1084.

It has been held that, because in garnishment proceedings jurisdiction to adjudicate respecting the res can be acquired only by compliance with conditions precedent thereto imposed by the statute, a general appearance, answer, or pleading by the garnishee will not operate to cure defects in the process or service, jurisdictional in nature, so as to give the court issuing the process such jurisdiction. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1123.

p. 51, n. 5. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1104.

§ 736. — Defects and Irregularities in Petition or Affidavit for Garnishment.

p. 51, n. 6. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1099.

p. 51, n. 7. Shivers v Wilson (Md) 5 Harr & J 130, 9 Am Dec 497.

Anno: 41 ALR2d 1119, 1141.

§ 737. — By Appearance.

p. 51, n. 8. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1099–1118.

p. 51, n. 9. The primary purpose of an attachment to bring the defendant into court has been held served where the defendant appears and pleads, and the case proceeds as an ordinary action at law, with the attachment providing a fund for the payment of the plaintiff's claim, if he prevails. Cole v Randall Park Holding Co. 201 Md 616, 95 A2d 273, 41 ALR2d 1084.

p. 51, n. 10. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1114-1118.

Page 51. Add following note 10: The fact that a garnishee has in response to garnishment process entered a general appearance or pleading cannot be construed to waive or relinquish his right, under the garnishment statute and procedure, to further notice of or the performance of other acts in reference to subsequent proceedings, conditional to a final adjudication of the parties' rights and liabilities and affecting the existence, status, or disposition of the res.[10.5]

[10.5] Anno: 41 ALR2d 1129.

§ 738. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 739. Judgment and Termination of Suit.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

p. 52, n. 15. Annotation: 115 A.L.R. 598.

§ 740. Effect of Appeal.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

Am Jur quoted in Nelson v. Kittelson, 71 SD 535, 27 NW2d 200

p. 53, n. 3.

According to some cases, in order to justify the garnishee in refusing to pay the money over to the defendant on demand, the plaintiff must have caused the issuance of a supersedeas and given supersedeas bond. Annotation: 115 ALR 608.

p. 53, n. 4. The fact that the time for the taking of an appeal has not yet expired, or that the garnishee has been notified by the garnishor of the latter's intention to take an appeal, short of actual appeal perfected before such demand, has been held not to be a sufficient excuse for the garnishee's failure to turn the money over to the defendant upon demand. Annotation: 115 ALR 608.

After a judgment adverse to the plaintiff in garnishment, the garnishee may not withhold the money from the principal defendant, but must on demand turn it over to the defendant, except where at the time of demand the plaintiff has actually taken and perfected an appeal from such judgment, and except where the garnishment lien is continued by proper court order or stay of proceedings. Annotation: 115 A.L.R. 607, 608.

p. 53, n. 5. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, Vol. 3, p. 201, § 548.

§ 741. Abandonment, Withdrawal, and Release.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 742. Death of Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

p. 54, n. 17. Anno: 131 ALR 1146.

§ 743. Dissolution of Defendant Corporation.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 744. Insolvency and Bankruptcy.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 745. Dissolution or Vacation on Motion.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 746. — Who May Make Motion.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 747. Grounds of Motion.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 748. — Lack of Jurisdiction.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 749. — Defects and Irregularities in Proceedings.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

p. 56, n. 1. Anno: 41 ALR2d 1143.

§ 750. — Nonliability of Property to Garnishment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1042–2:1052–2:1055.

§ 751. — Nonliability of Garnishee to Process.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1052–2:1055.

§ 752. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1013, 2:1019, 2:1020 2:1032 2:1034 2:1037 2:1050, 2:1051: 18 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 18:171, 18:173, 18:174.

§ 754. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1035–2:1037, 2:1039, 2:1049.

§ 755. Verification.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1035–2:1037, 2:1039, 2:1049.

§ 756. Duty of Garnishee to Answer Interrogatories.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1035–2:1037, 2:1039, 2:1049.

Page 59. Add, following note 18: It appears to be a general rule that a garnishee is not confined in his answer to a process of garnishment, to statements of matters as to which he has personal knowledge, but that he may properly incorporate in such answer allegations which are based upon information and belief.[18.1] [18.1] Musolino LoConte Co. v. Costa, 304 Mass 253, 23 NE(2d) 155, 125 ALR 250.

Anno: 125 ALR 253.

§ 757. Disclosure of Assets of Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1035–2:1037, 2:1039, 2:1049.

§ 758 Disclosure of Defenses to Garnishment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1035–2:1037, 2:1039, 2:1049.

§ 759. Compelling Garnishee to Answer.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1036, 2:1037.

§ 760. Waiver of Right to Have Disclosure.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1036, 2:1037.

§ 761. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1036, 2:1037.

p. 60, n. 12.
An answer upon information and belief by one summoned as trustee of the goods, effects, and credits of the principal defendant does not prevent contradiction by allegation and proof by plaintiff under a statute providing that the answer and statements of a trustee on oath shall be considered as true in determining how far he is chargeable. Musolino LoConte Co. v. Costa, 304 Mass 253, 23 NE(2d) 155, 125 ALR 250.

Page 60. Add, following note 14: As a general proposition, allegations in a garnishee's answer based upon information and belief have been accorded such weight as to entitle the garnishee, in the absence of contradiction, to a discharge, where the statements tended to show that there was nothing due from the garnishee to the debtor.[14.1]

[14.1] Anno: 125 ALR 255.
An answer by one summoned as trustee of the goods and effects of the principal defendant may be made upon information and belief, and in the absence of qualification upon examination by interrogatories, or of contradiction by allegation and proof of the true facts, such answer will be conclusive. Musolino LoConte Co. v. Costa, 304 Mass 253, 23 NE(2d) 155, 125 ALR 250.

§ 762. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1043–2:1047.

§ 763. Effect of Failure to Take Issue to Disclosure.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1045–2:1047.

Am Jur cited in Phelps v. Schmuck, 151 Kan 521, 100 P2d 67.

p. 61, n. 3. Coward v Barnes, — Ark —, 334 SW2d 894, 82 ALR2d 854.

§ 764. Exceptions by Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1045–2:1047.

§ 768. —Under Statutory Provision.

p. 63, n. 20.
Waiver of benefit of statutory provisions, see Brenizer v. Supreme Council, R. A. 141 NC 409, 53 SE 835, 6 LRA NS 235.

§ 768.1. (New text.) Taking Case from Jury.

The trial court in a proper case may direct a verdict,[21] and substantially the same rules apply to directed verdicts in favor of the plaintiff as apply to such verdicts in favor of the defendant.[22] A verdict may be directed when, disregarding conflicting evidence and indulging every legitimate inference which may be drawn from the evidence in favor of the party against whom the verdict is directed, it can be said that there is no evidence sufficiently substantial to support a verdict in favor of such party if such a verdict should be rendered.[23] Where the scintilla rule does not prevail, as is true in most jurisdictions,[24] the propriety of directing a verdict is not affected by the presence of a scintilla of evidence in support of the case of the opposing party.[25]

[21] Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 A.L.R. 1259.

A motion for directed verdict may be granted upon motion of the plaintiff where, upon the whole evidence, the cause of action alleged in the complaint is supported and no substantial support is given to the defense alleged by the defendant. Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 ALR 1259.

[22] Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 A.L.R. 1259.

[23] Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 A.L.R. 1259.

[24] See TRIAL.

[25] Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal2d 46, 69 P2d 839, 110 ALR 1259.

§ 771. Estoppel against Garnishee to Make Defenses.

Am Jur quoted in Bear Creek Co. v. James, 115 CalApp2d 725, 252 P2d 723.

§ 774. General Denial of Indebtedness to, or Possession of Effects of, Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1033, 2:1041.

§ 778. Exemption of Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1038.

p. 67, n. 17. Congress Candy Co. v. Farmer, 73 ND 174, 12 NW2d 796, 150 ALR 1316.

§ 779. Adverse Claim to Garnished Property Generally.

Page 68. Add, following note 3: The view has been taken that the fact that funds in an attached bank deposit are the property of a third person is not available as a defense to the bank.[3.1]

[3.1] Walters v. Bank of America (Cal) 59 P (2d) 983, 106 ALR 55, modified on rehearing in 9 Cal(2d) 46, 69 P(2d) 839, 110 ALR 1259.

§ 780. Assignment by Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1040.

Am Jur quoted in Hamilton v. Temple, 60 Ohio App 94, 19 NE(2d) 650 (notes 5, 10).

§ 786. Generally.

RCL cited in Brown v. Maguire's Real Estate Agency, 343 Mo 336, 121 SW(2d) 754.

p. 72, n. 15. Henderson v. Northwest Air Lines, 231 Minn 503, 43 NW2d 786 (holding that a garnishee's right to a setoff includes all causes of action arising out of contract existing at the time the action was commenced even if arising under contracts other than that upon which the plaintiff bases his claim for garnishment).

Plante v. M. Shortell & Son, 92 NH 38, 24 A2d 498, 139 ALR 1325

Anno: 57 ALR2d 702 et seq.

Page 73. Add, following note 16: A bank may set off against the amount of a deposit that has been attached or garnished the amount of any matured indebtedness due it by the depositor.[16.1] The bank's intention to apply a credit of the depositor to an indebtedness owing by him to the bank is sufficiently manifested when it pleads such application in diminution of its liability as garnishee.[16.2] The right of setoff may be exercised prior to or after the service of the writ of garnishment. It is not necessary that book entries be made prior to the service.[16.3]

[16.1] Walters v. Bank of America (Cal) 59 P(2d) 983, 106 ALR 55, modified on rehearing in 9 Cal(2d) 46, 69 P(2d) 839, 110 ALR 1259.

Annotation: 106 ALR 62, s. 110 ALR 1268.

[16.2] Walters v. Bank of America (Cal) 59 P(2d) 983, 106 ALR 55, modified on rehearing in 9 Cal(2d) 46, 69 P(2d) 839, 110 ALR 1259.

[16.3] Annotation: 106 ALR 64, s. 110 ALR 1268

p. 73, n. 17. Anno: 57 ALR2d 708.

An abuse of discretion has been held not committed by the trial court in a garnishment action in refusing the guarnishee an equitable setoff with respect to an unmatured obligation of the principal defendant to the garnishee, where it does not appear that the principal defendant is insolvent or that the garnishee will have difficulty in collecting the obligation upon maturity. Mattek v Hoffman, 272 Wis 503, 76 NW2d 300, 57 ALR2d 696.

§ 787. Availability of Setoff or Counterclaim with Respect to Time of Maturity or Time of Acquisition of Claim.

Am Jur cited in Johnson v. Dutch Mill Dairy, Inc. 237 Minn 117, 54 NW2d 1.

p. 73, n. 1. Anno: 57 ALR2d 711.

p. 73, n. 2. Anno: 57 ALR2d 708.

That the garnishment statute expressly extends to all debts "due or to become due" to the principal defendant has been held not to authorize the garnishee to set off claims against the principal defendant which have not yet matured. Mattek v Hoffman, 272 Wis 503, 76 NW2d 300, 57 ALR2d 696.

A garnishee has been held not entitled to a setoff with respect to an obligation which, though absolutely due from the principal defendant to the garnishee, is payable in the future at a time subsequent to the service of the garnishee process. Mattek v Hoffman, 272 Wis 503, 76 NW2d 300, 57 ALR2d 696

Page 73. Add, following note 2: There is a difference of opinion as to the right of a bank to set off an immature indebtedness of a depositor against the latter's account which has been attached or garnished by a creditor. One line of authorities holds that it may not be so set off.[2.1] Other cases hold to the contrary.[2.2]

[2.1] Annotation: 106 A.L.R. 65, s. 110 A.L.R. 1268.

[2.2] Annotation: 106 A.L.R. 65, s. 110 A.L.R. 1268.

p. 74, n. 3. Annotation: 106 A.L.R. 68, s. 110 A.L.R. 1268.

Page 74. Add, following note 3: Other cases take a contrary view.[3.1] In some states the right to setoff after insolvency is denied at law but permitted in equity.[3.2]

Where the claim of the garnishee against the debtor consisted of notes not matured at the date the garnishment process was served, the trend has been to deny the garnishee a setoff, at least in the absence of special circumstances.[3.5] The same has been true where the garnishee sought to offset his potential liability as surety for the debtor, where there has been no default by the debtor as of the date of garnishment.[3.51] Nor has the garnishee been able to use by way of setoff a claim against the debtor which at the time of the garnishment was only in the process of being acquired by the garnishee, whose ownership thereof was then incomplete or prospective.[3.52] Such results are clearly consonant with the general rule of disallowing any setoff not consisting of an enforceable demand at the time the garnishment took place.[3.53]

The garnishee has generally been allowed a setoff where prior to the service on him of the garnishment the debtor had defaulted on notes for which the garnishee had gone surety,[3.54] on other obligations which the garnishee was compelled to discharge,[3.55] on contractual and similar obligations due the garnishee,[3.56] as well as for damages incurred by the garnishee as a result of the debtor's breach of contract with him.[3.57] The fact that a garnishee's claim had been reduced to judgment after garnishment had been served has ordinarily been found immaterial on the validity of the claim as a setoff.[3.58] One of the most elementary objections to permitting a party, whether a garnishee or not, to have a setoff is the fact that it consists of a claim which is contingent or unliquidated. Hence, uncertainty whether in fact the debtor would ever be liable to the garnishee in the manner or amount alleged, and the anticipatory character of the claim of the garnishee have caused courts to reject setoffs urged by garnishees.[3.59]

3.1 Annotation: 106 A.L.R. 69, s. 110 A.L.R. 1268.

3.2 Annotation: 106 A.L.R. 70, s. 110 A.L.R. 1268.

3.5 Anno: 57 ALR2d 703–706.

However, both the debtor's insolvency or nonresidence and statutory provisions have been found to warrant the allowance of the garnishee's note against the debtor as an offset to his liability, even though the note was not due when the garnishment service was effected. Anno: 57 ALR2d 705.

3.51 Anno: 57 ALR2d 708.

3.52 Anno: 57 ALR2d 716.

3.53 Anno: 37 ALR2d 703.

3.54 Anno: 57 ALR2d 710.

3.55 Wanzer v Truly (US) 17 How 584, 15 L ed 216.

Anno: 57 ALR2d 713.

3.56 Van Camp Hardware & Iron Co. v Plimpton, 174 Mass 208, 54 NE 538, 75 Am St Rep 296.

Anno: 57 ALR2d 706.

3.57 North Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v St. Louis Ore & Steel Co. 152 US 596, 38 L ed 565, 14 S Ct 710.

Anno: 57 ALR2d 712.

3.58 Anno: 57 ALR2d 716.

3.59 Anno: 57 ALR2d 717.

§ 788. Necessity of Pleading Set-off or Counterclaim Specially.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:742.

§ 788.1. (New text.) Waiver of Right.

The bank may waive its right to apply a depositor's account to his indebtedness to the bank as against a garnishing or attaching creditor.[4.1] A bank cannot defeat an attachment of a deposit by assuming to apply it by way of setoff to a note then due where, without any further deposit having been depositor up to the full amount of the deposit and recredits the depositor's account with the amount of the deposit and debits a like amount on the note.[4.2]

4.1 Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 A.L.R. 1259.

Annotation: 106 A.L.R.70, s. 110 A.L.R. 1269.

4.2 Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 9 Cal. (2d) 46, 69 P. (2d) 839, 110 A.L.R. 1259.

Annotation: 110 A.L.R. 1269.

This is contrary to the conclusion reached on a previous hearing of the same case in Walters v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. (Cal) 59 P(2d) 983, 106 ALR 55, modified on rehearing in 9 Cal(2d) 46, 69 P(2d) 839, 110 ALR 1259.

§ 789. Generally.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:634.

§ 798. Judgment on Disclosure.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1057.

§ 804. Generally.

p. 81, n. 2. Anno: 166 ALR 274 et seq.

Page 81. Add, following note 2: Although courts differ on the question whether a judgment should be satisfied in order to protect the garnishee[2.5] a number of decisions support the view that, as a general rule, a judgment against the garnishee constitutes a good defense to an action by the principal defendant against him on the original indebtedness.[2.51] The garnishee's successful denial of liability in the garnishment proceedings, resulting in a judgment in his favor, is generally held not to constitute a bar to an action against him by the principal defendant. In some states it is expressly so provided by statute.[2.52] A garnishee who suffers a judgment to go against him by default may not, upon ascertaining that in fact he owes the principal defendant nothing, recover from him the amount paid pursuant to the judgment.[2.53] In a number of cases the court has ordered the stay of an execution of a judgment obtained by the principal defendant against the garnishee in order to prevent subjecting the latter to the necessity of paying the debt twice.[2.54] It is universally recognized that unless the garnishee has failed to notify the principal defendant of the pendency of the garnishment proceedings, has not made a bona fide disclosure, or has not properly defended the rights of his creditor in such proceedings, the satisfaction of a judgment rendered against the garnishee constitutes a good defense to an action by the principal defendant against the garnishee on the original indebtedness.[2.55]

2.5 See infra, notes 5, 6.

2.51 Anno: 166 ALR 274.

See Adams v. Filer, 7 Wis 306, 73 Am Dec 410 (dictum in action by third party against garnishee).

2.52 Anno: 166 ALR 276.

2.53 Anno: 166 ALR 277.

2.54 Anno: 166 ALR 282.

2.55 Huron Holding Corp. v. Lincoln Mine Operating Co. 312 US 183, 85 L ed 725, 61 S Ct 513 reh den 313 US 598, 85 L ed 1550, 61 S Ct 840 (foreign garnishment judgment); Harris v. Balk, 198 US 215, 49 L ed 1023, 25 S Ct 625, 3 Ann Cas 1084 (foreign garnishment judgment); Wallace v. M'Connell, 13 Pet (US) 136, 10 L ed 95 (dictum in action instituted by principal defendant in Federal court prior to garnishment proceedings in state court).

Bessemer Sav. Bank v. Anderson, 134 Ala 343, 32 So 716, 92 Am St Rep 38 (dictum); East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 83 Ala 462, 3 So 852, 3 Am St Rep 755 (foreign garnishment judgment); Gunn v. Howell, 35 Ala 144, 73 Am Dec 484 (foreign garnishment judgment); Hitt v. Lacey, 3 Ala 104, 36 Am Dec 440.

Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill 592, 46 NE 631, 36 LRA 640, 56 Am St Rep 275 (dictum in action by second garnisher against garnishee).

Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 159 Ind 688, 66 NE 43, 60 LRA 396 (foreign garnishment judgment).

Bowen v. Port Huron Engine & Thresher Co. 109 Iowa 255, 80 NW 345, 47 LRA 131, 77 Am St Rep 539 (based on statute; dictum).

Scott v. Coleman, 5 Litt (Ky) 349, 15 Am Dec 71 (dictum that payment of judgment without execution, good defense for garnishee)

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Moore, 31 Neb 629, 48 NW 475, 58 Am St Rep 534 (foreign garnishment judgment).

Drew v. Towle (1855) 30 NH 531, 64 Am Dec 309; Drew v. Towle, 27 NH 412, 59 Am Dec 380.

Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns Ch 460, 8 Am Dec 581 (garnishment judgment of court of foreign country).

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Crews, 51 Okla 144, 151 P 879, Ann Cas 1918C 823 (dictum; foreign garnishment judgment).

See Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. New York Carousel Mfg. Co. 95 Va 515, 28 SE 888, 40 LRA 237.

Anno: 166 ALR 282.

p. 82, n. 5. Anno: 166 ALR 281.

A number of decisions support the proposition that an unsatisfied judgment against the garnishee constitutes a good defense to an action against him by the principal defendant. Anno: 166 ALR 281. See Sessions v. Stevens, 1 Fla 269, 46 Am Dec 339 (action by assignee of principal defendant).

p. 82, n. 6.

Anno: 166 ALR 278.

In a number of decisions it has been held that an unsatisfied judgment against the garnishee will afford him no protection to an action against him by the principal defendant. Anno: 166 ALR 278. See Cook v. Field, 3 Ala 53, 36 Am Dec 436.

In Maine and Massachusetts early cases held that a judgment alone against the garnishee protected him against the principal defendant, but later cases in these jurisdictions appear to have repudiated this rule. Anno: 166 ALR 279, 280.

Page 82. Add, following note 6: A satisfied judgment against the garnishee has been held a good defense to an action by the principal defendant against the garnishee instituted prior to the garnishment proceedings.[6.5] Courts protect the garnishee against whom judgment has been rendered, if such judgment has been either satisfied or executed.[6.51] In most cases, the courts hold that a satisfied judgment against the garnishee may be pleaded in bar to an action by the principal defendant to recover on the same indebtedness.[6.52] Courts, however, do not agree as to whether a person who has satisfied a judgment rendered against him as garnishee is entitled to an injunction against the execution of a judgment subsequently recovered against him by the principal defendant.[6.53] It is generally held that payment of the judgment rendered against the garnishee discharges him pro tanto from his indebtedness to the principal defendant.[6.54] And it necessarily follows that if the amount paid in satisfaction of the judgment is equal to or larger than the indebtedness to the principal defendant, the garnishee is completely discharged.[6.55]

It is generally held that a judgment against a garnishee is not conclusive as to the amount of the indebtedness to the principal defendant, so as to constitute a bar to an action by the latter against the garnishee to recover the residue over and above the amount paid, or ordered to be paid, by the garnishee pursuant to the judgment against him.[6.56]

Satisfaction by a garnishee of a judgment rendered against him as debtor of the principal defendant is generally held not to constitute a defense to an action against him by the principal defendant to recover money exempt from garnishment where the garnishee failed, in the garnishment proceedings, to claim the exemption.[6.57] It is generally held that a satisfied judgment of a court of a foreign state against the garnishee is a bar to an action in the domestic state by the principal defendant against the garnishee to recover on the same indebtedness, notwithstanding the fact that according to the laws of the domestic state the wages garnished are exempt.[6.58]

There is a conflict among the decisions on the question whether payment by a garnishee of a foreign judgment against him as debtor of the principal defendant constitutes a good defense to an action by the latter against the former in the domestic state where the garnishee failed, in the foreign garnishment proceedings, to claim that the wages attached were exempt from garnishment in the domestic state. Thus, in a number of cases it has been held that the garnishee has to claim the exemption in the foreign garnishment proceedings in order to be protected against an action by the principal defendant in the domestic state.[6.59] However, in a number of other cases it has been held that a satisfied judgment against a garnishee in a foreign state constituted a good defense to an action by the principal defendant in the domestic state even though the garnishee failed to claim the exemption in the foreign garnishment proceedings.[6.6]

Where the garnishee claims the exemption in the foreign garnishment proceedings it is generally held that a satisfaction of a judgment rendered against him constitutes a good defense to an action by the principal defendant in the domestic state against the garnishee. Some courts emphasize the fact that the garnishee, in addition to claiming the exemption in the garnishment proceedings, also notifies the principal defendant of the pendency of such proceedings.[6.61]

[6.5] Hitt v. Lacey, 3 Ala 104, 36 Am Dec 440.
Anno: 166 ALR 287.

[6.51], [6.52] Anno: 166 ALR 287.

[6.53] Anno: 166 ALR 288.

[6.54] Wallace v. M'Connell, 13 Pet (US) 136, 10 L ed 95 (dictum in action by principal defendant in Federal court prior to garnishment proceedings in state court).

Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 159 Ind 688, 66 NE 43, 6 LRA 396.

Brown v. Dudley (1856) 33 NH 511; Drew v. Towle, 30 NH 531, 64 Am Dec 309.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Crews, 51 Okla 144, 151 P 879, Ann Cas 1918C 823 (dictum).

Anno: 166 ALR 290.

A judgment against a garnishee and satisfaction thereof may be set up as a pro tanto payment in an action by the principal defendant against the garnishee, notwithstanding the fact that the principal defendant was not before the court in the garnishment proceeding. Wallace v. M'Connell, 13 Pet (US) 136, 10 L ed 95 (dictum in action instituted by principal defendant in Federal court prior to garnishment proceeding in state court).

[6.55] Harris v. Balk, 198 US 215, 49 L ed 1023, 25 S Ct 625, 3 Ann Cas 1084.
Anno: 166 ALR 293.

[6.56] Kosanic v. Preferred Auto. Ins. Co. 314 Mich 18, 22 NW2d 55, 166 ALR 266.

Drew v. Towle, 27 NH 412, 59 Am Dec 380.

Anno: 166 ALR 294

The fact that an insurance company issuing an automobile insurance policy under which, in addition to its agreement to pay damages for personal injuries to third persons, it agreed to defend suits against the insured arising from ownership of the automobile insured, and to pay for damages to the automobile resulting from collision, has been garnisheed on a judgment for personal injuries recovered against the insured in an action which the insurance company refused to defend, and after filing a disclosure denying its liability in toto, is compelled by the garnishment judgment to pay the personal injury judgment, does not preclude the insured from thereafter bringing an action against the insurance company to enforce its liability under the separate agreements to defend suits and to pay for damages to the insured's automobile. Kosanic v. Preferred Auto. Ins. Co. 314 Mich 18, 22 NW2d 55, 166 ALR 266.

Where an automobile liability insurance company, when garnisheed upon a judgment for personal injuries recovered against the insured, filed its disclosure denying liability in toto, without disclosing any liability, either due or to become due, to the insured on account of attorney fees incurred in the defense of the suit in which the judgment was recovered or for the payment of damages to the insured's automobile, it cannot, when later sued by the insured under clauses of the policy by which it agreed to defend suits against the insured, and to pay damages to the insured's automobile resulting from collision, be permitted to enrich itself by taking advantage of its failure to disclose its full liability in the garnishment suit and in that way escape liability for attorney fees and for damages to the plaintiff's automobile under its contract of insurance. Kosanic v. Preferred Auto. Ins. Co. 314 Mich 18, 22 NW2d 55, 166 ALR 266.

Some courts emphasize the fact that the judgment against the garnishee is not conclusive as to the amount of the indebtedness of the garnishee to the principal defendant where the latter has not appeared in the garnishment proceedings and contested the measure of such indebtedness. Anno: 166 ALR 297.

6.57 Southern R. Co. v. Fulford, 125 Ga 103, 54 SE 68, 5 Ann Cas 168.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Whipsker, 77 Tex 14, 13 SW 639, 8 LRA 321, 19 Am St Rep 734.

Anno: 166 ALR 304.

In some decisions the general rule mentioned above appears to be limited to situations where the garnishee had notice of the exemption. However, according to other decisions, the garnishee who fails to claim the exemption is not protected, even though he has no notice of the exemption. Anno: 166 ALR 305, 306.

6.58 Anno: 166 ALR 308.

But, a judgment against a garnishee and satisfaction thereof in Missouri, subsequent to a judgment rendered in Illinois in an action by the principal defendant against the garnishee to recover exempt wages, were held in Becker v. Illinois C. R. Co. 250 Ill 40, 95 NE 42, 35 LRA NS 1154, not to bar payment of the Illinois judgment.

6.59 Anno: 166 ALR 308.

See Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sharitt, 43 Kan 375, 23 P 430, 8 LRA 385, 19 Am St Rep 143.

6.6 Anno: 166 ALR 310.

See Carson v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 88 Tenn 646, 13 SW 588, 8 LRA 412, 17 Am St Rep 921.

6.61 Anno: 166 ALR 311.

See Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 159 Ind 688, 66 NE 43, 60 LRA 396 (garnishee notifying principal defendant).

§ 806. Where Judgment or Garnishment Erroneous and Irregular Merely.

p. 83, n. 9. Anno: 166 ALR 289.

§ 809. Where Garnishee Makes Payment before Judgment or Defaults.

Am Jur cited in Everson v. Atlas Tie Co. 73 Idaho 91, 245 P2d 773.

p. 83, n. 12. Anno: 166 ALR 288.

§ 810. Where Garnishment was in Foreign Court.

p. 84, n. 16. Anno: 148 ALR 996; 166 ALR 286.

§ 813. Generally.

Forms: 18 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 18:171, 18:173, 18:174.

p. 85, n. 2. As to priority between encumbrances or notices of equity introduced between the attachment and the execution, see Sanborn McDuffee Co. v. Keefe, infra, § 829 (Supplement).

§ 814. Generally.

p. 86, n. 15. Anno: 143 ALR 789, s. 56 ALR2d 112 (reasonableness, adequacy, or excessiveness of specific fees).

It has been held that attorneys' fees are allowed a garnishee to reimburse him for the cost of filing an answer, and appearing in the trial court if his answer is controverted, and attorneys' fees will be denied a garnishee upon his securing the vacation of a judgment rendered by default against him without jurisdiction due to service of the writ of garnishment by a private individual rather than by the sheriff. Mendoza v Acme Transfer & Storage Co. 66 NM 32, 340 P2d 1080, 75 ALR2d 1433.

§ 815. Attachment Lien.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:745.

p. 86, n. 20. As to lien holder's right to enjoin waste, see WASTE.

§ 816. Attachment as Satisfaction of Plaintiff's Claim.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:745.

§ 817. Garnishment Lien.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:745.

§ 818. View that Garnishment Constitutes No Lien until Judgment.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:745.

§ 819. Binding Effect on Garnishee Personally.

Forms: 8 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 8:745.

§ 820. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Marshall v. Anderson, 169 Kan 534, 220 P2d 187.

R. C. L. quoted in Kassow v. Feldman, 22 Pa. D. & C. 427.

p. 89, n. 1. Dickson v. Simpson, 172 Tenn 680, 113 S. W. (2d) 1190, 116 A.L.R. 380.

Page 89. Add, following note 1: An attachment lien covers only the actual interest of the debtor in the property levied on, existing at the time of the levy, and does not extend to an interest in the property subsequently acquired by him.[1.1] p. 91, n. 4. Walters v. Bank of America (Cal) 59 P(2d) 983, 106 ALR 55, modified on rehearing in 9 Cal(2d) 46, 69 P(2d) 839 110 ALR 1259.

[1.1] Dufield v. Davis, 152 Kan 404, 103 P(2d) 778, 128 ALR 1389

§ 821. Effect as Subrogation.

Am Jur cited in Midland Loan Finance Co. v Kisor, 206 Minn 134, 287 NW 869

p. 91, n. 7. Dickson v. Simpson, 172 Tenn. 680, 113 S. W. (2d) 1190, 116 A.L.R. 380.

§ 824. Effect on Title.

p. 92, n. 15. See Zittman v. McGrath, 341 US 446, 95 L ed 1096, 71 S Ct 832 (under New York law).

§ 825. Commencement.

Am Jur cited in United States v Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (CA4th W Va) 256 F2d 17.

United States v Eiland (CA4th W Va) 223 F2d 118.

R. C. L. cited in Hospelhorn v. General Motors Corp. 169 Md 564, 182 A 442.

p. 93, n. 19. Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

Mere issuance of an attachment against real estate creates no lien on the real estate; and in order to create a lien it is necessary for the officer to cause his return to show that he made a levy and for the return to mention and describe the real property with such substantial accuracy as to cause it to be readily identified. Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

Page 93. Add, following note 20: An unexecuted writ of attachment directed against real estate constitutes in itself neither an attachment nor a lien thereunder[21] and has no more legal effect on the title or interest of the owner than a mere summons or subpœna to appear in the proceedings.[22]

[21] It becomes an attachment only when it is properly executed. Harris v Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

[22] Harris v Lipson, 167 Va 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

§ 826. Duration.

p. 94, n. 7. Anno: 166 ALR 770, 799.

The extinguishment of a judgment by the expiration of the statutory period of its life terminates rights secured under the pending garnishment proceedings. Hillman v. Gray, 163 Wash 406, 1 P2d 318, 75 ALR 1356. Anno: 75 ALR 1359.

§ 827. Contingent and Inchoate Character of Lien.

Am Jur cited in Puissegur v. Yarbrough, 29 Cal2d 409, 175 P2d 830.

Reich v Spiegel, 208 Misc 225, 140 NYS2d 722.

p. 94, notes 9, 10. United States v. Security Trust & Sav. Bank, 340 US 47, 95 L ed 53, 71 S Ct 111 (under California law).

§ 829. Generally

p. 95, n. 2.

However, an attachment of the property of a foreign corporation after it has ceased to do business or exercise its franchises gives no priority over other creditors where the rule is that such a corporation is insolvent and that its assets constitute a trust for the benefit of creditors. Voightman v. Southern R. Co. 123 Tenn 452, 131 SW 982, Ann Cas 1912C 211.

Page 96. Add, following note 8: If an attachment is lawful title to the property obtained by a levy of execution based on the attachment, it is good as against encumbrances or notice of equities introduced between the attachment and the execution.[8.1] The priority of a claim of the Federal government over an attachment is elsewhere discussed.[8.5]

[8.1] Sanborn, McD. Co. v. Keefe, 88 N. H. 236, 187 A. 97, 106 A.L.R. 1097.

[8.5] See United States [also 26 RCL Pocket Supp., United States, § 45].

§ 830. As to Right to Reformation of Contract.

p. 96, n. 10. Anno: 79 ALR2d 1211.

§ 843. Generally.

Am Jur cited in Fidelity Union Trust Co. v. Guaranty Trust Co. 135 NJ Eq 222, 37 A (2d) 853.

p. 105, n. 14. Dummer v Smedley, 110 Mich 466, 68 NW 260, 38 LRA 490.

§ 846.1. (New text) Effect of Release or Modification of Lien to Which Property Was Subject When Attachment was Levied.

The effect of the release or modification of a lien to which property was subject at the time an attachment was levied against it may be made manifest in a number of ways. For example, the question may arise whether the lienor or the attaching creditor has the superior right to procure a sale of the property for the purpose of paying his claim or to procure the application of the proceeds of a prior sale of the property to the payment of his claim. The question is occasionally presented whether, under such circumstances, the lienor or the attaching creditor is entitled to possession of the property, or whether the lienor must account to the attaching creditor for the value of the property affected by the release or modification of the lien. And in some instances the question arises whether after the release or modification of the lien, some third person may be subrogated to the rights of the original lienor as against the intervening claim of the attaching creditor. It will be readily seen that whether the release or modification of a prior lien has any effect upon the rights of an attaching creditor depends in many instances upon the nature of the lien, the character of the release or modification, and the circumstances under which the lien was released or modified. However, certain factors which are common to a number of the decisions and which the courts have expressly or impliedly relied upon in answering the broad question with which all, or nearly all, of the cases involving the effect upon an attachment of the release or modification of a lien to which the property was subject at the time the attachment was levied are concerned—namely whether under the facts and circumstances of the case, the prior lienor is to be given some advantage over the attaching creditor, or vice versa—may be listed. Thus, as illustrative of the considerations which have influenced the courts to favor the prior lienor in the circumstances under consideration may be suggested: (1) the existence of some form of fraud, mistake, or illegality in connection with the execution of the release or modification of the lien,[11.5] and (2) a lack of evidence showing an intention on the part of the lienor to subordinate his lien to the rights of intervening encumbrancers. And as illustrative of the considerations which appear to have influenced the courts to favor the attaching creditor may be suggested: (1) evidence of a bona fide payment of the debtor secured by the prior lien, (2) facts showing an intention on the part of the lienor to divest himself of any interest in the property,[11.6] and (3) a showing that the value of the goods at the time of the attachment was in excess of the amount of the prior lien.[11.7]

[11.5] Anno: 128 ALR 1392, 1393.

[11.6] Anno: 128 ALR 1393.

In Dufield v. Davis, 152 Kan 404, 103 P(2d) 778, 128 ALR 1389, it was held that a chattel mortgagee who released her mortgage to enable the mortgagor to obtain an additional loan from a finance company which insisted that it be given a first mortgage on the property as a condition to making the loan, and took back a new mortgage expressly made subject to the mortgage given the finance company, had a lien against the property prior to the lien of an attaching creditor of the mortgagor whose attachment was levied after the execution of the original mortgage (and was admittedly subject thereto), but prior to the release thereof.

[11.7] Anno: 128 ALR 1393.

§ 849. — Effect of Failure to Comply with Filing or Recording Laws.

Am Jur quoted in Meade v. Wells, 309 Ky 748, 218 SW2d 972.

§ 864. Generally.

Am Jur cited in First Nat. Bank v Martin, 16 Alaska 313.

§ 873 Corporate Stock.

See Corporations, Vol. 13, p. 428, § 357.

§ 881. Assignment for Benefit of Creditors in Another State.

p. 124, n. 20. Correct the cross reference to read: Vol. 4, p. 434, § 181.

§ 882. Generally.

RCL cited in Bugbee v. Stoller-Hilgers Silk Mills, 45 RI 56, 119 A 760.

§ 884. Priority as to Bankruptcy Proceedings.

p. 126, n. 17. Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 1138.

§ 891. — Rule as Affected by Possession of Receiver Acquired before Attachment.

p. 131, n. 8.

The right of a receiver appointed by a foreign tribunal to wind up an insolvent partnership situated within its jurisdiction, to take possession of money due to such partnership from domestic debtors, will not be recognized as against the claims of nonresident creditors of the insolvent partnership who have attached such money under the domestic laws after the appointment of the receiver, but before he obtained actual possession of the money or an enforceable lien thereon, even although he has received a general assignment of the partnership property. Catlin v. Wilcox Silver Plate Co. 123 Ind 477, 24 NE 250, 8 LRA 62, 18 Am St Rep 338.

§ 893. Attachment or Garnishment and Right of Retainer.

p. 133, n. 14. Loverett v. Veatch, 268 Ky. 797, 105 S. W. (2d) 1052, 110 A.L.R. 1378.

Annotation: 110 A.L.R. 1389.

§ 896. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1061–2:1070, 2:1087–2:1090.

p. 135, n. 10.

Since in an attachment proceeding the giving of the required bond is jurisdictional, the failure to give the bond in such a suit at law renders it null and void. Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga 461, 192 S. E. 191, 116 A.L.R. 257.

An officer has no authority to take possession of property under a levy of attachment, where the attachment creditor has not given the bond required by statute. Manuel v. Cassada, 190 Va 906, 59 SE2d 47, 18 ALR2d 395.

§ 897. Discretion of Court to Permit Filing of Bond for Amount Smaller than That Required by Statute.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1061–2:1070, 2:1087–2:1092.

§ 898. Construction of Bonds in Attachment Proceedings.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1061–2:1070, 2:1087–2:1089.

RCL quoted in Jansen v. Pollastine, 10 Alaska 316.

§ 900. Sufficiency to Procure or Sustain Attachment or Garnishment; Amendments and Additional Bonds.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1061–2:1070, 2:1090–2:1093.

p. 138, n. 15. Anno: 47 ALR2d 977-979, 983, 987-989 (attachment bonds); 47 ALR2d 990 (garnishment bonds).

p. 138, n. 17. Corbin v St. Lucie River Co. (Fla) 78 So2d 396, 47 ALR2d 968.

Anno: 47 ALR2d 972 et seq.

p. 138, n. 17. It has been held that an attachment defendant not fully protected by the amount of the undertaking set by the clerk may apply to the court for a bond of a larger amount. Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

It has been held that, the main proceeding not being affected, a garnishment bond insufficient in amount may be amended to provide the defendant with additional security. Corbin v St. Lucie River Co. (Fla) 78 So2d 396, 47 ALR2d 968.

p. 138, n. 18. Anno: 47 ALR2d 972-977, 979 987 (attachment bonds), 989-991 (garnishment bonds).

It has been held that the rule requiring strict compliance with the statutory requirements for attachment and garnishment prevails as to the remedy, but not as to amendments in form that aid in the furtherance of justice, where the purpose of the proceeding is not departed from or materially affected. Corbin v St. Lucie River Co. (Fla) 78 So2d 396, 47 ALR2d 968.

§ 901. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:967, 2:979, 2:1071, 2:1075–2:1087.

p. 139, n. 3. Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P. (2d) 1016, 60 P. (2d) 979, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 1138.

p. 140, n. 5. Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 1138.

§ 902. Duty to Give Bond and Procure Return of Property to Mitigate Damages.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:979, 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

Am Jur cited in American Surety Co. v. Florida Nat. Bank & T. Co. (C. C. A. 5th) 94 F. (2d) 126 (n. 10).

Adams v Thibault, — Wash2d —, 297 P2d 954; Hoff v Lester, 25 Wash2d 86, 168 P2d 409, 164 ALR 751.

§ 903. Requirement of Bail or Security as Condition of Right to Appear and Defend.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 904. Right of Sureties to Reimbursement, Subrogation, Contribution, Possession, and Injunctive Relief.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 905. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 906. Waiver of Defects and Irregularities.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

Am Jur quoted in Noel v. Ecton, 309 Ky 189, 217 SW2d 223.

§ 907. Formal Approval.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083; 19 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 19:275.

§ 908. Obligation Valid as Common-law Recognizance Despite Defectiveness as Statutory Bond.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

Am Jur cited in Perfection Hardwood Flooring Co. v Bowling (Ky) 300 SW2d 550.

§ 909. Bond Void Where Attachment Void.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 910. Attacking the Bond.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 911. Accrual of Liability.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

Page 145. Add, following note 8: In accordance with the rule that a useless or unnecessary demand on the obligor need not be made,[8.5] in actions on bonds given to secure the release of property from an attachment it is generally held that subsequent bankruptcy on the part of the debtor, whose attached property was released by such undertaking, relieves the judgment creditor from the necessity of making demand for the return of such property before seeking to enforce the bond given to secure its release from attachment.[8.6]

[8.5] See 50 Am Jur 1018, SURETYSHIP, § 174

[8.6] Anno: 130 ALR 1167.

§ 912. Measure of Liability.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080 2:1083.

§ 913. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 914. Amendments—New Cause of Action as Test.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080 2:1083.

Am Jur cited in Davis v. Shemper, 210 Miss 201, 208, 49 So 253, 50 So2d 143.

Rushing v Ashcraft, 211 NC 627, 191 SE 332.

§ 915. — Prejudice Caused Surety as Test.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080 2:1083.

§ 916. Judgment or Favorable Outcome for Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 917. Death of Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

p. 150, n. 9. See annotation in 131 ALR 1152.

§ 918. Bankruptcy of Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

p. 151, n. 16. Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P. (2d) 1016, 60 P. (2d) 979, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 1138.

Even for the value of property sold by the attachment debtor, sureties are released by the adjudication in bankruptcy, since the provision of the Bankruptcy Act renders such an attachment null and void. Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P. (2d) 1016, 60 P. (2d) 979, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

p. 151, n. 17. Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 1139.

p. 151, n. 18. Correct the annotation citation to read: 36 ALR 452, s. 107 ALR 1139.

§ 919. Insolvency of Defendant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 920. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 921. Defects and Irregularities.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075 2:1077 2:1080–2:1083.

p. 152, n. 3. Adams v Thibault, 49 Wash2d 24, 297 P2d 954, 57 ALR2d 1372.

§ 922. Defective Levy, Return, Inventory, and Appraisement.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 923. — Defective Grounds for Attachment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 924. — Property Not Liable to Attachment or Garnishment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 925. — Defendant's Lack of Title, or Title in Surety.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 926. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

Am Jur quoted in Hoft v. Coastwise Shipping & Lighterage Co. 215 NC 690, 3 SE(2d) 20 (n. 12).

Page 157. Add new paragraph following note 14: It has been held that although where the issuance and return of an execution unsatisfied is a prerequisite to the commencement of an action on a bond given to prevent an attachment, such issuance and return unsatisfied of an execution is not required where bankruptcy proceedings against the judgment debtor make the issuance of an execution a vain act and one violative of an order of the bankruptcy court enjoining interference with the bankrupt's property; and this, even though there was a period of time between the recovery of the judgment and the institution of bankruptcy proceedings during which execution might have been issued.[14.5] [14.5] Stewart v. Slater, 61 Idaho 628, 105 P (2d) 729, 130 ALR 1158.

Anno: 130 ALR 1163.

§ 927. Parties.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

§ 928. Pleadings and Defenses.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

Page 157. Add, following note 4: A court rule as to the time for filing a plea in abatement within a certain time after entry of the action applies to abatable matter in an action upon an attachment-releasing bond commenced after recovery of default judgment in the action in which the bond was given, even though the matter of abatement as regards that action did not arise until after the commencement of the action.[4.1]

[4.1] Ft. Fairfield Nash Co. v. Noltemier, 135 Me. 84, 189 A. 415, 108 A.L.R. 1276.

§ 929. Evidence.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080–2:1083.

Page 158. Add, following note 11: A party who introduces into evidence a deposition of a receiver of a corporation as to the value of its assets is bound by the statements therein.[11.1] [11.1] Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P. (2d) 1016, 60 P. (2d) 979, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

§ 930. Trial.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1071, 2:1075, 2:1077, 2:1080 2:1083.

Page 158. Add, following note 13: Although evidence may be undisputed, there is a question for the jury if men of reasonable minds might draw different conclusions from the facts proved.[13.1] Only reasonable inferences may be drawn, however, and a jury may not speculate or indulge in frivolous and captious objections to uncontradicted testimony.[13.2] The court may properly direct a verdict against a party where his own evidence discloses facts destructive of his case.[13.3]

[13.1] Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P. (2d) 1016, 60 P. (2d) 979, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

[13.2] Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P. (2d) 1016, 60 P. (2d) 979, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

[13.3] Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P. (2d) 1016, 60 P. (2d) 979, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

§ 931. Generally.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:341.
RCL quoted in Gould & Co. v. Mt. Baker Sav. & L. Asso. 185 Wash 253, 53 P(2d) 841.

§ 941. Process.

p. 165, n. 20.
The provision of § 11,230 of the Ohio General Code, found in a chapter dealing with limitation of actions, that an action shall be deemed commenced "within the meaning of this chapter" at the date of the summons served on a defendant or a codefendant united in interest with him, or, when service by publication is proper, at the date of the first publication, is confined to matters concerning the limitation of actions, and therefore does not so affect the provisions of § 11,279 of the Ohio General Code that "a civil action must be commenced by filing in the office of the clerk of the proper court a petition and causing a summons to be issued thereon," and § 11,819 of the Ohio General Code that in a civil action for the recovery of money, "at or after its commencement," the plaintiff may have an attachment against the property of the defendant on grounds enumerated as to render premature and void the issuance of an attachment after the filing of the petition and the issuance of a summons but before obtaining personal service or beginning publication for substituted service. Rorick v Devon Syndicate, 307 US 299, 83 L ed 1303, 59 S Ct 877, rehearing denied in 307 US 650, 83 L ed 1529, 59 S Ct 1041.

§ 947. Generally.

Page 169. Add, following note 7: It has been stated that any appearance, except to object to the jurisdiction of the court, is a general appearance and will dispense with service.[7.1]

[7.1] Fisher v. Globe Brewing Co. 170 Va. 509, 197 S. E. 490, 116 A.L.R. 1211.
Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 1215.
The filing of an affidavit of substantial defense to an action commenced by attachment constitutes a general appearance, giving the court jurisdiction to proceed to trial of the action, even though the attachment has been dismissed in accordance with a statute providing that if the principal defendant shall file an affidavit that he has a substantial defense to the merits of the plaintiff's claim, an attachment shall stand dismissed, ipso facto, unless the plaintiff shall, within ten days, file a bond. Fisher v. Globe Brewing Co. 170 Va. 509, 197 SE 490, 116 ALR 1211. Anno: 116 ALR 1215.

§ 952. Amendments.

Am Jur cited in Northern Montana Asso. v. Hauge, 111 Mont 56, 105 P(2d) 1102.

§ 954. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.
p. 172, n. 19.
In the case of an attachment of the property of a nonresident who fails to appear after service by publication or some form of substituted service, the court has jurisdiction to render a judgment which is valid to the extent that it is satisfied by application of the property attached. Gulda v. Second Nat. Bank, 323 Mass 100, 80 NE2d 12, 15 ALR2d 605.

§ 955. Amount of Judgment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.

§ 956. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.

§ 957. Conclusiveness and Collateral Attack.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.
p. 174, n. 1. Anno: 148 ALR 996.

§ 958. — As to Persons Not Parties to Proceedings.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.

§ 959. Full Faith and Credit.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.
p. 175, n. 7.
A judgment in a suit against a foreign corporation by attachment and publication is not effectual and conclusive as a personal judgment and the fact that the corporation had property within the state or that the action arose therein, adds little to its conclusiveness. Tioga R. Co. v. Blossburg & C. R. Co. 20 Wall. (US) 137, 22 L ed 331.

§ 960. Of Judgment in Personam.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.

§ 961. Of Judgment in Rem.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.

§ 962. Right to Judgment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.

§ 963. Form of Judgment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1120.

§ 966. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1132, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 967. Relief in Equity.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1132, 2:1133, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 968. Notice of Claim.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1132, 2:1136, 2:1137, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 969. Statement of Amount Due Claimant.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1132, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 970. Intervention Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1146, 2:1147.
Am Jur cited in Patterson v Pollock, 84 Ohio App 489, 84 NE2d 606.

§ 971. Election between Intervention and Other Remedies Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 972. Right of Indorsee to Recover Amount Collected by Garnishment of Note.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 973. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147.

Page 183. Add, following note 6: The general principles of estoppel[6.5] have been held to apply in attachment proceedings, with respect to the permissibility of intervention.[6.51]

[6.5] For a discussion of these principles, see 19 Am Jur 633, ESTOPPEL, §§ 33 et seq.
[6.51] Anno: 166 ALR 917 et seq. (setting out details, cases so applying such principles).

§ 974. Necessity of Bond and Affidavit of Just Claim to Intervene.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1141–2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 975. Who May Intervene.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 976. — Junior Attaching Creditor.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 977. Time for Intervention.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147.

§ 978. Pleadings.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147.

p. 186, n. 10. Eliminate the Alabama citation in the footnote.

§ 979. Service, Process, and Notice.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147.

Page 186. Substitute for the first sentence in the section and its footnote the following: Local practice as to service, process, and notice is variant. Sometimes the notice is given to the sheriff, who may, in his discretion, serve a copy of the claim upon the plaintiff's attorney with notice that he requires indemnity.[15] In Pennsylvania notice of a rule for a sheriff's interpleader by the sheriff or a claimant must be given to the plaintiff, defendant, and any garnishee.[15.1] [15] See 7 Carmody, N. Y. Prac. p. 571, § 483.

[15.1] See 10 Standard Pa. Prac. p. 545, § 356 (1931, June 22, P. L. 883, § 1; 12 PS § 2358).

§ 980. Issues and Defenses.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1131, 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147, 2:1149.

§ 981. Evidence and Trial.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147, 2:1149.

§ 982. Judgment and Right to Proceeds after Sale.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147, 2:1149.

§ 983. Right of Intervener to Recover Counsel Fees.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1132, 2:1134, 2:1135, 2:1137, 2:1139, 2:1143, 2:1146, 2:1147 2:1149.

p. 189, n. 17. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1442.

§ 984. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1151-- 13:767, 13:768, 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20 2:1154, 2:1157; 13 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 342–20:344.

Am Jur cited in Blankenship v Staton (Ky) 348 SW2d 925.

City Lumber Co. v Barrett (Ky) 327 SW2d 402.

RCL quoted in Jansen v. Pollastrine, 10 Alaska 316.

p. 189, n. 1. Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

p. 190, n. 2. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

Page 190. Add new paragraph following note 4: A release of attached property obtained by duress of property does not preclude an action for malicious attachment.[4.1] Indeed, it has been stated broadly that the maintenance of such an action cannot be prevented by the settlement of the debt by the plaintiff and the payment of the costs.[4.2]

[4.1] Spaids v. Barrett, 57 Ill 289, 11 Am Rep 10.

[4.2] Brand v. Hinchman, 68 Mich 590, 36 NW 664, 13 Am St Rep 362.

And see to the same effect, Fortman v. Rottier, 8 Ohio St. 548, 72 Am Dec 606.

Anno: 93 Am St Rep 464.

p. 191, n. 12. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

§ 985. Statutory Modifications

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344.

Am Jur cited in Lukens v. First Nat. Bank, 151 Kan 937, 101 P(2d) 914.

Newby v U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. 49 Wash2d 843, 307 P2d 275; Adams v Thibault, 49 Wash2d 24, 297 P2d 954, 57 ALR2d 1372.

RCL cited in Jansen v. Pollastrine, 10 Alaska 316.

p. 191, n. 16. Anno: 125 ALR 1220.

As to measure of damages under such statutes, see infra, §§ 1005, 1006 (Supp.).

p. 191, n. 18. Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

Anno: 125 ALR 1222.

It seems to be assumed in Veitch v. Cebell, 105 Wis 260, 81 NW 411, 76 Am St Rep 914, that express statutory provisions for compensation of the defendant for any damages sustained in cases of "attachment," replevin, etc., did not include compensation for wrongful "garnishment," the court holding that damages for wrongful garnishment could not be recovered, since in such a case the statute provided only for recovery of costs. It was said: "The only remedy, if any, for a principal defendant whose funds are thus improperly tied up by garnishment [the case being one of garnishment of a bank deposit], would seem to be in an action for malicious prosecution." Anno: 125 ALR 1226.

An action based upon a wrongful or malicious ancillary attachment has been held to lie under a statute providing merely that when an "original attachment" shall have been wrongfully or vexatiously sued out, an action would lie. Anno: 125 ALR 1226.

p. 192, n. 19. See annotation in 125 ALR 1226

p. 192, n. 3. Adams v Thibault, 49 Wash2d 24, 297 P2d 954, 57 ALR2d 1372, overruling Gutter v Joiner, 56 Wash 202, 105 P 457.

Anno: 57 ALR2d 1376.

§ 986. Malice and Probable Cause.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344.

Am Jur cited in Jones v. Phillips Petroleum Co. (Mo App) 186 SW2d 868.

Brown v. Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1103.

Hyde v. Southern Grocery Stores, 197 SC 263, 15 SE2d 353.

p. 192, n. 4. It has been held that the malice essential to support an action for malicious and wrongful attachment may be either actual malice or legal malice. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

p. 192, n. 5. Pittsburg, J. E. & E. R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co. 138 NC 174, 50 SE 571, 3 Ann Cas 720.

Probable cause may have existed though the attachment was unauthorized; a previous admission of the existence of the grounds for an attachment constitutes probable cause. Anno: 93 Am St Rep 464. But if the affidavit was false and if the plaintiff had no good reason to believe it true, there would be a clear absence of probable cause. Fortman v. Rottier, 8 Ohio St 548, 72 Am Dec 606.

§ 987. — Under Wrongful Attachment or Garnishment Statutes.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344.

Page 193. Add, following note 10: The fact that an attachment was quashed upon the ground that it was sued out without sufficient cause does not necessarily imply that there was a lack of good cause.[10.1]

[10.1] Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

§ 988. When Cause of Action Arises.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344.

Am Jur cited in Ross v Peck Iron & Metal Co. (CA4 Va) 264 F2d 262.

Exchange Lumber & Mfg. Co. v Thomas, 71 Idaho 391, 233 P2d 406.

Blankenship v Staton (Ky) 348 SW2d 925.

Hyde v. Southern Grocery Stores, 197 SC 263, 15 SE2d 353.

§ 989. Necessity of Actual Levy and Interference.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344

p. 194, n. 2. Basham v. Citizens' Loan Co. 216 Ky 251, 287 SW 719.

Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

As to necessity for levy to impose liability on the attachment bond, see infra, § 993 (Supplement)

Page 194. Add, following note 2: A levy by indorsement upon the writ and notice to the defendant therein is sufficient in the case of certain property, even though actual possession thereof is not taken, if the property is in the constructive possession of the officer by the levy of the writ.[2.1] p. 195. n. 3. Substitute the word "manual" in the text for the words "arrest or." Eliminate the Texas citation in the footnote.

[2.1] Rice v. Miller, 70 Tex. 613, 8 S. W. 317, 8 Am. St. Rep. 630.

§ 990. Successive Attachments and Garnishments.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344.

§ 991. Attachment and Garnishment of Property Not Liable to Process.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344

§ 992. Cause of Action of Third Persons.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342–20:344.

Am Jur cited in Peterson v. Wiesner, 62 Nev 184, 146 P2d 789.

§ 993. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1155–2:1158.

Am Jur cited in American Surety Co. v. Florida Nat. Bank & T. Co. (C. C. A. 5th) 94 F. (2d) 126 (n. 10).

RCL quoted in Jansen v. Pollastrine, 10 Alaska 316.

Page 197. Insert, at the beginning of the section: The giving of an attachment bond creates no damage and in itself confers no right to sue, but simply provides security for payment of recoverable damages.[19.1] Regardless of whether an action is predicated upon a wrongful attachment[19.2] or a malicious abuse of the process, damage resulting therefrom is essential to the right to sue on the bond.[19.21] Accordingly, some cases hold that the bond does not provide against a mere suing out of the writ of attachment and that the right to sue arises only when the property is actually levied upon, for until then there is no attachment.[19.3] However, other cases support the contention that the failure to levy goes not to the existence of the cause of action, but merely to the extent of damages.[19.31]

[19.1] Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

[19.2] Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

[19.21] Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

The filing of a lis pendens against real estate based on attachment proceedings does not sustain an action on an attachment bond where no levy was made under the attachment, even though a purchaser, under written contract with the attachment defendant, refused to complete the contract, since the lis pendens would not have prevented the enforcement of the contract either during the pendency of the attachment proceedings or thereafter. Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

[19.3] Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

Annotation: 108 A.L.R. 917.

[19.31] Annotation: 108 A.L.R. 917.

p. 197, n. 1. Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912.

As regards liability on the attachment bond, attachment statutes should be read in connection with the statute providing that if property is distrained for rent not due or attached for any rent not accruing or taken under any attachment sued out without good cause, the owner of such property may, in an action against the party suing out the warrant of distress or attachment, recover damages for the wrongful seizure and also, if the property is sold, for the sale thereof. Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S. E. 349, 108 A.L.R. 912

p. 198, n. 4. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

p. 198, n. 10. To recover on an attachment bond, it has been held necessary that the order of attachment be dissolved, dismissed, or set aside by the court, or that the attachment plaintiff fail to obtain a judgment against the attachment defendant. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094

§ 994. Liability of Surety.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1155–2:1158.

RCL quoted in Jansen v. Pollastrine, 10 Alaska 316.

p. 198, n. 13. The surety on an attachment bond has been held not liable in tort for the act of the attachment plaintiff in maliciously suing out the order of attachment without probable cause and procuring its levy on the property of the attachment defendant. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

A proceeding on an attachment bond has been held to be a statutory proceeding based on the contractual obligations of the attachment plaintiff and his surety embodied in the bond and the statute under which it is given. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

It has been held that the sureties on an undertaking in support of a wrongful attachment may be held liable for actual damages resulting therefrom in accordance with their promise to pay the attachment debtor all costs and "damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking." Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

p. 199, n. 14. Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

§ 995. Discharge of Surety.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1155–2:1158.

§ 996. Estoppel.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1155–2:1158.

§ 997. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1161

§ 998. Lack of Malice and Advice of Counsel.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur cited in City Lumber Co. v Barrett (Ky) 327 SW2d 402.

Stumpf v Pederson, 180 Okla 408, 70 P2d 101 (notes 14, 16).

Page 201. Add, following note 17: It should be noted that it has been said that statements to the effect that it is not necessary to prove malice in an action for malicious and wrongful attachment are not good law.[17.5]

[17.5] Brown v. Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1103, disapproving of such statements in Kirkham v. Coe, 46 NC (1 Jones L) 423 and Tyler v. Mahoney. 168 NC 237, 84 SE 362

§ 999. Probable Cause.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

p. 201, n. 2. In this connection it is defendant's duty in attachment proceedings to mitigate his damages where he is financially able to do so. Adams v Thibault, 49 Wash2d 24, 297 P2d 954, 57 ALR2d 1372, overruling Gutter v Joiner, 56 Wash 202, 105 P 457.

§ 1000. Merits of Claim or Grounds for Attachment or Garnishment.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur cited in Hyde v. Southern Grocery Stores, 197 SC 263, 15 SE(2d) 353.

Brown v. Peoples Nat. Bank of Washington, 39 Wash2d 776, 238 P2d 1191.

p. 201, n. 3. In this connection it is defendant's duty in attachment proceedings to mitigate his damages where he is financially able to do so. Adams v Thibault, 49 Wash2d 24, 297 P2d 954, 57 ALR2d 1372, overruling Gutter v Joiner, 56 Wash 202, 105 P 457.

p. 201, n. 4. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1426.

§ 1001. Defenses in Mitigation of Damages.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

p. 202, n. 9. In this connection it is defendant's duty in attachment proceedings to mitigate his damages where he is financially able to do so. Adams v Thibault, 49 Wash2d 24, 297 P2d 954, 57 ALR2d 1372, overruling Gutter v Joiner, 56 Wash 202, 105 P 457.

§ 1002. Defenses of Attaching Officer.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1162; 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342, 20:343.

§ 1003. Defenses in Action on Bond.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Page 204. Add, following note 6: The invalidity of the levy is ordinarily no defense to an action on the bond.[6.1]

[6.1] Annotation: 108 A.L.R. 918.

§ 1004. Running of Statute of Limitations.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

p. 204, n. 8. Brown v Westport Finance Co. (DC Mo) 145 F Supp 265.

p. 204, n. 11. First Nat. Bank v. Avery Planter Co. 69 Neb 329, 95 NW 622, 111 Am St Rep 541.

§ 1005. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur quoted in Levy v J. A. Olson Co. 237 Miss 452, 115 So 2d 296.

Am Jur cited in Florida Transp. Co. v Dixie Sightseeing Tours, Inc. (Fla App) 139 So 2d 175.

Godwin v Vinson, 254 NC 582, 119 SE2d 616.

Page 205. Add, following note 18: The premium paid for a refunding bond executed to secure the release of money wrongfully attached may be allowed as damages against the one securing the attachment.[18.1] [18.1] Gordon v. Kentucky Midland Coal Co. 152 Tenn 367, 278 SW 68, 42 ALR 1052.

Anno: 42 ALR 1057.

p. 205, n. 19. A recovery on an attachment bond has been held to be for the actual damages sustained by the attachment defendant by reason of the levy of the order of attachment on his property limited, as to the surety, by the amount of the bond. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

Damages resulting from a wrongful attachment in excess of the sum specified in the attachment undertaking have been held not recoverable by the attachment defendant in the absence of malice and a want of probable cause. Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

p. 206, n. 1. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1438.

p. 206, n. 2. Anno: 125 ALR 1225.

Page 206. Add new paragraph at end of section: Under statutes expressly or impliedly creating a right of action for wrongful attachment or garnishment in the absence of proof that the same was sued out maliciously and without probable cause, it is usually held that the defendant in the original proceeding is entitled to recover "actual" damages for the merely wrongful attachment.[2.1]

[2.1] Anno: 125 ALR 1223.

In Sarg v. Sugg, 186 Okla 37, 96 P(2d) 15, 125 ALR 1217, it was said that under a statute providing that "if the attachment or garnishment shall be discharged on motion prior to the final judgment, the defendant may, upon proper supplemental answer, recover his damages, as in other cases for such wrongful attachment or garnishment," there could be no issue of law upon the right of the defendant in attachment to recover "any damage he sustained," but that the damages he had sustained must be shown by proof, since the only damages that can be mandatorily awarded him without proof were nominal damages awarded under the statute relating to actions generally.

§ 1006. Exemplary Damages.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur cited in Lee v. Dunbar (Mun Ct App Dist Col), 37 A(2d) 178.

p. 206, n. 3. Reliable Mut. Hail Ins. Co. v. Rogers, 61 Okla 226, 160 P 914, LRA1917B 350.

Anno: 125 ALR 1224 (under statutes providing for recovery of damages for wrongful attachment or garnishment).

Exemplary damages may be awarded against attaching officers who, although they have no personal acquaintance with, or ill-will against, defendant, wilfully and knowingly allow themselves to become tools of the attaching creditors, whose object is apparently malicious, and make an unlawful levy in a high-handed and oppressive way to oppress the debtor. Giddings v. Freedley (CCA 2d) 128 F 355, 65 LRA 327.

It has been held that punitive damages may be awarded in an action for malicious and wrongful attachment upon proof that the attachment plaintiff was actuated by actual, as distinguished from legal, malice in suing out the order of attachment. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

p. 206, n. 4.

Only actual damages, and not exemplary or punitive damages, may be recovered in an action for wrongful attachment or garnishment where the levy was not made maliciously and without probable cause, under statutes requiring a bond for the payment of "all damages" sustained by reason of the wrongful attachment, which statutes had been construed as recognizing a like liability apart from an action on the bond. Anno: 125 ALR 1225.

p. 206, n. 5. Anno: 54 ALR2d 1379–1381.

p. 206, n. 6. Punitive damages are not favored by law and it is only in exceptional cases of negligence that the law will permit punitive damages to be awarded. Mills v Liquidators, 206 Or 212, 288 P2d 1060.

§ 1007. — In Action on Bond.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1008. Duty to Minimize Damages.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur quoted in Levy v J. A. Olson Co. 237 Miss 452, 115 So 2d 296.

Am Jur cited in Lynch v Call (CA10 Utah) 261 F2d 130.

American Surety Co. v Florida Nat. Bank & T. Co. (CCA5) 94 F2d 126 (n 17); Stumpf v Pederson, 180 Okla 408, 70 P2d 101 (n 17).

§ 1009. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1010. Loss of Use of, or Injury to, Property.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.; Damages, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 491 et seq.

Am Jur quoted in Levy v J. A. Olson Co. 237 Miss 452, 115 So 2d 296.

Am. Jur. cited in Stumpf v. Pederson, 180 Okla. 408, 70 P. (2d) 101 (n. 4).

p. 208, n. 20. Anno: 45 ALR2d 1222 et seq.

It has been held that the basis for recovery of the rental value of goods wrongfully attached is not that the goods were used while in custodia legis, but that they were kept from the plaintiff's possession. Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

p. 208, n. 3. Anno: 45 ALR2d 1222.

Page 208. Add at end of section: Generally, a person deprived of the use of property by its having been wrongfully attached cannot recover the value of such use without proof of the value, nor can he recover where the value is speculative.[5.5] In a number of cases the question has risen whether the property would have been used by the attachment defendant if it had not been wrongfully attached; in the majority of such cases recovery was allowed against the attachment plaintiff or his security.[5.51] There can be no recovery of the value of the use of property wrongfully attached where such attachment did not result in loss of possession of, or ability to use, the property.[5.52]

[5.5] Anno: 45 ALR2d 1226–1229.

[5.51] Anno: 45 ALR2d 1229–1233.

The fact that at the time the defendant (the attachment plaintiff) wrongfully attached three recording machines owned by the plaintiff they were the subject of a loan by the plaintiff to a corporation in which he was interested has been held not to deprive the plaintiff of the right to recover from the defendant's sureties the rental value of such machines during the period of the attachment up to the amount covered by the surety bond. Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

That an owner of goods offers them for sale has been held not to deprive him of the right to recover for loss of their use upon wrongful attachment. Finn v Witherbee, 126 Cal App2d 45, 271 P2d 606, 45 ALR2d 1215.

[5.52] Tsesmelis v Sinton State Bank (Tex Civ App) 35 SW2d 451, affd (Tex Com App) 53 SW2d 461, 85 ALR 319.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 1233.

§ 1011. Injury to Business, Credit, Loss of Profits, etc.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1154, 2:1158 2:1160.

Am. Jur. cited in Stumpf v. Pederson, 180 Okla. 408, 70 P. (2d) 101 (notes 10, 12).

p. 209, n. 6. It has been held that the actual damages recoverable by an attachment defendant for malicious and wrongful attachment may include compensation for the injury to his credit, business, or feelings. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

§ 1012. Injury to Character, Mental Suffering, Sickness, Humiliation, etc.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

p. 211, n. 15. Brown v. Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094 (injuries to feelings).

§ 1013. Interest.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur cited in Gray v American Surety Co. 129 Cal App2d 471, 277 P2d 436.

Subin v United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. 12 App Div 2d 49, 208 NYS2d 278.

p. 211, n. 17. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate v. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. 127 La 971, 54 So 318, Ann Cas 1913E 679.

Anno: 111 ALR 1303; 36 ALR2d 381–383, 389, 393.

p. 211, n. 18. Anno: 111 ALR 1303, 36 ALR 2d 391.

p. 211, n. 19. Anno: 111 ALR 1303.

p. 212, n. 20. Anno: 111 ALR 1303.

§ 1014. For Defending Attachment or Garnishment.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur quoted in Levy v J. A. Olson Co. 237 Miss 452, 115 So 2d 296.

Knighton v Bramlett, 226 SC 133, 83 SE2d 753.

Am Jur cited in Stumpf v. Pederson, 180 Okla. 407, 70 P. (2d) 101 (n. 3).

p. 212, n. 3. It has been held that the expenses involved in setting aside an attachment which is defective, and subject to dissolution by virtue of the defect regardless of the merits of the action, are properly regarded as damages resulting from the attachment. Great American Indem. Co v Sweetwater Mining Co. 74 Nev 219, 326 P2d 1105, 65 ALR2d 1422.

p. 212, n. 4. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1429.

p. 213, n. 5. Anno: 56 ALR2d 111 (amount); 65 ALR2d 1441.

p. 213, n. 6. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1441.

p. 214, n. 9. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1428.

p. 214, n. 10. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1428.

p. 214, n. 11. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1433.

p. 214, n. 14. The citation to 25 ALR should be to p. 586.

§ 1015. For Defending Main Action on Its Merits.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

p. 214, n. 16. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1433.

It has been held that statutory authorization of an award for a wrongful attachment, including attorneys' fees, does not extend to attorneys' fees and witnesses' expenses incurred in successfully defending the original action on the merits, where the attachment was not defective but failed only because of the failure to sustain the cause of action; in such case, the expenses are not attributable to the attachment but to the fact that the action was brought. Great American Indem. Co. v Sweetwater Mining Co. 74 Nev 219, 326 P2d 1105, 65 ALR2d 1422.

§ 1016. — Where Defense of Main Action Necessary to Defeat Attachment.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

Am Jur quoted in Reachi v. National Auto. & Casualty Ins. Co. 37 Cal2d 808, 236 P2d 151.

Olsen v. National Grocery Co. 15 Wash2d 264 130 P2d 78.

p. 215, n. 19. Anno: 56 ALR2d 111; 65 ALR2d 1436.

§ 1017. — Where Property Is Attached or Garnished on Ground of Nonresidence.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

p. 215, n. 2. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1437.

§ 1018. Apportionment of Fees Where Same Counsel Serves in Attachment and Main Proceedings.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
p. 216, n. 4. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1432.

§ 1019. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
Am Jur quoted in Powell v. Schultz (Mo App) 118 SW(2d) 25 (notes 12–13).

§ 1020. — Set-off, Counterclaim, Reconvention, Cross Complaint, Recoupment, Pleas and Abatement, etc.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
Am Jur cited in Exchange Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Thomas, 71 Idaho 391, 233 P2d 406.
Biedler v. Malz, 323 Ill App 265, 55 NE2d 300.
p. 218, n. 3. Anno: 68 ALR 462, 463.
A counterclaim for damages sustained through the seizure of the defendant's property under attachments maliciously instituted is not connected with the subject of a subsequent action brought on the same claims and causes of action. Anno: 68 ALR 473, 474.

§ 1021. Technical Form of Action.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342, 20:343.
p. 219, n. 14.
When the writ of attachment is considered as void, trespass and not case is the proper form of common law remedy. Allison v. Rheam. 3 Serg. & R. (Pa) 139. 8 Am Dec 644.
p. 219, n. 18. It has been held that the statutory proceeding on an attachment bond may be prosecuted either by a motion in the original cause, or by an independent action. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

§ 1022. Remedies of Third Persons.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
Forms: 20 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 20:342, 20:343.

§ 1023. Contribution among attaching or Garnishing Creditors as to Liability for Wrongful Attachment.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1024. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
p. 222, n. 3. Anno: 127 ALR 693.

§ 1025. Principal or Agent as Defendant.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
Am Jur cited in Clark v. Andrews, 109 Cal App2d 193, 240 P2d 330.

§ 1026. Corporation Defendant.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1027. Joint Defendants.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1028. In Action on Bond.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1029. — Defendants.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
p. 224, n. 6. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.
p. 224, n. 7. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

§ 1030. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
Am Jur cited in General Acci. Fire & Life Assur. Corp. v. Mitchell, 120 Colo 531, 211 P2d 551.
R. C. L. cited in Kilbourne v. McAllister, 179 Okla. 267, 65 P. (2d) 516.
p. 225, n. 3. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1439.

§ 1031. In Action on Bond.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1032. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1033. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
Am Jur cited in Latronica v Royal Indem. Co. 8 Ill App2d 337, 132 NE2d 16.
Rowan v State. 172 Md 190, 191 A 244 (n 13).

§ 1034. Admissibility.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1035. Writ and Record.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1036. — Admissions and Declarations.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1037. Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
p. 228, n. 16. Where the attachment defendant sues the attachment plaintiff for malicious and wrongful attachment, it has been held incumbent upon him to establish that the attachment plaintiff sued out the order of attachment maliciously and without probable cause for believing that the alleged ground for attachment existed, that the order of attachment was actually levied and the attachment defendant was thereby deprived of his right to use the property for any legitimate purpose, that the attachment proceeding legally terminated in favor of the attachment defendant, and that the attachment defendant suffered damage as a result of the levy. Brown v Guaranty Estates Corp. 239 NC 595, 80 SE2d 645, 40 ALR2d 1094.

§ 1038. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
p. 229, n. 8. Anno: 143 ALR 788, s. 56 ALR 2d 111 (reasonableness, adequacy, or excessiveness of specific fees); 65 ALR2d 1440.

§ 1039. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.

§ 1040. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attachment, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 221 et seq.
p. 230, n. 18. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1439.
p. 230, n. 19. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1439.

ATTORNEY GENERAL

New section added in this Supplement:

§ 8.5. — Intervention.

§ 1. Scope of Article.

p. 232, n. 1. As to prohibition against attorney general, see PROHIBITION.

§ 2. Definition.

p. 232, n. 2. Commonwealth ex rel. Ferguson v Gardner (Ky) 327 SW2d 947, 74 ALR2d 1059.

The attorney general of Florida has been recognized as the chief law officer of the state, and, absent express legislative restriction, may exercise his power and authority in the premises as the public interest may require. Ervin v Collins (Fla) 85 So 2d 852, 59 ALR2d 706.

§ 3. Distinction between Prosecuting Attorneys and Attorneys General.

Am Jur cited in People ex rel. Castle v Daniels. 8 Ill2d 43, 132 NE2d 507 (dissent op).

§ 4. Appointment, Qualifications, and Tenure of Office.

Am Jur cited in Wilentz v. Hendrickson, 133 NJ Eq 447, 33 A(2d) 366.

§ 5. At Common Law.

Am Jur quoted in State ex rel. Williams v. Karston, 208 Ark 703, 187 SW2d 327.

State ex rel. Olsen v Public Service Com. 129 Mont 106, 283 P2d 594.

Am Jur cited in Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 25 Del Ch 420, 22 A2d 397, 137 ALR 803.

Johnson v. Com. 291 Ky 829, 165 SW(2d) 820.

Furman University v McLeod, 238 SC 475, 120 SE2d 865.

RCL quoted in Dunn Constr. Co. v. Craig, 191 Miss 682, 2 So(2d) 166, suggestion of error overruled in 191 Miss 715, 3 So(2d) 834.

RCL cited in Wilentz v. Hendrickson, 133 NJ Eq 447, 33 A(2d) 366.

Com. v. Margiotti, 325 Pa 17, 188 A 524.

p. 234, n. 5.

See Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 25 Del Ch 420, 22 A2d 397, 137 ALR 803.

The duties attached to the office of attorney general, created by a state Constitution which fails to specify the duties of the office, are those common-law duties which such officer had previously exercised as chief law officer of the realm. Kennington-Saenger Theatres v. State, 196 Miss 841, 18 So2d 483, 153 ALR 883.

p. 234, n. 6. Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 25 Del Ch 420, 22 A2d 397, 137 ALR 803.

Page 235. Add, following note 9: And in carrying out his power to investigate criminal acts, institute proceedings, and to try cases on the commonwealth's behalf, he may supersede and set aside the district attorney when in his judgment such action may be necessary.[9.5]

[9.5] Re Grand Jury Investigation, 365 Pa 330, 75 A2d 465.

§ 6. Under Modern Statutes.

Am Jur cited in Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 25 Del Ch 420, 22 A2d 397, 137 ALR 803.

State ex rel. McKittrick v Missouri Pub. Serv. Commission, 352 Mo 29, 175 SW2d 857.

National Asso. for the Advancement of Colored People v Eure, 245 NC 331, 95 SE2d 893.

RCL quoted in Dunn Constr. Co. v. Craig, 191 Miss 682, 2 So(2d) 166, suggestion of error overruled in 191 Miss 715, 3 So(2d) 834.

RCL cited in State ex rel. Rice v. Stewart, 184 Miss 202, 184 So 44, 185 So 247.

Wilentz v. Hendrickson, 133 NJ Eq 447, 33 A2d 366.

Com. v. Margiotti, 325 Pa 17, 188 A 524.

p. 235, n. 11.

Where the state constitution in providing for the appointment and term of office of an attorney general does not prescribe his duties, they are the same as at common law, save as enlarged or circumscribed by the legislature. Van Riper v. Jenkins, 137 NJ Eq 603, 45 A2d 844, 163 ALR 1343

It has been held that the statutory provision for exercise by the attorney general of all common-law duties and authority pertaining to his office under the common law has reference to his duties under the common law as it existed in England prior to 1607. Commonwealth ex rel. Ferguson v Gardner (Ky) 327 SW2d 947, 74 ALR2d 1059.

p. 235, n. 13. Anno: 23 LRA(NS) 691.

See Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 25 Del Ch 420, 22 A2d 397, 137 ALR 803.

As to power of attorney general to attack validity of divorce decree, see 17 Am Jur DIVORCE AND SEPARATION p 294 § 280, p 390 § 478.

p. 236, n. 15.

It has been held that although it was perfectly obvious that by statute the attorney general was the general and legal adviser of the various departments and officers of the state government and was entitled to appear and represent them in court, such statute did not require that the attorney general, standing in the position of an attorney to a client who happened to be an officer of the government, should step into the shoes of the client in wholly directing the defense and the legal steps to be taken in opposition or contrary to the wishes and demands of his client or the officer or department concerned. Anno: 137 ALR 819.

Notwithstanding the statutory right of the attorney general to represent state officers, and the statutory prohibition against employment of counsel by state officers in connection with public business, such officers were entitled to be represented in the supreme court by counsel of their own choosing where the matter at issue was the correctness of the ruling of the trial court striking the appearance of such counsel in the trial court as representatives of such state officers in an action against them to obtain payment of a claim against the state Anno: 137 ALR 819.

p. 236. n. 16. Anno: 137 ALR 827.

Page 236. Add, following note 16: In determining whether a statute confers implied authority upon a commission to appoint its own law officer in derogation of the prerogative of the attorney general to represent such state agency in the courts, the language of such statute must be considered in the light of the office of attorney general at common law and of the general understanding of the nature of the office and the public policy in regard thereto exhibited through the years.[16.5]

[16.5] Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 25 Del Ch 420, 22 A2d 397, 137 ALR 803, wherein, in holding that a statute authorizing the Delaware Liquor Commission "to engage the services of experts and of persons engaged in the practice of a profession" did not confer power to appoint a law officer for the commission independent of the attorney general to represent the state in the courts, the court said that in the absence of express legislative restriction the attorney general, as the chief law officer of the state, may exercise all of the powers incident to the office at common law; that the right of a mere administrative agency of the state to appoint it own law officer to conduct litigations in supersession of the attorney general must rest on a plain and unambiguous grant of authority; and that the statute involved in this case did not indicate a legislative purpose to grant the commission such authority where it did not mention "counsel," "attorney," or "actions," and did not suggest legal representation of any kind.

Anno: 137 ALR 818.

p. 236, n. 17. Anno: 137 ALR 820.

It has been held, however, that the state highway commission had no authority to employ an attorney, in spite of the undeniable necessity for the constant services of an attorney, where the statute creating such commission expressly provided that it "may do all things necessary in the construction or maintenance of said roads except where the power is by this or another statute expressly or by clear implication denied or restricted," and such statute made no reference to a previous statute which expressly forbade any state officer, board of trustees, or the head of any department or institution of the state to employ or be represented by other counsel or attorney at law than the attorney general or his assistants, unless an emergency should arise which in the opinion of the attorney general required the employment of other counsel. Anno: 137 ALR 828

In a condemnation proceeding brought by a state highway department, it was held that an assistant attorney general could not bind the department by a statement that, if a privately owned septic tank had to be moved, the department would take care of the removal. South Carolina State Highway v. Butterfield, 216 SC 463, 58 SE2d 737.

Page 236. Add, following note 17: And statutes which authorize various commissions, such as a state boundary commission, or a state public utilities commission, to employ special counsel, have been held valid.[17.5] But on the other hand, it has been held that the legislature had no power to confer upon the superintendent of the state insurance department power to conduct certain litigation with reference to insurance companies which had theretofore been a duty required of the attorney general under a Constitution providing that the executive department should consist of certain officers, including the attorney general, and that they "shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law." And the same rule was held to apply to employment of counsel in prosecutions by the rivers and lakes commission and by the state board of pharmacy.[17.6] [17.5] Anno: 137 ALR 820 et seq.

[17.6] Fergus v. Russel, 270 Ill 304, 110 NE 130, Ann Cas 1916B 1120.
Anno: 137 ALR 822.

§ 7. Generally.

p. 236, n. 2.

Congress may, in the exercise of the power conferred by Article 4, § 3, clause 2 of the Constitution to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting property belonging to the United States, limit the power of the Attorney General to prosecute claims for the government. United States v. California, 332 US 19, 91 L ed 1889, 67 S Ct 1658.

Page 237. Add following note 4: The Attorney General may, in the exercise of his general powers to institute and maintain court proceedings in order to safeguard national interests, file and maintain a suit to determine the ownership as between a state and the United States of lands under the ocean beyond the coast.[4.5]

[4.5] United States v. Louisiana, 339 US 699, 94 L ed 1216, 70 S Ct 914; United States v. California, 332 US 19, 91 L ed 1889, 67 S Ct 1658.

No implication of a limitation of the statutory power of the Attorney General to institute and maintain court proceedings to safeguard national interests, so as to preclude him from instituting a suit for determination of the respective rights of the United States and the State of California in lands under the ocean off the coast of California, can be drawn from fact that Congress twice failed to grant specific authority to file such a suit, or from a joint resolution quitclaiming to the adjacent states a 3-mile belt of all lands situated under the ocean beyond the low water mark except those which the government had previously acquired by purchase, condemnation, or donation, where a presidential veto of such resolution was sustained. United States v. California, 332 US 19, 91 L ed 1889, 67 S Ct 1658.

p. 237, n. 6.

The statutory provision (5 USCA § 310) that special assistants to the Attorney General may, "when thereunto specifically directed by the Attorney General, conduct any kind of legal proceeding" is for the protection of the United States, and does not require the naming of the persons or the particular cases to be prosecuted. Shushan v. United States (CCA 5th) 117 F(2d) 110, 133 ALR 1040, writ of certiorari denied in 313 US 574, 85 L ed 1531, 61 S Ct 1085, 1086.

p. 237, n. 7. See 28 US §§ 503 et seq. (1948 Revision).

p. 237, n. 11. The opinions of the attorney general are always valuable when passing upon questioned statutes, and, although not binding, are always considered and frequently resorted to. United States ex rel. Louisiana v. Jack, 244 US 397, 61 L ed 1222, 37 S Ct 605; Union Ins. Co. v. Hoge, 21 How.(US) 35, 16 L ed 61; Harrison v. Vose, 9 How. (US) 372, 13 L ed 179; Surgett v. Lapice, 8 How.(US) 48, 12 L ed 982; First Nat. Bank v. United States (CCA 8th) 206 F 374, 46 LRA(NS) 1139

p. 237, n. 12. It has been held that the Director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons is the "authorized representative" of the Attorney General, within the meaning of a statute providing that persons convicted of an offense against the United States shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General or "his authorized representative," and is empowered to direct the transfer of federal prisoners from one institution to another. Mullican v United States, 252 F2d 398, 70 ALR2d 1217.

§ 8. Conducting Litigation—In General.

Am Jur cited in Johnson v. Com. 291 Ky 829, 165 SW(2d) 820.

State ex rel. Taylor v. Wade, 360 Mo 895, 231 SW2d 179.

Bonniwell v Flanders (ND) 62 NW2d 25, 40 ALR2d 1121.

p. 238, n. 15. Brown v Memorial Nat. Home Foundation, 162 Cal App 2d 513, 329 P2d 118, 75 ALR2d 427, cert den 358 US 943, 3 L ed 2d 352, 79 S Ct 353.

The attorney general of a state is entrusted with the management of all its legal affairs and the prosecution of all suits, civil or criminal, in which the state is interested, having the power to control and manage all litigation on behalf of the state, and to maintain all suits necessary for the enforcement of the laws of the state, the preservation of order, and the protection of public rights. The attorney general alone has the right to represent the state as to all litigation in which the subject matter is of state-wide interest. Kennington-Saenger Theatres v. State, 196 Miss 841, 18 So(2d) 483, 153 ALR 883.

It has been held that the attorney general, as the chief law officer of the state, may institute legal proceedings necessary to protect the interests of the state and defend all actions affecting public interest. Bonniwell v Flanders, (ND) 62 NW 2d 25, 40 ALR2d 1121.

p. 238, n. 16. It has been held that the statutory provision that the attorney general shall appear for and represent the state before the court in all cases in which the state is interested does not authorize the attorney general to bring an action in the courts if no cognizable common-law or statutory cause of action can be stated. State v Taylor, 58 Wash 2d 252, 362 P2d 247, 86 ALR2d 1365.

p. 238, n. 3. Re Grand Jury Investigation, 365 Pa 330, 75 A2d 465

p. 238, n. 7. It has been held that the primary obligation of the attorney general is to protect the interests of the sovereign state and its departments and subdivisions, including that of aiding in the collection of all tax revenue to which the state is entitled. Commonwealth ex rel. Ferguson v Gardner (Ky) 327 SW2d 947, 74 ALR2d 1059.

Page 239. Add, following note 9: And it has been held that specific authority from the Governor or legislature to defend an action by a Federal savings and loan association to restrain state officers from seeking to prevent it from transacting business in the state without complying with the requirements of state law relating to building and loan associations, and for a judgment declaratory of the validity of the statute under which it is organized, is not required by a state statute providing that the attorney general shall appear for the state and prosecute or defend all actions and proceedings in which the state is interested or a party, and when requested by the Governor or either branch of the legislature shall appear for the state and prosecute or defend in any court or before any office any cause or matter in which the state or the people thereof may be in any wise interested.[9.1]

[9.1] First Federal Sav. & L. Asso. v. Loomis (First Federal Sav. & L. Asso. v. Martin) (CCA 7th) 97 F(2d) 831, 121 ALR 99, writ of certiorari dismissed in 305 US 666, 83 L ed 432, 59 S Ct 363.

§ 8.5. (New text) — Intervention.

The attorney general has been denied the power to intervene in civil suits of a private nature in some of the cases, on the ground that the duties imposed upon him by statute did not embrace such an intervention.[1] The attorney general has also been denied the right to intervene in civil suits of a private nature, under statutes authorizing intervention by any person having an interest in the matter in litigation.[2] However, the attorney general has been held to have the right to intervene in civil suits of a private nature involving the interests of the state, under statutes making it his duty to prosecute or defend cases pertaining to the public interest of the state.[3] And it is generally held that the attorney general may intervene in civil suits of a private nature involving the constitutionality of a statute, where the result to be reached in the suit may affect not only the immediate parties to the litigation but also the interests of the public generally.[4]

[1] Anno: 163 ALR 1347; 74 ALR2d 1066.

As to right of attorney general or other representative of state to intervene in divorce suit, see 17 Am Jur 294, DIVORCE AND SEPARATION, § 280.

As to right of state to intervene in civil suits of a private nature, see 30 Am Jur 940, PARTIES, § 68.

As to right of attorney general to intervene in suits to enforce a charitable trust, see 10 Am Jur 668, CHARITIES, § 115.5.

[2] Anno: 163 ALR 1347.

[3] Mundy v. McDonald, 216 Mich 444, 185 NW 877, 20 ALR 398 (holding that in an action of libel against a judge of the circuit court for filing in the office of the clerk of the circuit court a defamatory statement against the plaintiff, the attorney general may file a motion to dismiss the action on the ground that the declaration of the plaintiff was not sufficient in law because the declaration shows that the defendant was acting as a circuit judge at the time of the alleged libel and had published the matter alleged to be libelous in the exercise of his functions as a circuit judge, where a statute made it a duty of the attorney general to prosecute and defend cases pertaining to the public interest of the state).

Anno: 163 ALR 1348.

[4] Van Riper v. Jenkins, 137 NJ Eq 603, 45 A2d 844, 163 ALR 1343 (further holding that the right of the attorney general of the state to intervene in private litigation when a public issue concerning the welfare of the people is involved transcends the limitation of a court rule relative to intervention; that the attorney general of the state is entitled to intervene in a suit to enjoin a sheriff from taking fingerprints and photographs of persons under indictment and forwarding them to the superintendent of state police where the suit involves the constitutionality of a statute prescribing the doing of these things).

Anno: 163 ALR 1349.

§ 9. — As Affected by Private or Public Character of Litigation.

Am Jur cited in Boykin v. Martocello, 194 Ga 867, 22 SE(2d) 790.

§ 10. — Discretionary Power.

Am Jur cited in Hermann v. Morlidge, 298 Ky 632, 183 SW2d 807.

p. 240, n. 4.

A statute providing that when requested by the governor or either branch of the legislature, the attorney general should appear for the state in any cause or matter in which it or the people thereof should be interested has been construed as meaning that when, for any reason, the attorney general fails to institute or defend such cause or action, he shall be required to do so if either the governor or one branch of the legislature requests it. First Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. v. Loomis (First Federal Sav. & L. Asso. v. Martin) (CCA 7th) 97 F(2d) 831, 121 ALR 99, writ of certiorari denied in 305 US 666, 83 L ed 432, 59 S Ct 363.

§ 11. — Control over and Disposition of Litigation; Dismissal or Compromise; Waiver of State Immunity from Suit.

Am Jur quoted in State ex rel. Carmichael v. Jones, 252 Ala 479, 41 So2d 280.

Cooley v. South Carolina Tax Commission, 204 SC 10, 28 SE2d 445.

Am Jur cited in Dunn v Schmid, 239 Minn 559, 60 NW2d 14.

p. 241, n. 12.

In South Carolina State Highway v. Butterfield, 216 SC 463, 58 SE2d 737, involving a condemnation proceeding brought by a state highway department, it was held that the attorney general could not even bind his successor in office not to bring an action, or not to take an appeal, nor could he assent to or ratify anything which lies within the province of the legislature; and as he represents the state before the court, he does not appear as an attorney at law but exercises the functions imposed on him by law of which the authority to bind the department was not one.

p. 241, n 14

Anno: 86 ALR2d 524.

Where a state constitution, in stating that provision may be made by general law for bringing suit against the state, but that no special act authorizing such a suit shall ever be passed, indicates a policy prohibiting state consent to suit in one particular case in the absence of a general consent to suit in all similar causes of action, the Attorney General of the state will be deemed to be without power to waive in an individual case the state's immunity for suit; and authority conferred upon him by statute to appear and defend actions against the state or its officials will not be deemed to have conferred such power. Ford Motor Co. v. Department of Treasury, 323 US 459, 89 L ed 389, 65 S Ct 347.

The legislature having provided a procedure by which an unsatisfied default judgment for damages inflicted by a motor vehicle may be paid from a state fund, which procedure requires a thirty-day notice prior to the entry of the judgment to be given to the state highway commissioner and the attorney general, it has been held not to be within the province of the commissioner or the attorney general, or both, to waive such notice after the entry of judgment so as to transform a private liability into a state liability. Bonniwell v Flanders (ND) 62 NW2d 25, 40 ALR2d 1121.

p. 241, notes 14, 15. Generally, as to waiver of state's immunity from suit, see 49 Am Jur 313 et seq., STATES, §§ 96 et seq.

§ 12. — Matters of Practice.

Am Jur cited in Van Riper v. Jenkins, 137 NJ Eq 603, 45 A2d 844, 163 ALR 1343.

p. 241, n. 16. Bonniwell v Flanders (ND) 62 NW2d 25, 40 ALR2d 1121.

See Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 25 Del Ch 420, 22 A2d 397, 137 ALR 803.

Page 241. Add, following note 16: The question whether the attorney general was authorized to begin and prosecute an action can be raised only by answer or plea in abatement where the facts do not appear in the petition.[16.5] But where it appears from the petition that the attorney general as plaintiff is acting in his official capacity for and on behalf of the state, and there are no allegations to the contrary, it will be presumed that he was acting with due authority in bringing the action, notwithstanding that he did not allege that he was acting pursuant to a request of the governor.[16.6]

[16.5, 16.6] Martin v. Smith, 239 Wis 314. 1 NW(2d) 163, 140 ALR 1063.

Page 243. Add new paragraph at end of section: The question whether an action by an attorney general in his own name for the state regarding a matter of state concern, but not involving a money judgment in favor of the state was properly entitled will not be considered on appeal where it was not raised below his allegation that he brought the action as attorney general on behalf of the state being to the same effect as if he had begun an action in the name of the state on the relation of the attorney general.[7.5] And the question whether jurisdiction was properly invoked in an action by the attorney general, involving the point as to whether he had been properly authorized to bring the action, will not be considered on appeal where the matter was not pressed in the trial court, and for that reason was not considered by that court.[7.6]

[7.5, 7.6] Martin v. Smith, 239 Wis 314. 1 NW (2d) 163, 140 ALR 1063.

§ 14. Advisory Opinion; Weight and Effect of Opinion.

Am Jur cited in Crown Concrete Co. v Conkling, — Iowa —, 75 NW2d 351; Nevada v Slemmons, 244 Iowa 1068. 59 NW2d 793. 43 ALR2d 693.

R. C. L. cited in State v. Conley, 118 W. Va. 508. 190 S. E. 908.

p. 243, n. 13.

Kerby v. Collin County (Tex Civ App) 212 SW2d 494, 3 ALR2d 804.

The attorney general of the state may be called upon to advise those who administer the government of the state, and in the absence of judicial decision his opinions become the guide of such executives. Van Riper v. Jenkins. 137 NJ Eq 603, 45 A2d 844. 163 ALR 1343.

p. 244, n. 19

The attorney general's construction of a statute, acted upon for many years, has been held entitled to considerable weight. Otter Tail Power Co. v. Elbow Lake, 234 Minn 419. 49 NW2d 197, 27 ALR2d 906.

p. 244, n. 1. Badger v Hoidale (CCA8th) 88 F2d 208, 109 ALR 798 (same effect given to the opinion by the Federal court).

Nevada v Slemmons, 244 Iowa 1068. 59 NW2d 793. 43 ALR2d 693.

Huntworth v. Tanner. 87 Wash 670. 152 P 523, Ann Cas 1917D 676.

§ 15. Generally.

Page 244. Add, following note 2: The statute may provide for reasonable additional compensation for part time members of the attorney general's staff who perform unusual and extraordinary services outside of their ordinary and expected duties.[2.5]

[2.5] Application of Young (Del) 104 A2d 263.

§ 16. Actions to Restrain Public Nuisances.

Am Jur quoted in State ex rel. Williams v. Karston, 208 Ark 703. 187 SW2d 327.

§ 17. Probate Proceedings and Actions Concerning Charitable Trusts.

Am Jur quoted in Re Owens' Estate. 244 Iowa 143, 57 NW2d 193.

Com. ex rel. Marshall v Beeman, 299 Ky 26 184 SW2d 117.

Am Jur cited in Re Quinn's Estate, 156 Cal App2d 684, 320 P2d 219.

Re Pruner's Estate, 390 Pa 529, 136 A2d 107,

p. 246, n. 15. It has been held that inasmuch as the proper management of charitable trusts is a matter of public concern, the state is interested therein within the meaning of the statutory provision that the attorney general shall appear for and represent the state before the courts in all cases in which the state "is interested." State v Taylor, 58 Wash 2d 252, 362 P2d 247, 86 ALR2d 1365.

p. 246, notes 15 et seq. For later material see 10 Am Jur. CHARITIES. § 115.5 (Supp.)

p. 247, n. 4. State v Taylor, 58 Wash 2d 252, 362 P2d 247, 86 ALR2d 1365.

Page 247. Add new paragraph at end of section: The fact that a will provides for a charitable trust does not authorize intervention by the attorney general in a proceeding to contest the will.[6.5] But there is dictum indicating a view that the attorney general either has the right or, in the trial court's discretion, may be permitted to intervene in such a will contest, depending upon whether he is a necessary party, a point not decided, or a proper party, which the court deemed him to be.[6.51]

[6.5] Commonwealth ex rel. Ferguson v Gardner (Ky) 327 SW2d 947, 74 ALR2d 1059.

Anno: 74 ALR2d 1066.

[6.51] Murphey v Dalton (Mo) 314 SW2d 726, 67 ALR2d 1278.

Anno: 74 ALR2d 1067.

§ 18. Actions against Public Officers.

p. 248, notes 8–12.

See 44 Am Jur 136. QUO WARRANTO, § 67.

§ 19. Actions Concerning Corporations.

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. Watson v. Dade County Roofing Co. 156 Fla 260. 22 So2d 793.

p. 249, n. 3.

That a federal statute prohibits national banks from purchasing the stock of any other corporation has been held not to prevent the state attorney general from enforcing a state law which does not permit any corporation to own bank stock, except in enumerated circumstances. Peoples Sav. Bank v Stoddard, 359 Mich 297, 102 NW2d 777, 83 ALR2d 344.

§ 20. — Injunction and Mandamus against Corporations.

p. 251, n. 19.

It has been held that, in an action in which a state bank is granted injunctive and other equitable relief against a national bank and others associated with it who are properly found to have participated in an illegal conspiracy to surreptitiously acquire enough stock of the state bank to dissolve it and leave a branch of the national bank the only institution in the community conducting a general banking business, similar relief in terms of injunction, receivership, and divestiture of the acquired stock may be entered against all the defendants in a quo warranto action instituted by the attorney general and consolidated for trial with the action by the state bank. Peoples Sav. Bank v Stoddard, 359 Mich 297, 102 NW2d 777, 83 ALR2d 344.

§ 21. Criminal Prosecutions.

R. C. L. cited in Com. v. Margiotti, 325 Pa 17, 188 A. 524.

p. 253, n. 17.

The state attorney general's power to investigate any violation of law within the executive branch may supplant or be merged with an investigation by a grand jury to ascertain whether crime has been committed, and co-ordinated in one investigation under his supervision in conjunction with or superseding the district attorney. Dauphin County Grand Jury Investigation. 332 Pa 289. 2 A(2d) 783. 120 ALR 414.

The state's attorney general may, through the quarter sessions and the district attorney's office, see to it that the proper administration of the government is not impeded in the course of a grand jury investigation of alleged official misconduct within the executive branch of the government by the wholesale removal of books, plans, specifications, and other documents absolutely essential to its functioning. Dauphin County Grand Jury Investigation, 332 Pa 289, 2 A(2d) 783, 120 ALR 414.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

New sections added in this Supplement:

§ 2.1. — Integrated Bars.
§ 16.1. — Effect of Removal from State.
§ 240.5. Share or Interest in Decedent's Estate, or in Trust.
§ 261.5. — Heir-hunting.
§ 283.1. — Effect of Suspension of Sentence.
§ 285.1. Misconduct of Law Partner.

§ 1. Scope.

p. 262, n. 1. As to authority of receivers and trustees in bankruptcy, see BANKRUPTCY, Vol. 6, § 100.1 (Supplement).

See PUBLIC OFFICERS.

§ 2. Regulation of Practice of Law.

Am Jur cited in Martin v Davis, 187 Kan 473, 357 P2d 782.

Clark v Reardon, 231 Mo App 666, 104 SW2d 407 (n. 9).

Re Baker, 8 NJ 321, 85 A2d 505.

Grievance Committee v. Dean (Tex Civ App) 190 SW2d 126.

p. 262, n. 8.

The reason why laymen are forbidden to engage in the law business is that it is detrimental to the public interest for them to represent themselves to the public as being qualified to do that business when they are not, thereby ensnaring the public and spreading error. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149.

p. 262, n. 9. People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

Nelson v. Smith, 107 Utah 382, 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512.

It is a prerogative of the judicial department to regulate and define the practice of law, and the power of the legislature is in aid of, and does not supersede or detract from, the power of the courts. People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

The supreme court of the state has the inherent power to regulate the conduct and qualifications of attorneys as officers of the court. Re Nebraska State Bar Asso. 133 Neb. 283, 275 NW 265, 114 ALR 151; State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner, 141 Neb 556, 4 NW(2d) 302, 144 ALR 138.

A statute forbidding the doing by laymen, as constituting the practice of law or the doing of law business, of things permitted by a decision of the state supreme court and held not to constitute law practice or law business, would be unconstitutional, as against § 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution and §§ 4 and 30, art. 2, of the Constitution of Missouri. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149.

The state has both a right and a duty to control and regulate the practice of law in order to protect the public welfare. And the state has power to declare acts of unauthorized practice of law to be illegal and to punish violations thereof by fine and imprisonment. Nelson v. Smith, 107 Utah 382, 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512.

Page 262. Add, following note 9: In the absence of an express grant of the power to regulate the practice of law to any one of the three departments of the government, it must, when the occasion demands, be exercised by the judicial department to which it naturally belongs.[9.1]

The Canons of Professional Ethics of the American Bar Association, adopted as rules of court by various courts, are to be viewed not as a bill of rights for the bar, but as a codification of the more important limitations on legal practice broadly deemed necessary for the protection of clients.[9.11]

[9.1] Re Nebraska State Bar Asso. 133 Neb 283, 275 NW 265, 114 ALR 151.

The practice of law is so intimately connected and bound up with the exercise of judicial power in the administration of justice that the right to define and regulate its practice naturally and logically belongs to the judicial department of the state government. Re Nebraska State Bar Asso. 133 Neb. 283, 275 N. W. 265, 114 A.L.R. 151

[9.11] Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

§ 2.1. (New text) — Integrated Bars.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1324-2:1326.

Within the past few years many states have adopted a method to organize the activities of the bar, known as "bar integration." That term has been defined as essentially, "the process by which every member of the bar is given an opportunity to do his share in carrying out the public service of the bar, and obliged to bear his portion of the responsibility."[9.21] While the statutes or court rules under which they have been organized differ to some extent, integrated bars have the common characteristics of being organized by the state or under the direction of the state, and of being under its direct control.[9.23] In the strictly integrated bar, all practicing attorneys are required to be members, as distinguished from membership in voluntary bar associations, and they are subject to the rules of the bar including such provisions as the requirement of the payment of an annual fee for the administration of the purposes of the bar and of adherence to a code of ethics, the alleged breach of which shall be reason for investigation by the state bar and, upon proper cause appearing, a recommendation for discipline or disbarment of the offending member.[9.25] In some states statutes expressly make provision for a state bar. But apart from such express provisions, it has been held that the court has inherent power to promulgate rules providing for an integrated bar.[9.27] Generally, statutes providing for integrated bars have been upheld over the objection that they violated constitutional provisions against the creation of private corporations by special act.[9.3] The requirement of compulsory membership in a state bar, with payment of an annual membership fee, or license fee, in order that an attorney may be entitled to practice his profession, has been held not to be unconstitutional,[9.31] although in one case such a statute was held invalid because it imposed involuntary incorporation upon the individual lawyer in order that he could practice his profession.[9.33] Probably the greatest amount of controversy in connection with the operation of an integrated bar centers around proceedings in regard to disbarment or other discipline of members of the bar.[9.331] Integrated bar acts have been held not to confer judicial power on governing board to conduct disbarment and disciplinary proceedings, where the actual effect of the provisions is to grant the power to investigate and take evidence and to make recommendations to the supreme court of the state.[9.35] Although in some cases provisions which empower the governing board to suspend or disbar an attorney have been held invalid, generally other portions of the acts have been held not to have been invalidated thereby.[9.37] In either case, the effect of the decisions has been to deny validity to encroachments upon judicial powers, and to limit proceedings by integrated bar boards to the status of recommendations to the supreme court, in which final authority is vested.[9.4] In many of the states in which integrated bars have been established, the determination of the state bar or its committee as to disbarment or other discipline is merely recommendatory in character, the final authority resting with the supreme court, and while the courts usually give weight to the recommendations made by the state bar, they are not required to follow them.[9.41] The giving to such boards of power to institute disbarment or disciplinary proceedings, to make findings, and to report to the supreme court is clearly not a conferring of judicial power.[9.42] A state bar act has been held not to be retroactive so as to divest the court of authority to hear reinstatement proceedings pending at the time the act was passed, giving the board of governors the power to pass upon petitions for reinstatement.[9.43]

[9.21] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 161.

[9.23] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 161.

Typical of the integrated bars is that of Kentucky, created under rules of the court of appeals in compliance with statutory authority, "organizing and governing a bar association of the attorneys at law of this State to act as an administrative agency of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky for the purpose of enforcing such rules and regulations as are prescribed, adopted, and promulgated by the court of appeals under this act, providing for the government of the State Bar as a part of the judicial department of the state government, and for such divisions thereof as the court of appeals shall determine, and requiring all persons practicing law in this State to be members thereof in good standing, and fixing the form of its organization and operation," and fixing a schedule of annual fees for the purpose of administering the act and rules and regulations to be prescribed. Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 162.

The legislature may, in the discharge of its constitutional duty to promote the general welfare, seek to maintain high standards of conduct in the legal profession and to aid in the efficient administration of justice by providing for the integration of the bar by the formation of a state bar association continued membership in which shall be a condition precedent to the right to practice in the state courts. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

[9.25] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 161.

Among the advantages of bar integration claimed for it by its proponents are that it is fair and equitable in that it provides that all of the lawyers, instead of only the members of a voluntary bar association, comprising but a fraction of the lawyers of the state, shall meet the expense of carrying on the activities of the bar, and that it provides the only efficient method of handling questions of legal ethics and enforcing discipline. Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 161.

[9.27] Re Nebraska State Bar Asso. 133 Neb. 283, 275 N. W. 265, 114 A.L.R. 151.

Anno: 114 ALR 163; 151 ALR 617.

See Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

Power to provide for the integration of the state bar by the organization and government of a state bar association may be conferred upon the supreme court, although, under the state Constitution, such court has only appellate jurisdiction. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

[9.3] Anno: 114 ALR 164.

[9.31] Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

Anno: 114 ALR 165; 151 ALR 619.

Integration of the bar being essentially a judicial function, a statute directing the supreme court to provide for the organization and government of a state bar association, of which practicing lawyers shall be required to be members, is not unconstitutional as delegating legislative power to the court. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

A statute providing for the formation of a state bar association membership in which shall be a condition of the right to practice law is not invalid as denying to members of the bar the benefit of Federal statutes in relation to the practice of law in the Federal courts, since the state has no power of authority to modify or change the rules of the Federal courts respecting the admission of lawyers to practice before them. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

While the legislature has no constitutional power to compel the court to act, or if it acts, to act in a particular way in the discharge of the judicial function it may, with propriety and in the exercise of its power and the discharge of its duty, declare itself upon questions relating to the general welfare, which includes the integration of the bar, and the court will respect such declarations and adopt them so far as they do not embarrass the court or impair its constitutional functions. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586

An act of the legislature providing that there shall be an association composed of persons licensed to practice law and that the Supreme Court by appropriate orders shall provide for the organization and government of the association and define the rights, obligations, and conditions of membership, therein, is to be regarded, not as a mere memorial invoking the power of the court in a matter within its jurisdiction, but as a direction to be deferred to. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

The organization of an integrated bar by the formation of a state bar association and formulation by the supreme court of rules for its governance, and defining the rights, obligations, and conditions of membership therein, may properly be postponed where a large number of members of the bar are in the military and naval service of the United States, and many others are giving a large part of their time and energy to matters directly connected with the war effort, and existing provisions as to the admission of candidates to the bar, disbarment proceedings, disciplinary action, and the unauthorized practice of the law, are operating satisfactorily. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699 151 ALR 586.

[9.33] Anno: 114 ALR 164.

[9.331] Anno: 151 ALR 622.

[9.35] Anno: 114 ALR 168.

[9.37] Anno: 114 ALR 168 et seq; 151 ALR 622.

[9.4] Anno: 114 ALR 169, 170.

The integrated bar, acting through its grievance committees, conducts hearings, summarily dismisses charges found to be without merit, and certifies up to the board of governors the record in those cases in which it deems the evidence justifies further action, and the board of governors then conducts further proceedings before such matter is brought before the supreme court for final hearing and determination, that court becoming the ultimate trier of the issues of fact as well as of law. Re Lewkowitz, 70 Ariz 325, 220 P2d 229.

[9.41] Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

Anno: 151 ALR 624; 54 ALR2d 1281.

[9.42] Anno: 114 ALR 169, 172.

[9.43] Anno: 114 ALR 173.

§ 3. What Constitutes Law Practice.

Am Jur quoted in Bump v. District Ct. 232 Iowa 623, 5 NW(2d) 914.

Hobson v. Kentucky Trust Co. 303 Ky App 493, 197 SW2d 454.

Am Jur cited in Clark v. Reardon, 231 Mo App 666, 104 SW(2d) 407 (n. 11).

Hagen v Gallerano, 66 NJ Super 319, 169 A2d 186.

Virgin Islands Bar Asso. v Dench (DC Virgin Islands) 124 F Supp 257.

RCL cited in People v. Ring, 26 Cal App Supp(2d) 768, 70 P(2d) 281.

Page 262. Insert, at the beginning of the section: It is not practical to frame any comprehensive and satisfactory definition of what constitutes the practice of law. Each case must depend largely upon its own particular facts.[9.2] The tendency is to restrict the field in which lay agencies may operate.[9.21] The character of the act done, and not the place where it is performed, is the decisive factor in determining whether a person is engaged in the practice of law.[9.22]

[9.2] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

Anno: 111 ALR 21; 125 ALR 1173.

A definition of the words "practicing law" approved as substantially correct is as follows: "Practicing as an attorney or counselor at law, according to the laws and customs of our courts, is the giving of advice or rendition of any sort of service by any person, firm, or corporation when the giving of such advice or rendition of such service requires the use of any degree of legal knowledge or skill." Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 23.

The words "practice of law" may have an entirely different meaning in a statute designed to prevent the practice of law by one who is not qualified to do so from that which the same expression should have in determining qualification to hold judicial office. Gazan v. Heery, 183 Ga. 30, 187 S. E. 371, 106 A.L.R. 498.

The meaning of the term "practice law," as used in a statute making it unlawful for any person not a member of the state bar to "practice law," has been held to be sufficiently certain where prior to the enactment of the statute the state supreme court had defined the meaning of such term, and the legislature in enacting the statute had apparently adopted such definition. Anno: 83 L ed 912.

As to whether services in connection with patent matters constitute the practice of law, see annotation: 111 ALR 43.

As to special statutes in regard to the practice of law, see Anno: 111 ALR 50; 125 ALR 1185.

As to what amounts to a practice of law within contemplation of a constitutional or statutory provision which makes such practice a condition of eligibility to a judicial office or forbids it by one holding a judicial position, see JUDGES.

[9.21] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 24.

[9.22] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

Anno: 111 ALR 32; 125 ALR 1175; 157 ALR 282 et seq. (corporation): 157 ALR 522 et seq. (collection agencies); 69 ALR2d 409–420 (trust company).

A statute prohibiting the unlicensed practice of law has no application to a person acting for himself in legal matters. And a statute prohibiting the unlicensed practice of law does not conflict with the constitutional provision that no person shall be barred from prosecuting or defending before any tribunal in the state, by himself or counsel, any civil cause to which he is a party. Nelson v. Smith, 107 Utah 382, 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512.

The fact that litigants may in some jurisdictions appear in justice courts by agents does not mean that a collection agency may engage in the practice of regularly representing clients in justice courts. Anno: 157 ALR 528.

p. 262, n. 10. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Gazan v Heery, 183 Ga 30, 187 SE 371, 106 ALR 498.

Re Matthews, 57 Idaho 75, 62 P2d 578, 111 ALR 13.

People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v Goodman, 366 Ill 346, 8 NE2d 941, 111 ALR 1.

Anno: 111 ALR 21, 22; 125 ALR 1173; 151 ALR 781; 69 ALR2d 409–415 (trust company).

In Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149, it was said: "It must be admitted that many definitions of the 'practice of law' include acts done both in and out of court, including services where no litigation is in prospect. Nevertheless, there are fundamental differences between the practice of law—in the sense of court work—and law business. While a layman may represent himself in court, he cannot even on a single occasion represent another, whether for a consideration or not. And a corporation cannot represent itself in court at any time but must appear by attorney. On the other hand the doing of any single act out of court in a representative capacity that a lawyer might do will not necessarily convict a layman of engaging in the law business. The very term itself implies that he must have engaged in the business or held himself out, as some cases say. . . . The holding out may be evidenced by repeated acts indicating a course of conduct, or by the exaction of a consideration."

When one appears before a court of record for the purpose of transacting business with the court in connection with any pending litigation, or when any person seeks to invoke the processes of the court in any matter pending before it, that person is engaging in the practice of law. Arkansas Bar Asso. v Union Nat. Bank, 224 Ark 48, 273 SW2d 408.

p. 263, n. 11. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Gazan v Heery, 183 Ga 30, 187 SE 371, 106 ALR 498.

Re Matthews, 57 Idaho 75, 62 P2d 578, 111 ALR 13.

Anno: 111 ALR 23, 26, 27; 125 ALR 1175 et seq.; 69 ALR2d 409–415 (trust company).

It may be said that in general, the practice of directing and managing the enforcement of legal claims and the establishment of the legal rights of others where it is necessary to form and to act upon opinions as to what those rights are and as to the legal methods which must be adopted to enforce them, the practice of giving or furnishing legal advice as to such rights and methods, and the practice, as an occupation, of drafting documents by which such rights are created, modified, surrendered, or secured are all aspects of the practice of law. Anno: 111 ALR 23.

One who confers with clients, advises them as to their legal rights, and then takes the business to an attorney and arranges with him to look after the matter in court, is engaged in the practice of law. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 24.

Laymen entering into a contract with others to furnish the services of a lawyer in specified matters engage in the unauthorized practice of the law. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 24.

One who represents that he is learned in the law and particularly in matters connected with conveyancing and who has prepared deeds of conveyance for which a charge was made is engaged in the practice of law. Re Matthews. 57 Idaho, 75, 62 P. (2d) 578, 111 A.L.R. 13.

The preparation and filing of pleadings in workmen's compensation cases, since they are uniformly simple and liberal amendment is permitted, have been held not to constitute the practice of law. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 30.

p. 263, n. 12. Anno: 105 ALR 1375; 157 ALR 299.

Page 263. Add, following note 12: the activities of title guaranty and abstract companies;[12.5] title examination activities by a lending institution or insurance company;[12.51]

12.5 Anno: 157 ALR 303; 85 ALR2d 184 (detailed discussion of cases considering title examination activities).

While a title insurance company may examine for its own benefit the abstract of title to property which it proposes to insure, to determine whether or not it will insure the title, and while it may specify the corrections necessary to meet its demands, it may not furnish a title opinion to a prospective purchaser to be used by him in determining whether or not he will buy the property, and it may not hold itself out as being authorized to do so. Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v. Grievance Committee, F. C. D. 142 Tex 506. 179 SW2d 946. 157 ALR 268

12.51 Anno: 85 ALR2d 184 (detailed discussion of cases considering title examination activities).

It has been held that a building and loan association which employs an attorney at a fixed annual salary, whose principal duty is the making of title examinations in connection with all real-estate loans financed by the association, and who makes a service charge on the loan which includes an unspecified variable amount for the title examination, is guilty of illegally practicing law on the ground that since a clear title is one condition for the granting of a loan, the title examination service is being made primarily for the borrower's and not the association's benefit. Kentucky State Bar Asso. v First Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. (Ky) 342 SW2d 397, 85 ALR2d 178.

p. 263, n. 13. Annotation: 105 ALR 1375: 157 ALR 299.

p. 263, n. 14. Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 1375: 111 ALR 50: 157 ALR 299.

p. 263. n. 15. Anno: 111 ALR 38: 151 ALR 794.

The preparation and filing of a petition for the reorganization of a corporation, pursuant to § 77B of the Bankruptcy Act, and taking part in all the proceedings leading to a plan for reorganization, by a corporation organized to represent bondholders in corporate reorganizations, has been held not to amount to the practice of law Anno: 125 ALR 1180: 157 ALR 299, 157 ALR 529 (collection agency).

With respect to bankruptcy proceedings and insolvency cases, the opinion has been expressed that any respectable agency, such as an association of credit men, which can assist in the administration of the law should be permitted to do so, even through activities which may savor of practicing law in a minor way, if so simple and obvious as to be within the capacity of any intelligent layman. Anno: 157 ALR 299.

p. 263, n. 16. Annotation: 105 ALR 1375: 157 ALR 299.

p. 263, n. 17. Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 1376: 111 ALR 42; 125 ALR 1181.

However, it has been held that trust companies may appear through their employees in probate or other court matters pertaining to the execution or administration of a trust, probate a will in which they have been designated executor, etc., without engaging in the practice of law Anno: 157 ALR 300

p. 263, n. 18. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Anno: 53 ALR2d 790 et seq.; 69 ALR2d 409-415 (trust company).

It has been held that a notary public who undertakes to provide for the disposition of an estate by drafting and supervising the execution of a will, but who, not being a licensed attorney, is not qualified to undertake the transaction, is engaged in the unauthorized practice of law Biakanja v Irving, 49 Cal 2d 647, 320 P2d 16, 65 ALR2d 1358.

It has been said by the Michigan court: "So far as the mere mechanical drafting of such instruments or the diction used therein is concerned, we know of no reason justified in law in consequence of which it should be held that a lawyer in his office may employ a law clerk or a stenographer who, having the ability, is intrusted with the drafting of papers of this character; and on the other hand holding that a trust company empowered by statute to act as a fiduciary is barred from so using such employees. But when such papers are filed in or presented to the probate court or other court of record by a corporate fiduciary, they must be under the name and by the authority of one licensed to practice law. Thereupon the attorney becomes responsible for such papers in the same manner as if he had drafted them in person. He makes the draftsmanship his own." Anno: 125 ALR 1176.

p. 263, n. 19. Re Matthews, 57 Idaho, 75, 62 P. (2d) 578, 111 A.L.R. 13.

Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v. Grievance Committee, F. C. D. 142 Tex 506. 179 SW2d 946. 157 ALR 268.

Nelson v. Smith. 107 Utah 382. 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512.

Anno: 105 ALR 1376; 111 ALR 24 et seq; 125 ALR 1175 et seq: 151 ALR 783: 157 ALR 287; 157 ALR 527 (by collection agency); 53 ALR2d 807-811.

It seems that the practice of drawing for others (for compensation, where that is regarded as an essential) written instruments which require more than the most elementary knowledge of the law or more than that which the ordinary or average layman may be deemed to possess may well be deemed to constitute the practice of law. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 24.

The preparation, for a money consideration, of legal instruments to be shaped from a mass of facts and conditions involving the application of intricate principles of law which can only be applied by a mind trained in existing laws in order to insure a specific result and to guard against other undesirable results comes within the term "practice of law." Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 25.

The habitual drafting of legal instruments for hire constitutes the practice of law, even though the individual so engaged makes no attempt to appear in court or to give the impression that he is entitled to do so. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 26.

The rule prohibiting a layman from drafting legal papers does not preclude his drawing papers connected with his own business. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 26, 27.

With regard to the preparation by trust companies of various types of legal instruments used in connection with the administration of the trust, there appears to be some difference of opinion as to just what may be done without violating the rule that a corporation cannot practice law. See the cases set out in detail in annotation in 157 ALR 287 et seq.

A company incorporated for making abstracts of title, which also acts as agent for a title insurance company, is practicing law in violation of the statute which declares that drawing, for a consideration or pecuniary benefit, documents or instruments affecting or relating to secular rights, or the giving, for consideration, direct or indirect, of an opinion as to the validity of the title to real property, is the practice of law, where, through employees who are licensed attorneys acting under direction of its executives and not of its customers, and in respect of property in which it has no interest of its own, it prepares deeds, notes, mortgages, deeds of trust, mechanics' liens, releases, and such other additional instruments as seem necessary in connection with perfecting the title upon which it is issuing or plans to issue title policies, such papers being prepared in some instances merely in connection with the preparation of an abstract of title without title insurance, notwithstanding that no separate charge is made for such service, which, however, is advertised as an inducement for contracts for abstracts of title, for which a direct charge is made; since under such circumstances there is a consideration, reward, or pecuniary benefit flowing to the company within the meaning of the statute. Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v. Grievance Committee, F. C. D. 142 Tex 506, 179 SW2d 946, 157 ALR 268.

Page 263. Add, following note 19: The offense of unlawfully practicing law is not mitigated by the fact that the legal documents drawn were not original in outline, but followed a prepared form available to the public generally; as for example, deeds, writs, summons, etc. Authorship of a legal document is no less real because the instrument followed approved legal outline. It is the act of deciding the applicability of a specific form to a particular situation, and the exercise of discretion and judgment in determining the answers to the matters suggested upon a prepared form, that invades the province of a lawyer. The character of the form used will not vary this broad rule.[19.1]

While there are cases which seem to hold unequivocally either that the drafting, or filling in blanks in printed forms, of instruments relating to land by laymen constitutes the practice of law,[19.11] or that it does not constitute such practice,[19.12] in the majority of instances there are other factors affecting the situation,[19.13] such as, for example, the particular statutes involved,[19.14] whether the work was a mere incident to the business of the one preparing the instrument,[19.15] whether compensation was paid for the work,[19.16] or whether the work consisted of the mere filling in of blanks of a printed form or the compiling of the whole instrument.[19.17] And frequently the views of the courts are not in accord, notwithstanding the similarity of circumstances involved.[19.18]

19.1 Anno: 125 ALR 1177; 53 ALR2d 807-811.

The Missouri court has said: "Anyone who wants to pay the price may purchase a set of form books and read and copy them. He may use them in his own business if he so desires. But when he advises others for a consideration, that this or that is the law, or that this form or that is the proper form to be used in a certain transaction, then he is doing all that a lawyer does when a client seeks his advice. The mere copying of the form is usually done in a lawyer's office by a stenographer; but the stenographer must be told by the lawyer what to copy, and the client relies upon the advice of the attorney as to whether the form will accomplish the desired result in his particular case." Anno: 125 ALR 1177.

19.11 Re Eastern Idaho Loan & T. Co. 49 Idaho 280, 288 P 157, 73 ALR 1323.

Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v Grievance Committee, 142 Tex 506, 179 SW2d 946, 157 ALR 268.

Ferris v Snively, 172 Wash 167, 19 P2d 942, 90 ALR 278 (law clerk).

Anno: 53 ALR2d 790-794.

19.12 Re Eastern Idaho Loan & T. Co. 49 Idaho 280, 288 P 157, 73 ALR 1323 (preparing a simple instrument not involving the legal effect of special facts and conditions).

Ingham County Bar Asso. v Walter Neller Co. 342 Mich 214, 69 NW2d 713, 53 ALR2d 777 (incident of business).

Anno: 53 ALR2d 794-796.

It has been held that the drawing of instruments relating to real estate on isolated occasions does not constitute the practice of law. Anno: 53 ALR2d 795.

It has been held that where the defendant was one of ten who had inherited property, he did not offend the criminal law in performing services in and about preparing and procuring signatures to the conveyance of the property, since he was attending to his own interests as well as the interests of his co-owners in performing such activities. Anno: 53 ALR2d 795.

19.13 Anno: 53 ALR2d 791-811.

19.14 Anno: 53 ALR2d 791 et seq.

It has been held that the statute providing for the licensing and regulating of real-estate brokers, by requiring a satisfactory understanding of the laws and principles of real-estate conveyancing, deeds, mortgages, land contracts, and leases, indicates that it was not the legislative intent to include as illegal practice of law the acts of real-estate brokers in filling in forms for such instruments without extra compensation as an incident to their regular business. Ingham County Bar Asso. v Walter Neller Co. 343 Mich 214, 69 NW2d 713, 53 ALR2d 777.

19.15 Anno: 53 ALR2d 796-804.

Real-estate corporations and their employees have been held not to be illegally engaged in the practice of law in filling out, as an incident to their handling and consummation of real-estate transactions in which they are acting as brokers and for which they receive no extra compensation, printed forms of offers to purchase real estate, warranty deeds, quitclaim deeds, land contracts, land contract assignments, leases, and notices to terminate tenancies. Ingham County Bar Asso. v Walter Neller Co. 343 Mich 214, 69 NW2d 713, 53 ALR2d 777.

It has been held that conveyancing in itself does not constitute the practice of law and when conducted as an incident to a lawful business, is not unlawful practice. Ingham County Bar Asso. v Walter Neller Co. 343 Mich 214, 69 NW2d 713, 53 ALR2d 777.

The fact that the matter of drafting, or filling in of blanks in printed forms, of instruments relating to land is merely incidental to the business of the broker or other person or corporation preparing such instruments has not always prevented such acts from being regarded as constituting the practice of law. Some courts have taken the view that the instrument which is to bind the parties to the transaction is of such legal significance as to necessitate the services of one learned in the law, and that it is for the protection of the lay parties to the transaction that the preparation of the instruments by the broker or similar person, rather than by a lawyer, is held to constitute an unauthorized practice of the law. Anno: 53 ALR2d 801.

19.16 Re Eastern Idaho Loan & T. Co. 49 Idaho 280, 288 P 157, 73 ALR 1323.

Ingham County Bar Asso. v Walter Neller Co. 343 Mich 214, 69 NW2d 713, 53 ALR2d 777.

Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v Grievance Committee, 142 Tex 506, 179 SW2d 946, 157 ALR 268.

Ferris v Snively, 172 Wash 167, 19 P2d 942, 90 ALR 278.

Anno: 53 ALR2d 804-807.

19.17 Anno: 53 ALR2d 807.

19.18 Anno: 53 ALR2d 790-811.

p. 263, n. 1. Ingham County Bar Asso. v Walter Neller Co. 343 Mich 214, 69 NW2d 713, 53 ALR2d 777.

Anno: 105 ALR 1370; 151 ALR 783; 53 ALR 2d 810; 69 ALR2d 411 (trust company).

The apparent holding of the Idaho case cited in the text is explained in Re Matthews, 57 Idaho, 75, 62 P. (2d) 578, 111 A.L.R. 13, as being part of the contention of counsel, and not, as the opinion indicates through an erroneous punctuation, a statement of the court.

There is authority, however, to support a distinction between the drawing of simple instruments and those which are more complex. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 29.

One who is not a member of the bar may lawfully prepare instruments such as simple deeds, mortgages, promissory notes, and bills of sale when these instruments are incident to transactions in which such person is interested, provided no charge is made therefor. Practice of law includes drawing for others complicated legal instruments, such as wills and trust agreements, which require more legal knowledge than is possessed by the average layman, even though such instruments may, to some extent, be incident to a business such as that usually conducted by trust companies. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 29.

The occasional drafting of simple deeds and other legal instruments, when not conducted as an occupation or yielding substantial income, may fall outside the practice of the law. Anno: 111 ALR 29; 125 ALR 1174.

It should be noted that the drawing of any kind of instrument may constitute the practice of law where its preparation is accompanied by advice or counsel as to its legal effect and validity. Annotation: 111 ALR 26, 27, 30.

When a lay adjuster for an insurance company "in effecting settlement of a claim arising under a policy of casualty insurance issued by such company, fills in, on a printed form prepared by counsel for the company, the Workmen's Compensation Commission, or other public authority, the release to be executed by such claimant, such act of such lay adjuster does not constitute the practice of law or the doing of law business." Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149.

An employee of an insurance company who exercises his own judgment as to which of several forms of release prepared by counsel for the company he would use in settlement of a claim arising under a policy of casualty insurance issued by the company is not engaged in the practice of law. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149.

Page 263. Add, following note 1: Any distinction which may exist between simple and complex legal instruments in regard to whether their preparation for another constitutes the practice of law is regarded by some courts as illusory and unsatisfactory.[1.1] Where the application of legal knowledge and technique is required in participating on behalf of another in hearings and proceedings before a board or commission, the activity constitutes the practice of law; [1.2] but there are decisions which hold on their particular facts that an appearance before an administrative body on behalf of another does not involve the rendition of legal services.[1.21] Decisions on this question have involved appearances before the Land Department,[1.3] the Board of Standards and Appeals, [1.31] the Interstate Commerce Commission,[1.32] Public Service Commissions,[1.33] and workmen's compensation boards.[1.34] Giving advice in the making of tax returns or on how to reduce a party's taxes,[1.4] assisting in settling a claim by the state to recover back taxes and securing a reduction of the claim,[1.41] and the performance of such services as the examination and appraisal of property, analysis of assessed valuation, the preparation and filing of suggestions with the tax commissioners, and an application for the reduction of assessments have been held not to involve the practice of law.[1.42] However, other services in regard to securing the reduction of tax assessments have been held to constitute the practice of law.[1.5] A claim adjuster or an "ambulance chaser" may be held to be practicing law on account of the particular methods employed by him in soliciting and adjusting personal injury cases.[1.6] But the rule has been stated that when a lay investigator employed by an insurance company "investigates for his employer the facts and circumstances relating to a casualty or claim arising under a policy of casualty insurance issued by his employer, and reports to his employer the facts ascertained in such investigation, these acts of such lay investigator do not constitute the practice of law or the doing of law business." And in accordance therewith it has been held that an adjuster employed by an insurance company may, during the negotiation and settlement of a claim arising under a policy issued by such company, inform the claimant what the company's attorney has advised it regarding its liability under the policy; but the adjuster may not state, or act upon, his own opinion as to the legal rights of the company, insured or the claimant; that such an adjuster may determine for his employer the monetary extent of the latter's liability and the pecuniary limit which it will be willing to offer or pay in settlement of any claim arising under a policy of casualty insurance issued by such employer, "provided he does not determine the legal liability of his employer or its assured, but arrives at his conclusion either regardless of legal liability or upon the advice of counsel;" that he may state in his report the opinion rendered by the company's counsel upon any question of liability upon the claim, without thereby engaging in the practice of law.[1.7]

[1.1] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 29.

[1.2] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

Anno: 111 ALR 32; 125 ALR 1179; 151 ALR 789.

One who makes a business of prosecuting workmen's compensation claims before the state Industrial Commission may be regarded as engaging in the unauthorized practice of law where such business involves a determination of whether the remedy must be sought under the Workmen's Compensation Law the Federal Employers' Liability Act, or at common law. People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

As to whether an appearance before the legislature or a board to secure a pardon or release of one convicted of a crime constitutes the practice of law, see annotation: 111 ALR 35.

A lay representative of an insurance company who appears before a commissioner in hearings under the Workmen's Compensation Act, in the course of which he files pleadings, states his case, examines and cross-examines witnesses, and presents arguments, is engaged in the practice of law, although such activities constitute only a minor portion of the duties of his employment and he receives no specific remuneration for such services. Anno: 125 ALR 1179.

Acts by a layman which, if performed before the full commission in workmen's compensation hearings, would concededly constitute the unauthorized practice of law, are not rendered less condemnatory when performed before a single commissioner in such hearings, pursuant to a rule of the commission that while only licensed attorneys may appear before the full commission, lay representation is permissible in hearings before single commissioners. Anno: 125 ALR 1179.

[1.21] Anno: 111 ALR 32; 125 ALR 1179; 151 ALR 786.

[1.3] Anno: 111 ALR 32.

[1.31] Anno: 111 ALR 32.

[1.32] Anno: 111 ALR 32; 151 ALR 787.

[1.33] Anno: 111 ALR 34.

[1.34] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

Anno: 111 ALR 33, 34; 125 ALR 1179.

"The Workmen's Compensation Board, its functions and mode of operation," it is said in one case, "are not to be confused with those of other so-called administrative bodies and agencies. There is an ever growing number of such boards and departments of government which are legislative or executive in character, rather than judicial. Familiar examples are the Interstate Commerce Commission, the office of the Commissioner of Patents, the United States Treasury Department, the United States Board of Tax Appeals, Public Service Commissions, the Federal Trade Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, minimum wage boards, and the like." Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 33.

The rule is stated in Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149, that when an agent of an insurance company "participates in an informal conference with or before the workmen's compensation commission, such conference being held by and at the instance of such commission or its representative for the purpose of endeavoring to bring about an amicable agreement between the insured and the injured employee as to payment of compensation, such act of such lay investigator or adjuster does not constitute the practice of law or the doing of law business."

1.4 Anno: 111 ALR 36: 125 ALR 1180: 151 ALR 790.

1.41 Anno: 111 ALR 36; 125 ALR 1180.

1.42 Anno: 111 ALR 37: 125 ALR 1180: 157 ALR 301.

1.5 Anno: 111 ALR 37; 125 ALR 1180: 151 ALR 793: 157 ALR 301.

1.6 Anno: 111 ALR 44: 125 ALR 1182; 151 ALR 796; 157 ALR 307.

In Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149, the court drew a distinction between adjusters employed by casualty companies and those engaged in the private practice of adjusting claims, observing that it would seem clear that an adjuster who represents himself to the public as able to compromise, adjust, or settle claims generally, is engaged in the practice of law, at least where he advises or suggests a settlement, or analyzes the facts, or makes any representation as to the merits of his client's cause, while an adjuster in the regular employ of an insurance or casualty company is obviously in a different category, and stated: "The reason why laymen are forbidden to engage in the law business is that it is detrimental to the public interest for them to represent themselves to the public as being qualified to do that business when they are not, thereby ensnaring the public and spreading error broadcast. The cases show that in most instances such adjusters advertise extensively—which is permissible if what they do is not law business. On the other hand, appellant's lay claim adjusters work only for their several employers, who hire and retain them with their eyes open. When they deal with claimants it is on an adversary basis, not a representative basis implying a fiduciary relation."

A statute defining the practice of law as including anyone who "settles, adjusts, or compromises, defaulted, controverted, or disputed accounts, claims or demands" includes the adjustment of insurance losses, so far as there is a default, dispute, or controversy involved, but where there is no such default, dispute, or controversy, the statute leaves open a field of business for the independent lay insurance adjuster. Wilkey v. State, 244 Ala 568, 14 So (2d) 536, 151 ALR 765, writ of certiorari denied in 320 US 787, 88 L ed 473, 64 S Ct 195

The activities of independent lay insurance adjusters constitute the unlawful practice of law, within a statute including, in its definition of practice of law, the adjustment of claims which are "defaulted, controverted, or disputed," in so far as such activities consist of (1) giving advice as to rights of subrogation and contribution, (2) expressing an opinion as to a claimant's rights under the Workmen's Compensation Act, (3) recommending that the insurer increase its offer of settlement, (4) advising a claimant that he could not legally sue the insurer, and (5) appearing in court to have settlements with minors approved; but not so far as such activities consist of (1) mere investigation of claims, (2) adjustment of a loss where liability is not controverted, (3) settlement of small claims, (4) settlement of claims where, although the claimant had rejected the insurer's original offer, there was no dispute as to liability and negotiations were still open, (5) holding themselves out, and listing themselves in insurance journals, as engaged in the business of independent insurance adjusters, (6) having claimants execute releases on forms furnished by the insurer, and (7) conveying to the claimant the opinion of insurer's counsel as to his rights. Wilkey v. State, 244 Ala 568, 14 So 536, 151 ALR 765, writ of certiorari denied in 320 US 787, 88 L ed 473, 64 S Ct 195

The judicial construction of a statute defining the practice of law, which brings within such definition the business of independent insurance adjusters, but excludes therefrom salaried adjusters employed by insurance companies, does not constitute a denial, to the formal class, of the equal protection of the laws. Wilkey v. State, 244 Ala 568, 14 So (2d) 536, 151 ALR 765, writ of certiorari denied in 320 US 787, 88 L ed 473, 64 S Ct 195

1.7 Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149.

Anno: 125 ALR 1182: 151 ALR 797: 157 ALR 307.

A statute regulating the practice of law which includes in its definition of practice of law the adjustment of disputed claims is not to be construed as completely preventing the adjustment of insurance losses by independent law adjusters, where there are other statutes regulating the business of insurance agents and adjusters. Wilkey v. State, 244 Ala 568, 14 So 536, 151 ALR 765, writ of certiorari denied in 320 US 787, 88 L ed 473, 64 S Ct 195.

p. 263, n. 2. Anno: 111 ALR 39; 125 ALR 1180; 157 ALR 522.

A layman who is the agent of a creditor has a right to present a claim or note to the debtor for payment and to receive payment in behalf of the creditor. And where a corporate collection agency was involved, it was held that the agency had the right to collect debts for others, provided it did not employ an attorney or promise to employ one, or threaten the debtor with suit in case he failed to pay; that if collection could not be made without the services of an attorney, the agency should return the claim to the creditor, who should select and employ his own attorney; and that the agency should not engage, directly or indirectly, in the business of employing an attorney for others to collect claims or to prosecute suits therefor or have any interest in the fee earned by the attorney for his work. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 40.

p. 263, n. 3. Anno: 111 ALR 39; 125 ALR 1180; 151 ALR 794; 157 ALR 522 et seq.

But it has been held that the publication, advertising, distribution, and sale of a pamphlet entitled "A Practical Aid for Executors and Administrators of Decedent Estates," by one who had acquired special knowledge and expert skill in estate matters during sixteen years' experience in the office of the registrar of wills of a county, eight years of which he was deputy and eight years registrar of wills and clerk of the orphans' court, coupled with a holding out as ready and willing to hold consultation with the purchasers and readers of the pamphlet, on the drawing of wills and other proceedings pertaining to decedents' estates, amounted to the practice of law and was unauthorized, because the defendant was a layman. The objectionable features pointed out were the giving of advice in the form of questions and answers contained in the pamphlet, involving knowledge which only legal training and skill could give, and the intimation and solicitation respecting readiness to serve anyone having such problems. Anno: 151 ALR 795.

The maintenance of a legal department by a collection agency through which it collects its principals' claims in the courts, or the hiring of an attorney for the same purpose and the control of such attorney by the agency rather than by the principal, is a circumstance pointing to the practice of law by such agency Anno: 157 ALR 523.

A collection agency which undertakes to bring lawsuits on claims placed in its hands and perform the necessary legal services incident thereto thereby engages in the practice of law, even though it takes assignments of such claims to itself and though it functions through licensed attorneys. Nelson v. Smith 107 Utah 382, 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512.

The taking of colorable assignments by a collection agency will not relieve conduct otherwise objectionable as amounting to the practice of law from the taint of illegality because of a constitutional or statutory provision permitting persons to prosecute their suits in person. Anno: 157 ALR 524.

The casual assignee of a claim for procedural convenience does not, by prosecuting it in court in his own person, engage in the unlicensed practice of law. Nelson v. Smith, 107 Utah 382, 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512

A statute which provides that the furnishing of advice or services for or on behalf of a debtor in connection with any debt-pooling plan, whereby such debtor deposits any funds for the purpose of making pro rata payments or other distributions to his creditors, shall be deemed to be the practice of law, is not unconstitutional. Home Budget Service, Inc. v Boston Bar Asso. 335 Mass 228, 139 NE2d 387.

Page 263. Add, following note 3: The rendering of opinions as to the validity or invalidity of title to real or personal property has been deemed to constitute the practice of law.[3.1] A different rule, however, seems to apply to the mere searching of titles and furnishing of a certificate respecting the same.[3.11]

[3.1] Anno: 111 ALR 31; 125 ALR 1174, 1179; 151 ALR 786; 85 ALR2d 189.

It has been held that a title examination (which includes an analysis of recorded interests in land coupled with an opinion as to its legal status) is a service which lawfully can be performed for others only by a licensed attorney. Kentucky State Bar Asso. v First Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. (Ky) 342 SW2d 397, 85 ALR2d 178.

[3.11] Anno: 111 ALR 31; 125 ALR 1179; 85 ALR2d 189.

p. 263, n. 4. Anno: 105 ALR 1371; 151 ALR 800.

p. 263, n. 5. Anno: 105 ALR 1371; 111 ALR 42; 125 ALR 1181; 157 ALR 292.

An automobile association which in consideration of an annual fee undertakes, in addition to supplying certain stipulated services and information, to pay within specified limits for the services of lawyers employed by subscribers to advise and defend them in suits for property damage or against charges of violating automobile laws and regulations, no part of whose fees are received by the association, does not thereby engage in the practice of law. Re Thibodeau, 295 Mass 374, 3 NE 2d 749, 106 ALR 542. Anno: 106 ALR 548.

Re Maclub of America, 295 Mass 45, 3 NE (2d) 272, 105 ALR 1360.

A motor club agreeing with its members (a) to attempt amicably to adjust without court action claims for property damage to automobile for or against a member where the amount in controversy does not exceed $100, (b) to attempt to settle such claims by arbitration, (c) to obtain the name and address of the owner of any vehicle, (d) to arrange to deposit the necessary collateral for a member who has received a ticket for a violation of a minor traffic regulation, and (e) to furnish an attorney to represent a member in case of unjust prosecution where the interest of the membership as a whole appears to be involved; maintained a department of claims and adjustment in charge of a layman to furnish these services, with whom members of the organization consulted from time to time concerning the claims for damages sustained by their automobiles in accident, and who, upon request of a member, endeavored to collect the claim by writing to the other person involved in the accident; and who, in the event of amicable settlement, filled out a release form for signature of the proper party; and in the event no amicable settlement was reached, so informed the member and advised him to get his own attorney or to proceed in the small claims court unlawfully engages in the practice of law. Anno: 157 ALR 292.

Page 263. Add, following note 5: The solicitation of shippers by a layman for the purpose of obtaining their authorization to prosecute claims for refunds from railroads for excessive charges, and who thereafter instituted litigation in that connection, employing such legal or other skilled aid as he deemed necessary.[5.1]

[5.1] Anno: 125 ALR 1184.

p. 263, n. 6. Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 1371; 111 ALR 39; 157 ALR 522.

Corporations which solicit liquidated commercial accounts for collection and which use the courts, or a threat of court action for the collection thereof ordinarily have been held to be unlawfully practicing law. But a mere solicitation of liquidated commercial accounts from wholesale concerns and manufacturers, for collection on a commission basis, and collecting the same by making personal calls on the debtors or by writing them letters, does not amount to an unlawful practice of law by a corporation organized to do a general collection and adjustment business. Anno: 157 ALR 293.

Corporations regularly undertaking to collect distributive shares in estates of decedents have been held engaged in the practice of law. Anno: 157 ALR 298; 157 ALR 529.

p. 263, n. 7. Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 1375.

Page 263. Add, following note 8: The broadcasting of programs consisting of statements of legal questions submitted by members of the public and answers thereto given by persons occupying or having occupied judicial positions constitutes the practice of law within the meaning of a statute forbidding corporations to practice law.[8.1]

[8.1] Rosenthal v. Shepard Broadcasting Service, 299 Mass 286, 12 NE(2d) 819, 114 ALR 1502.

Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 1506.

p. 264, n. 9. Anno: 111 ALR 43, s. 125 ALR 1181, 151 ALR 794; 69 ALR2d 408, 415.

A trust company may, as a duly appointed fiduciary, execute a specific trust placed in its hands, and to that end, may, through its employee-attorneys, draft all papers incident to the administration of the trust, and appear in the courts in all matters pertaining thereto, without engaging in the unlawful practice of law. Anno: 125 ALR 1181.

A trust company authorized by law to act as administrator, executor, trustee, guardian, or in other fiduciary capacity, has been held not engaged in the practice of law by virtue of the fact that its salaried attorneys prepare and file papers in court in estates where it has been named as executor, or where it has been appointed administrator. Anno: 125 ALR 1181.

A corporation or an individual organized for, or engaged in, the business of collecting and cashing inheritances and legacies owing to foreign beneficiaries by means of powers of attorney obtained through foreign correspondents has been held engaged in the practice of law Anno: 125 ALR 1181.

Page 264. Add following note 9: It has been held, with varying degrees of emphasis, that the fact that a trust company is acting as a fiduciary, or, in so acting, is engaged in the administration of functions authorized by statutes defining the functions of trust companies, does not give special sanction for its engaging in activities otherwise deemed to constitute the practice of law, even though the acts complained of are performed by licensed attorneys, where such attorneys are employees of the bank.[9.05] The basic problem is what acts are commonly understood to be the practice of law and the courts have varied in the degree of strictness or liberality followed, with reference to particular acts.[9.051]

[9.05] State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR 2d 394.

Re Otterness, 181 Minn 254, 232 NW 318, 73 ALR 1319 (trust company acting as representative of an estate is not a "party" within meaning of statute permitting party to appear in court on his own behalf).

Anno: 69 ALR2d 407.

9.051 Anno: 69 ALR2d 409–420.

It has been held that a trust company is not engaged in the practice of law by acting primarily for itself in obtaining or holding trust department customers by disseminating general information concerning the application, scope, and effect of various laws and in reviewing wills and trust agreements, but is engaged in the practice of law in so far as it performs acts which are not primarily for itself but for the administration and settlement of the affairs of estates. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

It has been held that the facts of a particular case may justify the conclusion that a bank is not engaged in the unlawful practice of law in acting through its trust department employees, whether lawyers or laymen, in preparing tax returns and dealing with and appearing before state and federal tax authorities in connection with taxes claimed to be due from estates administered by it, but such acts do constitute the unlawful practice of law where the preparation of tax returns or the matters dealt with involve tax law problems of such type that their solution would be commonly understood to be the practice of law. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Page 264. Add new paragraph at end of section: It appears that the sale of legal blanks does not constitute the practice of law. And it has been held on a number of occasions that advertisements by notary publics offering the preparation of "legal documents," "correct legal conveyances," and the like does not constitute the practice of law in the absence of a showing of acts by such notaries, in connection therewith, constituting the rendition of "legal services."[9.1]

It has been held that the maintenance of a service agency by a motion picture company for the purpose of investigating infringements of its copyrights, and the institution of suit, through its attorneys, where such violation is found, does not constitute the unlawful practice of law.[9.2] And the issuance of an insurance policy protecting against liability, and the act of the company issuing such policy, "in interceding by an attorney at law and maintaining a defense in behalf of the insured when a claim is made or a suit is brought against the insured, has been held not to constitute the practice of law or the doing of law business, though the amount sued for exceeds the amount of insurance coverage."[9.3]

The activities of so-called "probate research" organizations which make a business of investigating probate or surrogate court records and notifying heirs of their interest in the particular estate, representing to such heirs that the organization has expended considerable time and money in making such investigation, and that the heirs would never have heard of their good fortune otherwise, in return for which such heirs are advised to give the organization power of attorney to assume control of legal proceedings including employment of attorneys, necessary to establish the heirs' interest in the estate, and are expected to assign to the organization a certain percentage of the proceeds paid over to them by the administrator of the estate, in the event that their claims are successfully established, have been held to constitute the illegal practice of law.[9.5]

While courts usually permit laymen rendering predominantly nonlegal services in tax connections to dispose of incidental questions of law, by the weight of authority a nonlawyer may not undertake, as an independent or distinctly separable service, to render opinions regarding tax liability based on examination of authorities, to construe a tax statute, or, with tax saving in view, to counsel a course of business.[9.6] However, there is a line of cases holding that supplying information and advice in tax matters, even though not incidental to another service, does not amount to practice of law.[9.61]

While a degree of familiarity with tax law is a requisite for making out self-assessing tax returns, these are generally regarded as primarily informative in character and not of the nature of strict legal instruments, which establish, limit, or terminate rights and liabilities. Consequently, the courts hold that their preparation, especially those of the simpler sort, is open to the laity.[9.62]

Owners of property, especially small holders, aggrieved over imposition of unlawful or excessive taxes, are not infrequently confronted with the alternative of suffering in silence or of seeking adjustment, cost of which in trouble and money is out of proportion to any benefit to be gained. To meet this dilemma, two devices have sprung into being. One is the taxpayers' association, incorporated or not, and often a nonprofit undertaking, which pools a large number of small contributions from individual property owners into a war fund which finances sallies against obstinate taxing authorities. The other is an enterpriser, individual or corporate, who, for a fee, commonly a percentage of the reduction or refund effected, makes a specialty of handling taxpayers' grievances. Sometimes the latter, after examining the tax records for overassessments or irregularities, seeks out and actively solicits engagements from property owners, acting as a sort of opposite number to the tax ferret.

Both of these activities have come under attack as amounting to unauthorized practice of law; and due partly to divergent views taken by judges and partly to the considerable number of determining factors which are in individual cases present or absent in varying combinations, it is difficult or impossible to find a pattern for the decisions. However, subject always to qualification, it can be said that the more important considerations are whether or not service to the taxpayer includes handling and control of litigation, if necessary; whether an intermediary will be interposed between the real party in interest and a lawyer; and whether the special knowledge required for the undertaking is legal or economic. Generally, a layman can make property appraisals and comparison of assessments to determine if the property owner has received fair treatment at the hands of the taxing officials, and frequently he may represent the property owner before the assessor or even a nonjudicial board of equalization.[9.63] But if the arrangement contemplates seeking redress in court, even through a qualified attorney, the courts uniformly condemn it as constituting unauthorized practice.[9.64]

Since the practice of law consists of services rendered another, in tax matters—as elsewhere—a layman is free to act as his own advocate and to take his own counsel; and the test is whether he has a genuine personal interest in the transaction. So, filing a petition with the state inheritance tax department for appraisement and waiver of taxes in the estate of a deceased co-owner of land, which the petitioner, a layman, contemplated taking as security for a loan, has been held not to constitute practice of law, but was merely giving attention to the petitioner's own personal interest, as a lender of money, in making certain that the property was unencumbered; and could not be taken as a representation that the petitioner was authorized to practice law.[9.65]

[9.1] Anno: 125 ALR 1183.

[9.2] Anno: 125 ALR 1185.

For a number of cases discussing the meaning of the actual practice of law under reciprocal provisions for admission of attorney admitted to practice in another jurisdiction, see the annotation in 51 ALR2d 1207.

[9.3] Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149.

Anno: 125 ALR 1185

[9.5] Re Butler, 29 Cal2d 644, 177 P2d 16, 171 ALR 343 (holding that the activities of a nonlawyer engaged in the business of contacting beneficiaries of decedents' estates, soliciting and securing powers of attorney to represent them in proceedings involving the estates and to appoint attorneys for them, and entering into agreements whereby he is given complete control of such litigation and is to pay all expenses, including attorneys' fees and court costs, in consideration of the assignment to him of a portion of their interests in the estates, constitute an unlawful practice of law, and assignments and powers of attorney executed pursuant to such arrangements are illegal and void).

Anno: 171 ALR 355.

A transaction by which a nonlawyer, in accordance with his general business practice, contracts and solicits beneficiaries of decedents' estates, secures their authorization to appear for them, and enters into agreements with them whereby he receives a power of attorney and is authorized to employ attorneys to represent them and he agrees to pav all expenses, including attorneys' fees and court costs, and thus assumes complete control of litigation instituted on behalf of the beneficiaries through attorneys hired by him in consideration of their assignment to him of a part of their interests in the estate, amounts to commercial exploitation of the legal profession and is contrary to public policy. Re Butler. 29 Cal2d 644. 177 P2d 16. 171 ALR 343

A statute authorizing the probate court, before making distribution to any assignee of an heir, devisee, or legatee, or to any person other than an heir, devisee, or legatee pursuant to any agreement, to inquire into the consideration for the assignment or agreement and into the circumstances surrounding the same, while enlarging the power of the court and giving it some control over agreements providing compensation for services of so-called "heir-hunters," does not recognize the propriety of, or establish a public policy favorable to, an agreement whereby a nonlawyer takes an assignment of a portion of an heir's interest in a decedent's estate, agrees to pay all expenses, including attorneys' fees and court costs, and assumes complete control of litigation on behalf of the heir, and employs counsel to represent him Re Butler. 29 Cal2d 644. 177 P2d 16. 171 ALR 343.

[9.6] Re New York County Lawyers Asso. 273 App Div 524, 78 NYS2d 209, 9 ALR2d 787, revg 188 Misc 406, 69 NYS2d 730, and affd without op 299 NY 728, 87 NE2d 451 (in which an accountant, who rendered no other service to the taxpayer, was held guilty of unauthorized law practice for giving an opinion, based on an examination of reported decisions, as to the year in which city retail sales taxes and compensating use taxes were deductible in making a Federal income tax return).

Anno: 9 ALR2d 798.

[9.61] Anno: 9 ALR2d 800.

[9.62] Anno: 9 ALR2d 801.

[9.63] Anno: 9 ALR2d 803.

[9.64] Anno: 9 ALR2d 803.

A contract by former record owners of land to employ the other party as agent to institute litigation to restore title as against the holder of the property under a tax deed, under which contract the agent agreed to pay expenses for attorneys, court costs, and redemption, in consideration of an oil and gas lease and a conveyance of minerals in the property, has been held not invalid as authorizing or requiring a layman to practice law, in view of the implication in the contract that the agent was to employ attorneys to bring and prosecute the litigation, and of the evidence that the agent did not attempt to appear or act as an attorney in the litigation which was actually conducted by attorneys. Cox v. Freeman, 204 Okla 138. 227 P2d 670, 28 ALR2d 1230.

[9.65] Anno: 9 ALR2d 805.

§ 4. — Work Done by Law Clerk.

p. 264, n. 10. Anno: 111 ALR 45; 125 ALR 1183; 151 ALR 802; 53 ALR2d 794.

§ 5. Attorneys and Counsel Defined and Distinguished.

See article, "The Legal Profession during the Middle Ages," by Professor A-H Chroust, in 32 Notre Dame Law pp 85 et seq.

§ 6. Nature of Office of Attorney.

Am Jur quoted in Woodruff & Son v Rhoton, 251 Iowa 550, 101 NW2d 720.

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. Florida Bar v Calhoon (Fla) 102 So 2d 604.

Harrison v State, 231 Ind 147, 106 NE2d 912.

Re Ryan, 229 Iowa 339, 294 NW 566.

Hoppe v. Klapperich, 224 Minn 224, 28 NW 2d 780, 173 ALR 819.

State ex rel. Gentry v. Becker, 351 Mo 769 174 SW(2d) 181.

R. C. L. quoted in Herfurth v. Horine, 266 Ky. 19, 98 S. W. (2d) 21.

R. C. L. cited in People ex rel. Committee on Grievances v. Denver Clearing House Banks. 99 Colo. 50, 59 P. (2d) 468.

p. 265, n. 3. Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223. 21 A(2d) 396. 136 ALR 226.

Harrison v. State. 231 Ind 147, 106 NE2d 912, 32 ALR2d 875.

Fischer v Howard, 201 Or 426, 271 P2d 1059, 49 ALR2d 1301.

A court may, in the exercise of its authority over an attorney as an officer of the court, compel him to answer questions under oath, under threat of commitment for contempt. Gottwals v. Rencher, 60 Nev 35, 98 P(2d) 481, 126 ALR 1262

However, an attorney is not a court "officer" within the meaning of 18 NSC § 401(2), empowering a court of the United States to punish as contempt "misbehavior of any of its officers in their official transactions;" see Cammer v United States, 350 US 399, 100 L ed 474, 76 S Ct 456, 12 Am Jur, Contempt § 41 (Supp).

§ 7. Duties of Office.

Am Jur quoted in Bluestein v Thompson, 102 Ohio App 157, 2 Ohio Ops2d 143, 139 NE2d 668.

R. C. L. quoted in Herfurth v. Horine, 266 Ky. 19, 98 S. W. (2d) 21.

R. C. L. cited in People ex rel. Committee on Grievances v. Denver Clearing House Banks. 99 Colo. 50, 59 P. (2d) 468.

p. 266, n. 11. Fisher v. Pace, 366 US 155, 93 L ed 569, 69 S Ct 425, reh den 336 US 928 93 L ed 1089, 69 S Ct 653.

p. 266, n. 13. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394 (bound by canons of ethics enforced by the courts).

It has been held that the Canons of Professional Ethics of the American Bar Association undertake to codify the traditions and practice recognized over the centuries as part of the common law with respect to the lawyer's obligations, and are as obligatory on him when adopted by rule of court as if cast in statutory form. Re Rothman, 12 NJ 528, 97 A2d 621, 39 ALR2d 1032.

§ 8. — Precedence of Public, over Private, Duties.

Am Jur cited in Leuch v. Egelhoff, 255 Wis 29, 38 NW2d 1.

p. 266, n. 14. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

p. 266, n. 16. It has been held that nothing should be done by any member of the legal fraternity which might tend to lessen in any degree the confidence of the public in the fidelity, honesty, and integrity of the profession. Lyons v Hall (La App) 90 So2d 519, 60 ALR2d 1003.

p. 266, n. 17. Fisher v. Pace, 336 US 155, 93 L ed 569, 69 S Ct 425 reh den 336 US 928, 93 L ed 1089, 69 S Ct 653.

p. 266, n. 19.

"An attorney owes his first duty to the court. He assumed his obligations toward it before he ever had a client. His oath requires him to be absolutely honest even though his client's interests may seem to require a contrary course. The lawyers cannot serve two masters; and the one they have undertaken to serve primarily is the court." Re Nebraska State Bar Asso. 133 Neb. 283, 275 N. W. 265, 114 ALR 151.

§ 10. Necessity of Representation by Attorney

See article, "The Legal Profession during the Middle Ages," by Professor A-H Chroust, in 32 Notre Dame Law pp 85 et seq.

Am Jur cited in White v State, — Ga App —, 125 SE2d 239 (dissent op).

p. 267, n. 7. A litigant has a right to act as his own attorney but in so doing, he should be restricted to the same rules of evidence and procedure as is required of those qualified to practice law before the courts. Lombardi v Citizens Nat. Trust & Sav. Bank, 137 Cal App2d 206 289 P2d 823.

It has been held that a statute providing that in all courts of the United States the parties may plead and conduct their own cases personally or by counsel, and that such representation by counsel shall be in accordance with the rules of the courts, is not so indefinite and vague as to be invalid. Brasier v Jeary (CA8 Neb) 256 F2d 474, 67 ALR2d 1096, cert den 358 US 867, 3 L ed 2d 99, 79 S Ct 97, reh den 358 US 923, 3 L ed 2d 242, 79 S Ct 286.

The rule of court requiring a nonresident attorney trying a case to have a resident attorney associated with him in the trial has been held not applicable to a case conducted by a nonresident party personally. Brasier v Jeary (CA8 Neb) 256 F2d 474, 67 ALR2d 1096, cert den 358 US 867, 3 L ed 2d 99, 79 S Ct 97, reh den 358 US 923, 3 L ed 2d 242, 79 S Ct 286.

p. 267, n. 8. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945 125 ALR 1149

p. 267, n. 9. Anno: 67 ALR2d 1104–1108.

A party to a civil action appearing pro se has been held not to be entitled, as a matter of right, to be represented by counsel at the same time. Brasier v Jeary (CA8 Neb) 256 F2d 474, 67 ALR2d 1096, cert den 358 US 867, 3 L ed 2d 99, 79 S Ct 97, reh den 358 US 923, 3 L ed 2d 242, 79 S Ct 286.

A statutory provision denying a party conducting his own case personally the right to aid of associate counsel has been held not violative of due process of law secured by the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. Brasier v Jeary (CA8 Neb) 256 F2d 474, 67 ALR2d 1096, cert den 358 US 867, 3 L ed 2d 99, 79 S Ct 97, reh den 358 US 923, 3 L ed 2d 242, 79 S Ct 286.

It has been held that the discretionary power of a trial judge to control and regulate the orderly procedure of the trial justifies denial of a motion of counsel for the plaintiff that the plaintiff be permitted to assist counsel in argument and to aid counsel in making statements to the court. Brasier v Jeary (CA8 Neb) 256 F2d 474, 67 ALR2d 1096, cert den 358 US 867, 3 L ed 2d 99, 79 S Ct 97, reh den 358 US 923, 3 L ed 2d 242, 79 S Ct 286.

p. 267, n. 11. Anno: 67 ALR2d 1109.

Page 267. Add following note 11: Other courts have denied or sustained a denial of permission for a litigant-attorney to help his counsel conduct a trial, on the ground that he stood no differently from any other litigant represented by counsel.[11.5]

[11.5] Anno: 67 ALR2d 1109.

p. 267, n. 12. State v Thomlinson, — SD —, 100 NW2d 121, 77 ALR2d 1229.

Anno: 77 ALR2d 1235.

p. 267, n. 13. State v Thomlinson, — SD —, 100 NW2d 121, 77 ALR2d 1229.

p. 268, n. 15. State v Thomlinson, — SD —, 100 NW2d 121, 77 ALR2d 1229.

Anno: 77 ALR2d 1241.

§ 11. Privileges and Exemptions of Office.

p. 268, n. 1. Anno: 74 ALR2d 599.

§ 13. — By Municipal Corporation.

Am Jur cited in Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

p. 269, n 15. Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

Anno: 16 ALR2d 1229.

An attorney engaged in the practice of law within a municipality is subject to a municipal ordinance levying an annual occupational tax on various occupations and professions, including that of attorney, as against the attorney's contention that he is exempt from such tax in that he is an officer of the court and an agency in the judicial machinery for the administration and enforcement of justice. Anno: 123 ALR 1384.

It is generally agreed that a municipality may not impose a tax upon the right to engage in the practice of law as a regulatory measure under the police power, as distinguished from a tax for revenue purposes. Anno: 16 ALR2d 1230; see Davis v Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208

The contention that attorneys are exempt from municipal, privilege, or occupational taxes for revenue by reason of the fact that they are, in a certain limited sense, officers of the court and a part of the judicial branch of the state government has been consistently denied. Anno: 16 ALR2d 1230; see Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

The fact that a municipality is without authority to regulate the practice of law does not preclude it from levying a revenue license tax on attorneys. Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

Page 269. Add, following note 15: The right to impose the tax is sometimes conferred directly by constitutional provision, or by provision therefor in a freeholders' or home-rule charter.[15.5] In the absence of such constitutional authorization, the power to impose the tax must be conferred by statute or the municipal charter, either expressly or by necessary or reasonable implication.[15.51]

The authority of a municipality to impose license fees on particular classes of attorneys, such as nonresidents, depends, of course, upon the proper construction of the applicable charter or statutory provisions in the light of the facts and circumstances of the particular case.[15.6]

[15.5] Anno: 16 ALR2d 1231.

[15.51] Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

Anno: 16 ALR2d 1231.

A statute which expressly enumerates businesses which cities may license, regulate, and tax inferentially limits municipal power to the businesses so listed; and the practice of law, not being included in the enumeration, is not within the scope of the power granted thereby Davis v Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

15.6 Anno: 16 ALR2d 1237.

p. 269, n. 16. Anno: 16 ALR2d 1238.

p. 269, n. 17. Anno: 16 ALR2d 1237.

Under a statute authorizing municipalities to levy a license tax on attorneys "residing" therein, such tax may not be imposed on an attorney who does not reside in the municipality, although he may maintain an office or engage in practice therein. Anno: 16 ALR2d 1237.

p. 269, n. 18. Anno: 16 ALR2d 1231.

Page 269. Add, following note 18: And it is generally agreed that a state license to practice law does not render an attorney immune from a municipal revenue license tax, in the absence of any statutory provision to that effect.[18.5]

18.5 Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

Petersburg v. Cocke, 94 Va 244, 26 SE 576, 36 LRA 432; Ould v. Richmond (Va) 23 Gratt 464, 14 Am Rep 139.

Anno: 16 ALR2d 1235.

p. 270, n. 19. Anno: 16 ALR2d 1235.

Page 270. Add, following note 19: The right of a municipality to impose a revenue license tax on attorneys has frequently been held to exist under statutory or charter authority to "license," "regulate," or "tax" businesses, employments, or occupations generally,[19.5] although a contrary conclusion has been reached in a few cases, due in some instances to other statutory provisions relating to the subject.[19.51]

The exemption from a municipal licensing ordinance of attorneys who occupy the status merely of employees of other persons, firms, or corporations and who do not operate their own business does not render the ordinance unlawfully discriminatory.[19.6] Nor does the exemption, from an ordinance imposing a license tax on attorneys practicing their profession in the municipality, of attorneys temporarily in the city on specific professional business, unless they advertise their professional services, or, in addition to the specific business, solicit additional business, constitute an unlawful discrimination against resident attorneys.[19.61] And it has been held that an ordinance imposing a license tax of a specified amount on attorneys and other persons is not rendered invalid by the exemption from such tax of "persons, firms, individuals or corporations who pay a tax to the city or state on gross incomes," pursuant to the provisions of the enabling statute.[19.62]

Ordinances basing the amount of a license or occupation tax on attorneys on the gross income or receipts from their practice have in some instances been sustained as against objections that the tax constituted an income tax, not within the power of the municipality to levy; [19.7] that it was unreasonable, discriminatory, and unjust;[19.71] and that it was violative of the constitutional requirements as to uniformity of taxation.[19.72] But an ordinance imposing a license tax on attorneys of a specified amount and an additional amount based on gross income in excess of a specified minimum has been declared invalid as violative of a constitutional provision prohibiting the levying of an income tax upon residents or citizens by the state or under its authority.[19.73]

It has been held that the imposition of the same amount of tax on every attorney subject thereto, without reference to the amount of his income from his practice, is not violative of a constitutional requirement as to uniformity of taxation.[19.74]

19.5 Abraham v. Roseburg, 55 Or 359, 105 P 401, Ann Cas 1912A 597 ("to license and regulate all such callings, trades and employments as the public good may require to be licensed and regulated and as are not prohibited by law").

Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208 "to raise revenue by levying and collecting a license fee or tax on any such business within the limits of the city, and regulate the same by ordinance").

Anno: 16 ALR2d 1231.

19.51 Anno: 16 ALR2d 1234.

19.6 Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

Anno: 16 ALR2d 1238.

19.61, 19.62 Anno: 16 ALR2d 1238.

19.7 Davis v. Ogden City, 117 Utah 315, 215 P2d 616, 223 P2d 412, 16 ALR2d 1208.

Anno: 16 ALR2d 1239.

19.71–19.74 Anno: 16 ALR2d 1239.

§ 14. Right and License to Practice.

Am Jur cited in Moity v Louisiana State Bar Asso. 239 La 1081, 121 So 2d 87; Louisiana State Bar Asso. v Theard, 225 La 98, 72 So 2d 310.

Re Monaghan, 122 Vt 199, 167 A2d 81.

West Virginia State Bar v Earley, 144 W Va 504, 109 SE2d 420.

See article, "The importance and value of attorney general's opinion," by Chief Justice R. L. Larson, in 41 Iowa Law Review pp. 351 et seq.

p. 270, n. 20. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Ruckenbrod v Mullins, 102 Utah 548, 133 P 2d 325, 144 ALR 839.

The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States does not grant the right to practice law; nor is the right to practice law in the courts a privilege or immunity, within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment. State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner, 141 Neb 556, 4 NW(2d) 302, 144 ALR 138.

Only a decision which violates a Federal right authorizes interference by the Supreme Court of the United States with a state's choice as to the personnel of its bar. Re Summers, 325 US 561, 89 L ed 1795, 65 S Ct 1307.

No violation of the principles of religious freedom, which the Fourteenth Amendment secures against state action, is involved in a denial by a state court of an application for admission to the bar, on the ground that the applicant, because of a conscientious belief in nonviolence, cannot take in good faith the required oath to support the state constitution, where such support is construed to include willingness to serve in the state militia when required. Re Summers, 325 US 561, 89 L ed 1795, 65 S Ct 1307.

p. 270, n. 1. People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

p. 270, n. 2. People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

Page 270. Add following note 2: But irrespective of whether the practice of law is a "right" or "privilege," a person cannot be prevented from practicing law except for valid reasons, such practice not being a matter of the state's grace.[2.5]

2.5 Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752.

While it is important to leave states free to select their own bars, it is equally important that the state should not exercise this power in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner nor in such way as to impinge on the freedom of political expression or association. Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 810, 77 S Ct 722.

p. 270, n. 3. Trovatten v. Minea, 213 Minn 544, 7 NW2d 390, 144 ALR 1263.

Page 271. Add new paragraph following note 10: A state may constitutionally require a lawyer to be a member of an integrated bar.[10.5]

[10.5] See infra, § 19 (Supp).

Page 271. Add, following note 13: When the legislature sets up an administrative body, such as an industrial commission, and empowers it to promulgate rules governing procedure before it, such body cannot, by a rule permitting a party to appear before it by "agent," bestow upon one not a duly authorized attorney at law the privilege of performing services for a claimant falling within the category of the practice of law.[13.1]

[13.1] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill 346, 8 NE2d 941, 111 ALR 1, writ of certiorari denied in 302 US 728, 82 L ed 562, 58 S Ct 49.

§ 15. Jurisdiction to Admit.

Am Jur cited in Heiberger v Clark, 148 Conn 177, 169 A2d 652.

Moity v Louisiana State Bar Asso. 239 La 1081, 121 So 2d 87.

RCL cited in Re Florida State Bar Asso. 134 Fla 851, 186 So 280.

p. 271, n. 18. Anno: 144 ALR 150.

And see infra, § 19 (Supp.).

p. 271, n. 19. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

p. 271, n. 20. State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800, 162 P2d 261, 160 ALR 1366.

It has been held that no statute can control the judicial department in the performance of its duty to decide who shall enjoy the privilege of practicing law. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

p. 271, n. 1. People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1 (holding that this power extends to regulating the study of law).

Nelson v. Smith, 107 Utah 382, 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512; Ruckenbrod v. Mullins, 102 Utah 548, 133 P2d 325, 144 ALR 839.

p. 271, n. 2. Anno: 144 ALR 150.

And see infra, § 19 (Supp.).

The filing of a petition for admission to the bar, though provided for by statute, is nevertheless subject to the action of the courts. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

A statutory provision that a citizen "may . . . file a petition" for admission to the bar is not, in view of the superior power of the judiciary over membership in the bar, to be taken as meaning that every citizen filing a petition shall be admitted to the bar. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

One who has been disbarred is entitled to file in a certain court a petition for admission to the bar where the statute provides that a petition may be filed in such court by a "citizen" to be examined for "admission" as an attorney at law, and if found qualified, to be "admitted" as such. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

The fact that admission to the bar is regulated by a statute which fails to distinguish between ordinary applications and applications by persons previously disbarred does not prevent the judicial department of the state from imposing procedural and substantive conditions upon the admission as an attorney of a person previously disbarred different from those imposed upon a person applying for original admission. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE2d 516, 137 ALR 766.

A statutory provision for examination for admission to the bar, even though confined to an examination into the acquirements and qualifications of the applicant other than his moral character, is as applicable to a petition by one previously disbarred as to a petition by an original applicant. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

The fact that a statute relating to the admission of attorneys to the bar provides for the referring of a petition for admission to a board of bar examiners does not establish the inapplicability of the statute to a petition for admission by one previously disbarred, where, under the statute providing for reference of the petition "unless the court otherwise orders," the court, if it is of the opinion that a report of the bar examiners would not be helpful in the case of an admission of a previously disbarred attorney, may dispense with any reference of the petition in such a case. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766

It has been held that the statute authorizing the Superior Court to admit as attorneys such persons as are qualified therefor, agreeably to the rules established by the judges of said court, is to be construed only as a legislative recognition of the inherent right of the Superior Court, a constitutionally established tribunal, to promulgate rules for the admission of attorneys. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

p. 272, n. 3.

It is not inappropriate for the legislature to intrust to a lower court jurisdiction, concurrent with that of the highest court of the state, over petitions for admission to the bar, where the lower court is organized particularly for the hearing and trial of proceedings at common law involving the determination of issues of fact, such as might be involved upon a petition for admission to the bar. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE2d 516, 137 ALR 766.

The legislature has the power to confer upon a lower court created by statute jurisdiction, concurrent with that of the highest court of the state, over petitions for admission to the bar, at least where the highest court has not, by a valid rule, excluded the lower court from such jurisdiction. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

In the absence of a determination by the highest court of a state that its power over admissions to the bar is to be exercised exclusively by it, a statute conferring on a lower court concurrent jurisdiction in such cases is not an unconstitutional interference with the power of the highest court. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

A statutory provision for the filing in certain courts of petitions for admission to the bar is to be interpreted as a provision in aid of the judicial department in reaching a proper selection of those qualified for admission to practice in the courts, and not as interfering with that department in the performance of its duty. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE (2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

The Rules of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Relation to Attorneys held not to exclude the exercise by the Superior Court of its statutory jurisdiction, concurrent with that of the Supreme Judicial Court, over petitions for admission to the bar. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

p. 272, n. 4. State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner 141 Neb 556, 4 NW2d 302, 144 ALR 138.

§ 16. Nonresident Practitioners.

Am Jur quoted in Johnson v Di Giovanni, 347 Mich 118, 78 NW2d 560.

Am Jur cited in Thomas v Cassidy (CA4 Va) 249 F2d 91, cert den 355 US 958, 2 L ed 2d 533, 78 S Ct 544.

Page 272. Add new paragraph at end of section: The validity of a statutory requirement that a nonresident attorney appoint a resident attorney upon whom service might be had in matters connected with the action has been upheld.[7.5] Court rules requiring a nonresident attorney to employ or associate with himself local counsel have been held invalid.[7.51] A statute requiring association with local counsel has been held inapplicable to a nonresident attorney who was prosecuting an action in his own behalf as party plaintiff.[7.52] Where a particular statute or court rule required that a nonresident attorney employ, or associate with himself, local counsel, some courts have been strict in enforcing such requirement;[7.53] but other courts have interpreted statutory provisions or court rules as not to require a nonresident attorney to employ, or associate with himself, local counsel.[7.54] The United States Supreme Court has held that a Kansas statute and rules of court permitting an out-of-state lawyer to practice before Kansas tribunals only if he associates a member of the Kansas bar with him, as attorney of record, does not violate the Fourteenth Amendment either on its face or as applied to a lawyer maintaining law offices and a practice of law both out of state and in Kansas.[7.55]

[7.5] Anno: 45 ALR2d 1065.

[7.51] Anno: 45 ALR2d 1066.

The rule of a county chancery court precluding the prosecution of a suit therein by a nonresident attorney, who has been admitted to practice in courts of equal jurisdiction of another state, without the employment of a resident of the county as co-counsel, has been held invalid as unreasonable and as not conforming to reciprocity statute. Letaw v Smith, 223 Ark 638, 268 SW2d 3, 45 ALR2d 1053.

[7.52] Anno: 45 ALR2d 1066.

[7.53] Anno: 45 ALR2d 1067.

[7.54] Anno: 45 ALR2d 1069

[7.55] Martin v Walton, 368 US 25, 7 L ed 2d 5, 82 S Ct 1, reh den 368 US 945, 7 L ed 2d 341, 82 S Ct 376.

§ 16.1. (New text) — Effect of Removal from State.

The effect of the removal of an attorney from the state and of the establishment of a residence in another state is to suspend his right to practice law in the former state.[1] This is true even though the removal is to a contiguous state.[2] However, as the right to practice law created by admission to the bar is a continuous right for life, unless it is revoked, mere absence from the state does not of itself necessarily cause the forfeiture or abandonment of the right to practice originally granted.[3] The suspension of the right to practice law in the state, caused by the removal of the attorney from the state and his establishment of a residence in another state, does not cause the forfeiture or termination of the right of an attorney to be a member of the bar of the court of his original residence. The latter right will be revived upon the return of the attorney to the state of his original residence and the re-establishment of his residence there, and with that right will necessarily be revived his right to practice law in the state.[4] And if membership in the bar association of the state has, during his nonresidence, been made a condition of practicing law in the state, he is entitled, as a matter of right and without having to go through the formalities or conditions necessary for the admission of new members, to the privilege of membership in such association, even though under the statute creating the bar association only those entitled to practice law in the state at the time of its enactment and those subsequently qualifying as new members are entitled to the privilege of membership and to the right to practice.[5] Upon the question whether, upon his application for readmission to the bar of the state, his unprofessional conduct as a practicing attorney of the state to which he had moved, or his disbarment for such conduct in the other state, will ipso facto preclude his readmission or warrant his disbarment also at the forum, there is some conflict of opinion. One view is that as such foreign disbarment has no extraterritorial effect, it does not ipso facto operate to deny to such attorney seeking readmission the right thereto, or necessarily require his disbarment also from the bar of the forum, although such disbarment and the probative facts (which will be treated as conclusively established in the foreign disbarment proceedings) may, in subsequent disciplinary proceedings against him at the form, be the subject of an inquiry, and if such facts are sufficient to disbar an attorney from the bar of the forum, the court of the forum may order a disbarment.[6] Another view is that his professional misconduct in the other state and disbarment therefor will ipso facto operate as the basis of a denial to him of the right to readmission to which he would otherwise be entitled as a matter of right.[7]

The few cases dealing with the question of the effect of change of residence by an attorney after the commencement of an action in the state, upon his right to continue as attorney in such action, are conflicting. Thus, the view has been taken that if the prerequisite of residence was present at the commencement of the action, the right to continue as attorney in the prosecution of the action and enforcement of the judgment rendered is not lost by the supervening nonresidence.[8] The opposite conclusion has also been reached.[9]

[1] State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800, 162 P2d 261, 160 ALR 1366.

Anno: 160 ALR 1373.

[2, 3] Anno: 160 ALR 1373.

[4] State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800, 162 P2d 261, 160 ALR 1366.

Anno: 160 ALR 1374.

[5] State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800, 162 P2d 261, 160 ALR 1366.

Anno: 160 ALR 1374.

One who, having been admitted to the bar of the State of Washington and having practiced there for a number of years, removed to Alaska and after having practiced his profession there for over thirty years, and while in good standing as a member of the Alaska Bar, returned to Washington and, having established his residence there, sought admission to membership in the State Bar Association upon payment of the required dues and tender of any amount necessary to investigate his professional conduct while a member of the Alaska bar, together with proof showing his good standing as a member of the Alaska bar, has been held entitled to admission to such membership in the State Bar Association, although during his absence from Washington the State Bar Act was enacted which confined the first membership of the State Bar Association to those who at the time of the enactment thereof were entitled to practice law in the State of Washington, and although during such nonresidence he had no right to practice law in Washington—the ground of the decision being that, although during his nonresidence his right to practice law in Washington was suspended, he still remained a member of the state bar, and he did not lose his membership in that bar by reason of his nonresidence at the time of the enactment of that statute, and that upon his return to Washington he regained his status as a member of the Washington bar, which entitled him to membership in the State Bar Association. State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800, 162 P2d 261. 160 ALR 1366.

One who, being a member of the Arizona bar, removed to California and practiced law there, and who upon the adoption of the Arizona State Bar Act automatically became a member of the Arizona bar, under the terms of that act providing that its first members should include all persons who were at the time of its enactment entitled to practice law in Arizona, may, as a matter of right, pay the accrued membership fees provided for by the act and thereby prevent his suspension for delinquency in such payment where the act provides for a two months' notice of such delinquency before a suspension, and it is not shown that such notice was ever given to him or that he was actually suspended before tender of such arrearages of dues. Anno: 160 ALR 1375.

[6] Anno: 160 ALR 1375.

[7] State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800. 162 P2d 261. 160 ALR 1366.

Anno: 160 ALR 1375.

Conduct while residing in another state and professional behavior as a member of the bar of that state, of an attorney who seeks to resume practice in Washington, having formerly been admitted to the bar of that state, is a proper subject of investigation before admitting the attorney to membership in the State Bar Association. State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800, 162 P2d 261, 160 ALR 1366.

[8] Anno: 60 ALR 1373.

§ 17. Liability for Unauthorized Practice of Law.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1341–2:1345; 6 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 6:341–6:344; 16 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 16:1028.

Am Jur quoted in Hobson v. Kentucky Trust Co. 303 Ky 493. 197 SW2d 454.

Am Jur cited in Bump v. District Ct. 232 Iowa 623. 5 NW(2d) 914.

Re Baker. 8 NJ 321. 85 A2d 505

West Virginia State Bar v Earley, 144 W Va 504, 109 SE2d 420.

p. 272, n. 9. Dulles v Johnson (CA2 NY) 273 F2d 362, 80 ALR2d 1338, cert den 364 US 834, 5 L ed 2d 60, 81 S Ct 54.

Page 272. Add, following note 9: A statute may render the unauthorized practice of law by one not an attorney a contempt of court;[9.1] and it has been held that such unauthorized practice, whether the illegal acts are performed in or out of court, is in contempt of the state supreme court in which inherent power to regulate the admission of attorneys to practice is vested.[9.11]

[9.1] Re Matthews, 57 Idaho. 75. 62 P. (2d) 578, 111 A.L.R. 13.

[9.11] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346. 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

As to matters in regard to procedure and punishment for contempt, see CONTEMPT.

p. 272, n. 11. Nelson v. Smith. 107 Utah 382. 154 P2d 634, 157 ALR 512.

Injunction is a proper remedy to prevent the violations of the law by a corporation engaged in the practice of law. Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v. Grievance Committee, F. C. D. 142 Tex 506. 179 SW2d 946. 157 ALR 268. Anno: 157 ALR 310.

A suit to enjoin unlawful practice of law by one not a member of the state bar may be brought in the name of the grievance committee of that body, that committee having been created by the supreme court, in the exercise of power granted by statute, and authorized to maintain suit to prohibit unlawful practice of law. Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v. Grievance Committee. F. C. D. 142 Tex 506. 179 SW2d 946. 157 ALR 268.

Page 272. Add, following note 11: The prosecution of suits by an attorney may be enjoined where he has secured such litigation through "chasers" paid by him.[11.1]

However, the success of a proceeding to restrain one not admitted to practice law from performing legal work does not depend upon proof of his violation of any statute.[11.5]

[11.1] See § 274, infra (Supp).

[11.5] A statute prohibiting one not admitted to practice law from doing legal work for compensation does not preclude a court of equity from enjoining a licensed real estate broker from performing work of a legal nature notwithstanding that he does not receive compensation therefor over and above his ordinary real estate commission. Washington State Bar Asso. v. Washington Asso. of Realtors, 41 Wash2d 697, 251 P2d 619, overruling Paul v. Stanley, 168 Wash 371, 12 P2d 401.

p. 272, n. 12. Anno: 105 ALR 1376; 157 ALR 310.

§ 18. Who May Challenge Right.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1341–2:1343, 2:1345; 6 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 6:341–6:344.

Am Jur quoted in Conway-Bogue Realty Invest. Co. v Denver Bar Asso. 135 Colo 398, 312 P2d 998.

Hobson v Kentucky Trust Co. 303 Ky 493, 197 SW2d 454.

Am Jur cited in Re Dodd, 131 Conn 702, 42 A2d 36.

Bump v. District Ct. 232 Iowa 623, 5 NW2d 914.

Re Baker. 8 NJ 321. 85 A2d 505

West Virginia State Bar v Earley, 144 W Va 504, 109 SE2d 420.

p. 273, n. 14.

Upon a report of a jurisdictional question by a trial judge in whose court a petition has been filed by a disbarred attorney for readmission to the bar, the appellate court is not concerned with any question of the right of a bar association which, although an order of notice of the petition was issued to it and it objected to the jurisdiction of the court below, is not technically a party to the proceeding. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

A state bar, which by statute is constituted an administrative agency of the judicial department of the state, all persons not members thereof being prohibited from practicing law in the state, has no interest not common to the public in general, regarding the right to practice law, and may maintain a suit to enjoin one not a member from practicing law. Hexter Title & Abstract Co. v. Grievance Committee, F. C. D. 142 Tex 506. 179 SW2d 946. 157 ALR 268.

Page 273. Add paragraph at end of section: An action by two railroads to enjoin the solicitation and prosecution of claims against them by an attorney who through a family partnership and employees of the railroad, operating as "chasers," had secured such litigation, which regardless of the place where the injury to an employee of the railroad occurred, was to be prosecuted in his jurisdiction, has been upheld and the injunction granted.[16.5]

[16.5] See § 274, infra (Supp).

§ 19. Generally.

Am Jur cited in Re Florida State Bar Asso. 134 Fla 851, 186 So 280 (n. 18).

RCL cited in State ex rel. Watson v. Dade County Roofing Co. 156 Fla 260. 22 So2d 793.

p. 273, n. 17.

For hundreds of years prior to the American Revolution the English courts actually exercised control over admittance to the bar. Anno: 144 ALR 156.

p. 273, n. 18.

Interference by the legislature with the power of the courts to control membership in the bar of the state is invalid under a constitutional provision that "the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers, or either of them." Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

A few cases support the doctrine that the legislature has full power in the matter of admissions to the bar. And some cases more or less distinctly affirm that control of the matter of admissions to the bar is in the courts. Anno: 144 ALR 152, 153.

The general conclusion to be drawn from the cases (allowing for contrary doctrines laid down in a few jurisdictions, and in some instances still adhered to) is that, notwithstanding the fundamental division of the powers of government contemplated by American constitutions, and despite the vital interest of the courts in the character, learning, and ability of practicing attorneys, a state legislature may, with effect, enact reasonable statutes regulating the matter of admitting attorneys to practice, including the prescribing of procedure to be followed by applicants, committees, boards, and, usually, by the courts, the learning and character to be possessed by persons admitted, and generally, the conditions to be complied with. Anno: 144 ALR 150, 159.

Admission to practice law is a judicial function, one of the inherent powers of the court, and is not within the powers of the legislature. Re Levy, 23 Wash2d 607, 161 P2d 651, 162 ALR 805.

p. 273, n. 20. Barr v. Watts (Fla) 70 So2d 347, holding that the legislature has power to prescribe qualifications for admission to the practice of law concurrent with that of the Supreme Court; Gould v. State, 99 Fla 662, 127 So 309, 69 ALR 699.

Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE2d 516, 137 ALR 766; Opinion of Justices, 279 Mass 607, 180 NE 725, 81 ALR 1059.

Anno: 144 ALR 154.

It is sometimes said that a legislature may enact laws to "aid" the courts in the exercise of their inherent judicial power in the matter of admissions to the bar; and in certain other cases expressions of similar import are used. In other cases it is simply stated, in substance, that the legislature may enact reasonable laws regulating admission to the bar. Anno: 144 ALR 152

The act of admitting attorneys to practice is in most jurisdictions regarded as exclusively for the courts, as is the final determination in regard to the fitness and qualifications of particular persons, and the courts, acting therein, may exercise judicial power to reject an applicant for unfitness, notwithstanding he may have met the terms of existing statutes and under the provisions thereof appears fully entitled to admittance. Anno: 144 ALR 151, 176, 179.

While the legislature may fix minimum standards of qualifications for attorneys at law, the court will determine for itself whether the qualifications so fixed invade the judicial field or embarrass the court in the discharge of its functions; and it is no more within the power of the legislature to prescribe qualifications for attorneys which are too rigorous than it is to prescribe with finality those which are too law. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis 8, 11 NW(2d) 604, 12 NW(2d) 699, 151 ALR 586.

Statutes regulating admissions to the bar are effective in so far as, under the police power, they establish minimum requirements; but they cannot deprive the court of the power to require additional qualifications. Re Levy, 23 Wash2d 607, 161 P2d 651, 162 ALR 805.

The court will recognize no exceptions to its rules prescribing qualifications for admission to the bar. Re Levy, 23 Wash2d 607, 161 P2d 651, 162 ALR 805.

p. 273, n. 1. Anno: 114 ALR 173; 144 ALR 155, 163.

Under most constitutions, the sounder and better supported doctrine seems to be that, in the exercise of its police power, in the interest and for the protection of the general public, a legislature may, with entire validity, reasonably regulate admissions to the bar, but that any statutory provision which, as put into effect, involves interference with, or frustration of, the courts in the performance of their duties and functions cannot be regarded as valid. Anno: 144 ALR 150.

No statute can control the judicial department in the performance of its duty to decide who is fit to practice law. Opinion of Justices, 279 Mass 607, 180 NE 725, 81 ALR 1059; State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner, 141 Neb 556, 4 NW(2d) 302, 144 ALR 138.

Where a legislative bill constitutes an endeavor on the part of the legislature to go beyond the concept of minimum requirements of an applicant to take examination for admission to the bar and denies the judicial department the power to place higher qualifications than those specified in the act, and, in fact, usurps the power of the judiciary in such respect; held, such legislative act is unconstitutional. State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner, 141 Neb 556, 4 NW(2d) 302, 144 ALR 138

A statute relating to the admission of war veterans to practice law, using the words "may be admitted" should be construed as merely permitting, and not requiring, admission by the courts of persons having the qualifications therein stated, and such statute, especially in view of the presumed knowledge of the legislators that the word "may" in a statute relating to the practice of law, had been previously construed by the courts as not mandatory, does not indicate a purpose on the part of the legislature to usurp the powers of the judiciary with regard to the control of the admission of applicants to the practice of law (expressed in this instance by a court rule promulgated prior to the passage of the statute and covering the admission of veterans and requiring certain qualifications in addition to those required by the statute). Re Levy, 23 Wash2d 607, 161 P2d 651, 162 ALR 805

p. 273, n. 2.

A statute relating to admission to the bar is not, even when interpreted as conferring on a lower court jurisdiction over a petition for admission by one previously disbarred by a higher court, unconstitutional as an interference by the legislature with the judiciary, especially where, under the law of the state, a petition for readmission is an entirely new and independent proceeding distinct from the proceeding for disbarment. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766

p. 273, n. 4.

Some of the cases gives support to the proposition that a legislature has power validity to prescribe minimum prerequisites for admission to the bar, subject merely to the power of the courts to prescribe additional requirements Anno: 144 ALR 166; see State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner, 141 Neb 556, 4 NW(2d) 302, 144 ALR 138.

Page 273. Add, following note 4: In most jurisdictions it is clear that statutes prescribing reasonable educational prerequisites for admission to the bar will be given effect by the courts, although not to the extent of depriving the courts of authority to prescribe additionally.[4.51] And the principle that no statute prescribing prerequisites for admittance to the bar can dispense with qualifications deemed essential by the courts undoubtedly applies in most jurisdictions to matters of education,[4.52] and to the matter of the personal character of applicants.[4.53]

[4.51] Anno: 144 ALR 168.

In a few cases the rule is laid down that the legislature has full power in the matter of prescribing educational prerequisites for admission to the bar Anno: 144 ALR 169

[4.52] Re Day, 181 Ill 73, 54 NE 646, 50 LRA 519; Hanson v. Grattan, 84 Kan 843, 115 P 646, 34 LRA(NS) 240; Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766; Opinion of the Justices, 279 Mass 607, 180 NE 725, 81 ALR 1059.

State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner, 141 Neb 556 4 NW(2d) 302, 144 ALR 138.

Anno: 144 ALR 169

[4.53] Anno: 144 ALR 172

p. 273, n. 5. Anno: 144 ALR 163.

Page 273. Add, following note 6: The purpose in imposing upon candidates for admission to the bar the requirements of learning and good moral character is not to create a monopoly in the legal profession or to protect the profession; such requirements are designed for the better security of the people against incompetency and dishonesty.[6.1]

A state cannot exclude a person from the practice of law or from any other occupation in a manner or for reasons that contravene the due process or equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment.[6.5] Thus, while a state can require high standards of qualification, such as good moral character or proficiency in its law, before it admits an applicant to the bar, any qualification must have a rational connection with the applicant's fitness or capacity to practice law; an applicant cannot be excluded merely because he is a Republican, or a Negro, or a member of a particular church.[6.51] And even in applying permissible standards, officers of a state cannot exclude a person from the practice of law when there is no basis for their finding that he fails to meet the standards, or when their action is invidiously discriminatory.[6.52]

The Supreme Court has held that due process is not denied to a bar applicant by a state's denial of his application for the reason that he has refused to answer questions relevant to his qualifications, as long as he has been warned in advance of the consequences of his refusal to answer.[6.53]

A state may constitutionally require a lawyer to be a member of an integrated bar.[6.6]

[6.1] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Goodman, 366 Ill. 346, 8 N. E. (2d) 941, 111 A.L.R. 1.

[6.5] Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 792.
Anno: 6 L ed 2d 1328.

[6.51] Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 792.
Anno: 6 L ed 2d 1329.

[6.52] Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752.

See Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

[6.53] Anno: 6 L ed 2d 1330.

In Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 366 US 36, 6 L ed 2d 105, 81 S Ct 997, the United States Supreme Court upheld California's rejection of an application to the state bar where the applicant refused to answer questions concerning present and past membership in the Communist Party. The Court said that California's placing on a bar applicant the burden of proving "good moral character" was valid, and that under such a rule, the state could rebut the applicant's showing of good moral character by evidence resulting from an independent investigation, from the applicant's response to questions on his application form, or from interrogation of the applicant himself. It concluded that with regard to rebutting evidence of good moral character by interrogation of the applicant, a state can deny admission to a bar applicant so long as he refuses to provide unprivileged answers to questions having a substantial relevance to his qualifications, such as questions regarding good moral character, if it gives the applicant due warning of the consequences of continued refusal to respond to such questions. The Court regarded as irrelevant the fact that the rule was court-made rather than enacted by the legislature, and as immaterial the question whether the rule required the rejection of all applicants refusing to answer material questions, or only those applicants whom the examining committee deemed to have materially obstructed its investigation.

In Re Anastaplo, 366 US 82, 6 L ed 135, 81 S Ct 978, upholding Illinois' rejection of a bar applicant for refusal to answer questions regarding Communist Party membership, the Court stated that (1) it is not constitutionally impermissible for a state legislatively, or through court-made regulation, to adopt a rule that a bar applicant will not be admitted if and so long as, by refusing to answer material questions, he obstructs a bar examination committee in interrogating him upon his qualifications, even though it has before it substantial character evidence altogether favorable to the applicant, (2) it is of no constitutional significance whether the interrogation of an applicant on matters relevant to his qualifications is prompted by information which the committee already has about him from other sources or arises from a good-faith belief in the need for exploratory or testing questions of the applicant, and (3) a bar applicant has, in such circumstances, a "constitutional right to be warned in advance of the consequences of his refusal to answer."

[6.6] Lathrop v Donohue, 367 US 820, 6 L ed 2d 1191, 81 S Ct 1826.

§ 20. Eligibility to Admission or Practice Generally.

Page 274. Add new paragraph following note 9: While ordinarily applicants for admission to the bar are required to take and pass a prescribed examination before being admitted,[9.5] it has been held that a court rule that honorably discharged war veterans graduating from an approved law school without opportunity to take a bar examination before entering service, or satisfactorily completing three years of study at certain law schools before entering active service and subsequently graduating therefrom, and satisfactorily completing a six months' refresher course at either school, may be admitted to practice law without examination does not unlawfully discriminate against law students who, by reason of physical infirmity, were unable to enter war service.[9.51]

[9.5] See infra, § 27.

[9.51] Re Levy, 23 Wash2d 607, 161 P2d 651, 162 ALR 805.
Anno: 162 ALR 818.

p. 274, n. 10.
The United States Supreme Court (as well as the federal courts in general) does not conduct independent examinations for admission to its bar. Re Isserman, 345 US 286, 97 L ed 1013, 73 S Ct 676

§ 21. Residence and Citizenship; Race.

Am Jur cited in Benson v Schneider (ND) 68 NW2d 665.

p. 274, n. 11. Anno: 160 ALR 1372; 51 ALR 2d 1219 (under reciprocity provisions).

p. 274, n. 12. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1207.

Page 274. Add following note 14: In some jurisdictions, the rules for admission of attorneys to practice contain a provision to the effect that an attorney from another country which has a jurisprudence based on the principles of the English common law might be admitted to practice without examination. Applicants who came from countries not having such system as the basis for its jurisprudence have been denied admission.[14.5] p. 274, n. 15. As to civil rights generally, see 10 Am Jur 893, Civil Rights.

[14.5] Anno: 51 ALR2d 1206.

§ 22. Sex.

p. 275, n. 19. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1202.

§ 23. Moral Character.

p. 275, n. 1. Re Stephenson, 243 Ala 342, 10 So(2d) 1, 143 ALR 166.

State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Anno: 51 ALR2d 1217 (under reciprocity provisions); 64 ALR2d 304.

A court may and should examine into the moral character of an applicant for admission to the bar, even where, under a statutory provision for the filing of a petition to be examined for admission, examination into acquirements and qualifications, rather than moral character, is the subject of the petition. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

p. 275, n. 2. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1202, 1217.

Page 275. Add new paragraph following note 3: While a state can require high standards of qualification, such as good moral character, before it admits an applicant to the bar,[3.5] the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is violated by a state's denying an applicant the opportunity to qualify for the practice of law on the ground that he has not shown good moral character, where such a finding cannot reasonably be made on the record.[3.51]

[3.5] Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 792.

[3.51] Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752; Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

Anno: 64 ALR2d 309, 310.

Government censorship can no more be reconciled with the national constitutional standard of freedom of speech and press when done in the guise of determining "moral character" (for instance, for the purpose of admission to the bar), than if it should be attempted directly. Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

Mere unorthodoxy in the field of political and social ideas does not, as a matter of fair and logical inference, negative good moral character. Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752.

A state's denial of a person's right to practice law on the ground that he failed to prove his good moral character and his loyalty to the United States is both arbitrary and discriminatory, and hence a denial of due process and equal protection of the laws, where there is no evidence in the record which rationally supports a finding of doubt about his character or loyalty. Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

A state court's finding that an applicant excluded from taking the state bar examination has not shown good moral character is not reasonably supported by the record, where the undisputed evidence shows him to be a man of high ideals with a deep sense of social justice; nothing in the record suggests that he has engaged in any conduct during the past fifteen years which reflects adversely on his character; his use of aliases prior to that period of time was for the purpose of forestalling anti-Semitism in securing employment, and, at the occasion of a mass arrest during a labor dispute, for the purpose of avoiding his being discharged as a striker; his arrests, also more than fifteen years ago, resulted in only one instance in a formal charge, and this charge concerned an offense not involving moral turpitude and was dropped before the case came to trial; and his admitted membership in the Communist Party from 1932 to 1940 was not shown to have been anything more than faith in a political party lawful at that time; nor can the applicant's exclusion be justified on a combination of all these factors. Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752.

A state court's finding that in the 1930's when an applicant excluded from taking a state bar examination was a member of the Communist Party, it was dominated by a foreign power and was dedicated to the violent overthrow of the government and that every member was aware of this, is not supported by evidence where nothing in the record shows that the applicant participated in any illegal activity or did anything morally reprehensible as a member of that party. Schware v Board of Bar Examiners of New Mexico, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752.

A denial without opinion by the California Supreme Court of a petition for review of the refusal of the Committee of Bar Examiners to certify the petitioner to practice law does not rest upon an adequate state ground, that is, the petitioner's alleged failure to elaborate in the brief accompanying the petition for review his claims of violation of various federal constitutional rights, where he repeatedly asserted these rights throughout the hearings before the committee, relied upon them in his petition for review, nothing indicates that the California Supreme Court requires that contentions raised in the petition for review must also be set out in the briefs accompanying it, and three of the seven justices of that court dissented from the denial of the petition. Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

A finding, made by a committee of bar examiners in denying an applicant the right to practice law, that he failed to prove his good moral character is not rationally supported by the evidence where numerous individuals in every walk of life attested to his excellent character, not a single person testified to the contrary, his background furnished strong proof that his life had always been honest, and the only doubts alleged about his character arose (1) from an alleged membership, not reliably proven, in the Communist Party in 1941, there being, however, no evidence of any unlawful activities on his part and the party being a recognized political party at that time, (2) from his criticism of public officials and their policies, which, however, was not unusually extreme and expressed only his view that certain officials were performing their duties in a manner injurious to the public, and (3) from his refusal to answer questions by the committee as to his present and past membership in the Communist Party, such refusal, however, being made in good faith and based on his claim, not frivolous under the circumstances, that under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution a state could not inquire into a person's political opinions or associations. Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

No unfavorable inferences as to the truthfulness, candor, or moral character in general, of an applicant for admission to the bar can be drawn from his refusal to answer questions, put to him by the committee of bar examiners, as to his past and present membership in the Communist Party, where his refusal to answer was based on a good faith belief that the United States Constitution prohibited the type of inquiries which the committee was making. Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

A finding, made by a committee of bar examiners in denying an applicant the right to practice law, that he failed to prove that he did not advocate the overthrow of the federal and state governments by force and violence is not rationally supported by the evidence, where the applicant repeatedly testified under oath before the committee that he did not believe in nor advocate the overthrow of any government in this country by any unconstitutional means, no witness testified to the contrary, many witnesses gave testimony utterly inconsistent with the premise that he was disloyal, and he told the committee that he was ready to take an oath to uphold the federal and state constitutions; the mere fact that he was a member of the Communist Party in 1941 does not provide a reasonable basis for a belief that he presently advocates overthrowing the government by force. Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722.

p. 276, n. 4. Anno: 64 ALR2d 318.

Page 276. Add at end of section: The courts considering questions with respect to the applicant's moral qualifications have been concerned with whether various specific acts of misconduct or charges of crime alleged, or brought to the attention of the court or examining body, warranted rejection of the application,[4.5] such as presenting a forged certificate of good character,[4.51] attempting to gain admission to the bar by impersonating another person or by other devious method,[4.52] generally turbulent, intemperate, or irresponsible conduct,[4.53] solicitation of cases (ambulance chasing) in a state where the applicant formerly practiced,[4.54] disbarment, or failure to disclose to the examiners disbarment or pending disbarment proceedings in another state,[4.55] membership in the Communist Party,[4.56] unauthorized holding self out as an attorney,[4.57] conviction of crime, charge of crime not followed by conviction or a pending indictment,[4.58] unethical or questionable business practices,[4.59] and other improprieties or alleged misconduct.[4.6]

Courts in some instances have been inclined to look askance at claims of reformation on the part of applicants for admission to the bar.[4.61]

[4.5] Anno: 64 ALR2d 317-328.
[4.51] Anno: 64 ALR2d 319.
[4.52] Anno: 64 ALR2d 320.
[4.53] Anno: 64 ALR2d 320.
[4.54] Anno: 64 ALR2d 321.
[4.55] Anno: 64 ALR2d 321.
[4.56] Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 366 US 36, 6 L ed 2d 105, 81 S Ct 997; Konigsberg v State Bar of California, 353 US 252, 1 L ed 2d 810, 77 S Ct 722, reh den 354 US 927, 1 L ed 2d 1441, 77 S Ct 1374.
Anno: 64 ALR2d 321; 6 L ed 2d 1329.

Where admitted membership in the Communist Party from 1932 to 1940 was not shown to have been anything more than faith in a political party lawful at that time, it has been held that such membership at that time did not justify an inference that such person was of bad moral character in 1953 when he applied for admission to the bar of New Mexico. Schware v Board of Bar Examiners, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752, 64 ALR2d 288.

A Canadian case has held absolutely and without equivocation that membership in the Communist Party was ground for refusing admission to the British Columbia bar. Anno: 64 ALR2d 322.

[4.57] Anno: 64 ALR2d 324.
[4.58] Spears v State Bar, 211 Cal 183, 294 P 697, 72 ALR 923.
Rosencranz v Tidrington, 193 Ind 472, 141 NE 58, 28 ALR 1136.
Anno: 64 ALR2d 325.

It has been said that the mere fact that a man has been arrested has very little, if any, probative value in showing that he has engaged in any misconduct, and whatever probative force the arrest may have is normally dissipated when formal charges are not filed against the arrested person and he is released without trial. Schware v Board of Bar Examiners, 353 US 232, 1 L ed 2d 796, 77 S Ct 752, 64 ALR2d 288.

[4.59] Anno: 64 ALR2d 326.
[4.6] Anno: 64 ALR2d 327.
[4.61] Anno: 64 ALR2d 329.

§ 24. Education.

p. 276, n. 5. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.
Anno: 51 ALR2d 1218.

It has been held that an applicant who held a certificate of admission from another state, and who produced satisfactory evidence that he had practiced in the highest courts of such state for a period of 3 years, must also present satisfactory evidence that he possessed the requisite general education required by other provisions of the statute, in addition to evidence of good moral character. Anno: 51 ALR 2d 1218.

p. 276, n. 8. See State ex rel. Ralston v. Turner, 141 Neb 556, 4 NW(2d) 302, 144 ALR 138.

§ 25. Right of Corporation to Practice Law.

Am Jur cited in Re Florida Bar (Fla) 133 So 2d 554.

Kendall v Belling, 295 Ky 782, 175 SW2d 489.

Judd v. City Trust & Sav. Bank, 133 Ohio St 81, 12 NE(2d) 288 (notes 12, 13).

RCL cited in Wayne v. Murphey-Favre & Co. 56 Idaho, 788, 59 P(2d) 721.

State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Service, 104 Mont 76, 66 P(2d) 337.

Bar Asso. v. Hexter Title & Abstract Co. (Tex Civ App) 175 SW2d 108; Stewart Abstract Co. v. Judicial Commission (Tex Civ App) 131 SW(2d) 686; Montgomery v. Utilities Ins. Co. (Tex Civ App) 117 SW(2d) 486.

p. 276, n. 12. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Kentucky State Bar Asso. v First Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. (Ky) 342 SW2d 397, 85 ALR 2d 178.

Rosenthal v Shepard Broadcasting Co. 299 Mass 286, 12 NE2d 819, 114 ALR 1502; Re Maclub of America, 295 Mass 45, 3 NE2d 272, 105 ALR 1360.

Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 344 Mo 932, 130 SW(2d) 945, 125 ALR 1149.

Anno: 105 ALR 1365; 157 ALR 283.

p. 276, n. 13. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Anno: 105 ALR 1366; 157 ALR 284.

The broadcasting of programs known as "Court of Common Troubles" and "Goodwill Court" wherein legal questions submitted by members of the public were answered by persons occupying or having occupied judicial positions constituted a violation by the broadcasting company of the statute forbidding corporations to practice law. Rosenthal v. Shepard Broadcasting Co. 299 Mass 286, 12 NE (2d) 819, 114 A.L.R. 1502. Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 1506

It has been held that a corporation may employ its own attorney to render legal services for it, but if it renders a legal service to members of the public, and particularly if it makes a charge for such service, it is engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. Kentucky State Bar Asso. v First Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. (Ky) 342 SW2d 397, 85 ALR2d 178.

The fact that a corporation combines a legal service to the public with commercial services, which it properly may render, has been held not to constitute an excuse for the unauthorized practice of law. Kentucky State Bar Asso. v First Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. (Ky) 342 SW2d 397, 85 ALR2d 178.

§ 26. Generally.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1796–1:1800.

p. 277, n. 14.

A petition, with a pamphlet attached thereto as an exhibit, falsely and maliciously attacking the courts of the state and the judges thereof, may be considered as evidence upon the question of the attorney's moral and mental fitness to practice law. State Bar Commission ex rel. Williams v. Sullivan, 35 Okla 745, 131 P 703, LRA1915D 1218

p. 277, n. 15. Anno: 64 ALR2d 317.

p. 277, n. 16. Anno: 64 ALR2d 311.

For cases discussing the weight to be given to testimonials of character and reputation, see Anno: 64 ALR2d 330.

p. 277, n. 17. Anno: 64 ALR2d 308.

§ 27. Examination of Applicants.

Am Jur cited in Re Hughey, 62 Nev 498, 156 P2d 733.

Page 278. Add, following note 20: Records of the board of bar examiners are records of the court.[20.5]

[20.5] Re Levy, 23 Wash2d 607, 161 P2d 651, 162 ALR 805.

p. 278, n. 5. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1201-1221.

It has been held that one seeking admission to the practice of law in New York without examination on the ground of his practice in the highest court of another state for at least 5 years must have resided continuously, or substantially so, in that other state for the 5 years, and the Appellate Division acts within its discretionary powers in ruling that compliance with such residence requirement is not shown by a petitioner who was admitted to practice in Georgia, but who spent at least half of the time in each of the 5 years living and working in states other than Georgia as a claims attorney for a liability insurance company. Re Application of Harvey, 309 NY 46. 127 NE2d 801, 51 ALR2d 1196.

Work for the federal government, even though legal in nature, has been held not to take the applicant out of the requirement that he show practice in the other jurisdiction for a certain length of time. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1209.

Applications for admission have been denied on the ground that the applicant had not come within the requirement of actual practice in the other jurisdiction for the necessary length of time. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1208.

It has been held that an application for admission to the bar would be denied where it appeared that the applicant had left his home state, in which he did not meet, the requirements for admission and had gone to another state, in which he was admitted and practiced, after which he applied for admission in his home state under the reciprocity provision. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1202.

Some cases have recognized the propriety of "tacking" the time of practice in one jurisdiction to the time of practice in another under the proper circumstances, but have reached the conclusion under the facts confronting them, that the application should nevertheless be denied, since the applicant had not shown actual practice for the required period of time. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1213.

Page 278. Add at end of section: A fairly common requirement in reciprocity statutes or rules is that the applicant must have been admitted to practice before the "highest court" in the jurisdiction where he had formerly practiced.[5.5] The reciprocity provisions in some jurisdictions require that an applicant for admission who applies as a member of the bar of another jurisdiction must have his qualifications and compliance with the reciprocity provisions examined by a board of law examiners or similar body, and that such body must then make a recommendation for or against admission of the applicant.[5.51]

[5.5] Re Application of Harvey, 309 NY 46, 127 NE2d 801, 51 ALR2d 1196.
Anno: 51 ALR2d 1204–1206.

[5.51] Anno: 51 ALR2d 1219.

§ 28. Administration of Oath.

Anno: 18 ALR2d 335; 97 L ed 227.

In Re Summers, 325 US 561, 89 L ed 1795, 65 S Ct 1307. where the court sustained Illinois' denial of admission to practice as an attorney to one who was willing to take the required oath to support the state constitution but, because he was unwilling to bear arms, was considered by the Illinois court to be unable to take such oath conscientiously, a dissenting opinion by Justice Black, with whom three justices concurred, referred to the requirement as a test oath and took the view that it was unconstitutional as applied to this petitioner, whose refusal to bear arms was based upon his religious beliefs.

p. 278, n. 7. Anno: 18 ALR2d 283-291.

§ 29. Necessity of Retainer or Contract of Employment.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1801–1:1844; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1203, 2:1205.

Am Jur cited in Holt v Swenson, 252 Minn 510, 90 NW2d 724.

RCL quoted in Wylie v. Grand Rapids, 297 Mich 365. 297 NW 526.

p. 278, n. 8. The personal representative of a deceased lawyer has been held to be without right to assign pending cases to counsel of his choice, since this is a matter for the client to decide. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827. cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49. 78 S Ct 22.

§ 30. Who May Employ Attorney.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1205.

Am Jur cited in Swartfager v Wells, 53 Cal App(2d) 422 128 P(2d) 128

Dostal v Magee, 272 Wis 509. 76 NW2d 349. (dissent op).

§ 31. Sufficiency of Retainer.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1299.

Am Jur cited in Lawrence v. Tschirgi, 244 Iowa 386, 57 NW2d 46.

Bresette v Knapp, 121 Vt 376, 159 A2d 329.

Nicholson v. Shockey, 192 Va 270, 64 SE2d 813.

RCL quoted in Wylie v. Grand Rapids, 297 Mich 365. 297 NW 526.

Page 279. Add, following note 20: It has been held that the employment of one member of a law firm is the employment of the firm, so as to permit a recovery in the firm name against an executor for services rendered to the decedent in his lifetime.[20.5]

[20.5] Garden v. Riley, 116 W Va 723. 183 SE 46, 143 ALR 662.

§ 33. Assignment of Counsel by the Court.

Am Jur quoted in State v Delaney, 221 Or 620, 332 P2d 71, 351 P2d 85.

p. 280, n. 4. Knox County Council v. State, 217 Ind 493, 29 NE(2d) 405. 130 ALR 1427.

p. 280, n. 7.

A court in which a criminal prosecution is commenced against a pauper defendant has inherent power, independently of legislative authority and not subject in any way to the regulation and control of the legislature, to appoint counsel for the defendant in accordance with his constitutional right thereto. Knox County Council v. State, 217 Ind 493, 29 NE(2d) 405. 130 ALR 1427.

§ 34. By Act of Client.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1845–1:1847; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1185, 2:1186, 2:1188, 2:1189. 2:1191, 2:1193-2:1195, 2:1200–2:1202.

Am Jur quoted in Re Lachmund, 179 Or 420. 170 P2d 748. 166 ALR 479.

Am Jur cited in Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719 (n. 15).

Carey v. Gulfport, 140 Fla 40. 191 So 45; Bump v. District Ct. 232 Iowa 623. 5 NW2d 914.

Com. use of Clay County v. Sizemore. 269 Ky 722, 108 SW(2d) 733 (n. 15).

Marchand v. Gulf Ref. Co. 187 La 1002, 175 So 647 (n. 17).

State ex rel. Seifert, Johnson & Hand v Smith, 260 Minn 405, 110 NW2d 159; Colstad v Levine, 243 Minn 279, 67 NW2d 648.

Morse v. Eighth Judicial District Ct 65 Nev 275. 195 P2d 199. 3 ALR2d 136.

Bolton v. Marshall, 153 Ohio St 250. 91 NE2d 508.

RCL quoted in Goodkind v. Wolkowsky, 132 Fla 63. 180 So 538.

RCL cited in Gravity Drainage Dist. v. Edwards, 207 La 1, 20 So2d 405; United Gas Pub. Serv. Co. v. Christian, 186 La 689, 173 So 174; Re Winston, 40 NM 348. 59 P2d 904.

p. 281, n. 15. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323. 6 N. E. (2d) 40. 109 A.L.R. 669.

Re Lachmund, 179 Or 420, 170 P2d 748. 166 ALR 479.

A client has the right to discharge his attorney and to substitute another at any time, with or without cause, and in spite of any contract. Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223. 21 A (2d) 396. 136 ALR 226.

p. 281, n. 16. Anno: 43 ALR2d 680, 683.

Page 281. Add following note 17: Where the employment under a general or periodic retainer fee or salary contract is for a definite period, the attorney may be discharged at any time for justifiable cause;[17.5] but the wrongful discharge of the attorney prior to the expiration of the specified period constitutes a breach of the contract, and has been held to entitle the attorney to compensation or damages.[17.51] An attorney's delay in filing an action does not constitute cause for his discharge, where the action is filed well within the period of limitation.[17.52]

[17.5] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680.
[17.51] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680.
See infra. § 172 (Supp).
[17.52] Peresipka v Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. (CA7 Ind) 231 F2d 268, 59 ALR2d 554.

§ 35. — Necessity of Notice of Discharge.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1188, 2:1191, 2:1200–2:1202.

Page 281. Add at end of section: The right of an attorney to notice and hearing before termination of a general or periodic retainer fee or salary contract may depend upon or be affected by express provisions of the contract in this regard.[2.5]

[2.5] Anno: 43 ALR2d 681.

§ 36. — When Attorney's Power Is Coupled with an Interest.

Am. Jur. cited in Marchand v. Gulf Ref. Co. 187 La 1002, 175 So 647 (notes 3, 4).

p. 281, n. 4. Anno: 28 ALR2d 1283.

An attorney at law employed to defend against claims by which persons were asserting mineral rights in a tract of land and who, for services rendered and other good and valuable consideration receipt of which was acknowledged, was sold and conveyed with full guaranty of title an undivided 20 per cent of the oil, gas, and other minerals in or under the property, has been held to have a power coupled with an interest which was not revocable at the will of the principal without just cause. Anno: 28 ALR2d 1283.

p. 282, n. 7. Anno: 28 ALR2d 1261, 1268.

It is only where an attorney has a power coupled with an interest that he must be retained and is not subject to discharge; and an interest in and to the fruits or proceeds to be derived from the action is not such a power. Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P (2d) 63, 124 ALR 719.

California cases dealing with the authority of attorneys at law in the prosecution of actions for their clients have construed transfers of title to the subject matter of the agency as not vesting such an interest as will prevent revocation of the agency where the transfer is made as compensation for the attorney's services and to reimburse him for expenditures. Anno: 28 ALR2d 1268.

§ 37. By Death of Client.

Am Jur cited in Bergum v. Palmborg, 239 Minn 569, 58 NW2d 722.

RCL quoted in Darrow v. Van Buskirk, 1 Ariz 57, 110 P(2d) 216.

§ 38. By Dissolution of Corporation or Partnership, or Receivership.

Am Jur cited in Fessler v. Weiss, 348 Ill App 21, 107 NE2d 795.

§ 39. By Act of Attorney.

Am Jur quoted in Boyle v. Beltzhoover, 119 W Va 626, 196 SE 503 (n. 15).

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. Groves v. First Judicial Dist. Ct. 61 Nev 269, 125 P(2d) 723.

Bostock v. Brown, 198 Wash 288, 88 P(2d) 445 (notes 17–18).

Page 283. Add following note 18: With respect to the duration of the employment of an attorney under a general or periodic retainer fee or salary contract, the demand and receipt of compensation for services which the attorney is obligated to render under the contract, for the fee or salary specified therein, has been held, in effect, to operate as a rescission of the contract.[18.5] But the fact that an attorney employed under an annual retainer for a specified period may in some instances, or in respect of some matters, have subordinated the client's interests to his own, does not operate as a rescission of the contract where the client has full knowledge of the facts and continues to avail himself of the attorney's services.[18.51]

[18.5] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680, 681.
[18.51] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680.

p. 283, n. 1. It has been held that an attorney should not be permitted to withdraw from a case where an injustice would result to the client because of his inability to secure new counsel who could familiarize himself with the complicated case within the short period before the day set for trial. Finch v Wallberg Dredging Co. 76 Idaho 246, 281 P2d 136, 48 ALR2d 1150.

§ 41. By Death of Attorney or Acceptance of Incompatible Office.

Am Jur cited in Atwood v Atwood, 253 Minn 185, 91 NW2d 728.

p. 283, n. 9. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

§ 43. By Accomplishment of Purpose.

p. 284, n. 13.

It has been held that an attorney-client relation in the course of which the attorney receives certain jewelry on behalf of the client continues until return of the jewelry or the making of a proper excuse for nondelivery. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

Page 284. Add at end of section: With respect to the term or duration of the employment of an attorney under a general or periodic retainer fee or salary contract, it has been held or stated generally that such employment at a specified compensation per year, month, or other definite period is an employment for such period rather than at will;[15.5] and that where an attorney who has been employed under a contract providing for a specified yearly compensation continues in such employment after the expiration of the year, it will be presumed that he does so under a renewal or extension of the original contract.[15.51]

[15.5] Anno: 43 ALR2d 679.
[15.51] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680.

§ 44. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1176–2:1202.

Am Jur quoted in State v. Moore, 34 Wash 2d 351, 208 P2d 1207.

Am Jur cited in D'Agostino v Peoples Water & Gas Co. (Fla) 78 So2d 739.

Stone v Baldwin, 331 Ill App 421, 73 NE2d 635.

RCL cited in Vosges Syndicate v. Everglades Club Co. 122 Fla 267, 164 So 881; Diem v. Diem, 136 Fla 824, 187 So 569.

p. 284, n. 16. Change cross-reference to read. § 36.

p. 284, n. 17.

The right to change attorneys with or without cause is universal. Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719.

p. 285, n. 18. See Evans v. Ockershausen, 69 App DC 285, 100 F(2d) 695, 128 ALR 177, writ of certiorari denied in 306 US 633, 83 L ed 1034, 59 S Ct 462.

p. 285, notes 20, 1.

Thus, the rule has been laid down that in the absence of such misconduct, neglect, or the like as to make it inequitable for the discharged attorney to claim any remuneration for his services, the court granting the order of substitution must or ordinarily will prescribe as a condition thereto some specific provision, either by way of a present payment or by adequate security from the proceeds of recovery, as compensation for the services of the attorney already rendered. Anno: 124 ALR 725.

In a number of cases the courts have said that the court granting a substitution has the power to impose such a condition, or may do so in its discretion; and it would seem, under this view of the matter, that the courts are disposed in the great majority of cases to exercise their discretion by imposing a condition which actually protects the discharged attorney, where no misconduct, neglect, or the like on his part is shown. Anno: 124 ALR 728.

p. 285, n. 1. See annotation in 124 ALR 730, for a number of cases illustrative of circumstances indicating such misconduct, want of good faith, etc., on the part of the attorney, as to justify the grant of orders of substitution without imposition of conditions requiring payment to or security for the attorney of record.

It is proper for a court, in removing an attorney and ordering the substitution of another attorney, to make provision in its order for the protection of the rights of the discharged attorney with respect to any possible compensation he may be entitled to under a contingent fee contract entered into by him with his client. Evans v. Ockershausen, 69 App DC 285, 100 F(2d) 695, 128 ALR 177, writ of certiorari denied in 306 US 633, 83 L ed 1034, 59 S Ct 462.

An order made in a pending action for substitution of attorney for the plaintiff upon payment to the original attorney of a specified sum has been held erroneous in so far as it includes compensation for services rendered in other actions, where plaintiff's request for consideration of such other actions, made upon his motion for substitution, was opposed by the original attorney, and where the record shows that the issue actually tried concerned only compensation for the former action, notwithstanding the attorney's claim, unsupported by the record, that the issues were broadened on the hearing. Froedtert Grain & Malting Co. v Peter P. Woboril, Inc. 265 Wis 456, 61 NW2d 855, 43 ALR2d 671.

Page 285. Add, following note 1: In a number of cases orders of substitution have been conditioned upon paying the discharged attorney his disbursements or actual expenses.[1.1] And in some cases it seems that the preservation of the attorney's lien has been considered sufficient protection to the attorney for payment for his services already rendered, upon a substitution of attorneys.[1.2]

[1.1] Anno: 124 ALR 732.

[1.2] Anno: 124 ALR 735.

Page 285. Add, following note 3: In some states there are statutes requiring an order of the court for the substitution of an attorney,[3.1] which in some instances condition such an order upon payment of the fees of the discharged attorney by the party asking that the change in attorneys be made.[3.2]

[3.1] Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719.
Anno: 124 ALR 743.

In Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719, it is indicated that in the jurisdiction the right to an order of substitution of attorneys would exist even without a statue to that effect, such as did exist in the jurisdiction.

[3.2] Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719.
Anno: 124 ALR 743.

Where a statute providing for substitution of an attorney upon the order of the court, upon application of either client or attorney, was amended by adding thereto a further provision, "except that in all civil cases in which the fee or compensation of the attorney is contingent upon the recovery of money, in which case the court shall determine the amount and terms of payment of the fee or compensation to be paid by the party," such amendment was held to be special legislation, and therefore unconstitutional in that there is no reasonable distinction in the matter of determining attorneys' fees between cases where the fee is "contingent on the recovery of money" and other cases, but such amendment was also held to be severable from the remainder of the statute. The court also noted that the effect of the amendment was to impose on the appellate courts the burden of determining, in the first instance, disputes between attorneys and clients in cases pending on appeal. Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719. This same amendment had previously been held objectionable by the intermediate appellate court, as infringing the constitutional provision for trial by jury. Anno: 124 ALR 743.

§ 45. Nature of Relationship.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1196-2:1199.

Am Jur quoted in Re Kaemmerer (Mo App) 178 SW(2d) 474; Laughlin v. Boatmen's Nat. Bank (Mo) 163 SW(2d) 761.

Am Jur cited in Woodruff & Son v Rhoton, 251 Iowa 550, 101 NW2d 720.

Searcy v Novo (La App) 188 So 490.

Colstad v Levine, 243 Minn 279, 67 NW2d 648.

Holtzman v. Hopwood Realty, 77 Ohio App 516, 65 NE2d 409, rehearing denied in (Ohio App) 68 NE2d 239.

Balwin v Birchby, — Wyo —, 346 P2d 278.

RCL cited in State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Asso. v. Niklaus, 149 Neb 859, 33 NW2d 145.

p. 285, n. 8. Littleton v. Kincaid (CA4th) 179 F2d 848, 27 ALR2d 572, cert den 340 US 809, 95 L ed 595, 71 S Ct 36, 38.

State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Lyons v Hall (La App) 90 So2d 519, 60 ALR 2d 1003.

Gardine v. Cottey, 360 Mo 681, 230 SW2d 731, 18 ALR2d 1100.

A fiduciary relationship exists as a matter of law between an attorney and client, which requires all transactions between them growing out of such relationship to be subject to the closest scrutiny. Gaffney v. Harmon, 405 Ill 273, 90 NE2d 785, 20 ALR2d 1273.

An insurer's attorneys have been held to be bound by the same high standards which govern all attorneys, whether or not privately retained. Allstate Ins. Co. v Keller, 17 Ill App 2d 44, 149 NE2d 482, 70 ALR2d 1190.

Page 285. Add following note 8: Lawyers must operate in a threefold capacity, as self-employed businessmen, as trusted agents of their clients, and as assistants to the court in search of a just solution to disputes.[8.5] p. 286, n. 9. Re Lachmund, 179 Or 420, 170 P2d 748, 166 ALR 479.

[8.5] Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

p. 286, n. 14. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 1454.

Where the work performed by an attorney is not purely professional and is such that if done by another person would entitle him to the benefit of a lien granted by statute against employers, an attorney, to such an extent, may come within the class contemplated by the statute. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 1454.

§ 46. Duties Owed to Client by Attorney.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1293, 2:1294.

Am Jur quoted in Gay v Heller (CA5 Fla) 252 F2d 313.

Laughlin v Boatmen's Nat. Bank (Mo) 163 SW2d 761.

Am Jur cited in McNeal v. Steinberger, 192 Okla 283, 135 P2d 490.

Holland v Columbia Iron Mining Co. 4 Utah2d 303, 293 P2d 700.

p. 286, n. 17.
An attorney's breach of fidelity to a client's interest constitutes constructive fraud. Gardine v. Cottey, 360 Mo 681, 230 SW2d 731, 18 ALR2d 1100

p. 286, n. 18. State Bar Asso. v Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. 145 Conn 222, 140 A2d 863, 69 ALR2d 394.

Page 286. Add following note 20: An attorney is required to disclose to his client all facts and circumstances within his knowledge which, in his honest judgment, might be likely to affect the performance of his duty for that client.[20.5] A client may presume from an attorney's failure to disclose matters material to his employment that the attorney has no interest which will interfere with his devotion to the cause confided in him, or betray his judgment.[20.51]

[20.5] Allstate Ins. Co. v Keller, 17 Ill App 2d 44, 149 NE2d 482, 70 ALR2d 1190.

[20.51] Allstate Ins. Co. v Keller, 17 Ill App 2d 44, 149 NE2d 482, 70 ALR2d 1190.

Page 287. Add, following note 4: An attorney receiving from his client funds to be applied to a certain purpose may not discharge at such time as suits his convenience his duty so to apply them and may not retain any unexpended balance until such time as he sees fit to return it.[4.5]

[4.5] Copren v. State Bar, 64 Nev 364, 183 P2d 833, 173 ALR 284.

§ 47. — Exercise of Reasonable Care and Skill.

Am Jur cited in Woodruff & Son v Rhoton, 251 Iowa 550, 101 NW2d 720.

Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144.

p. 287, n. 5. It has been held that an attorney who contracts to prosecute an action on behalf of his client impliedly represents (1) that he possesses the requisite degree of learning, skill, and ability which is necessary to the practice of his profession and which others similarly situated ordinarily possess; (2) that he will exert his best judgment in the prosecution of the litigation entrusted to him; and (3) that he will exercise reasonable and ordinary care and diligence in the use of his skill and in the application of his knowledge to his client's cause. Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144, 45 ALR2d 1.

§ 48. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1284.

Am Jur cited in Dreka v. Whitehair, 150 Fla 517, 8 So(2d) 23.

Hunt v. Picklesimer, 290 Ky 573, 162 SW(2d) 27

Agregaard v Skrmetta (La App) 131 So 2d 363.

Matthews v. Spears (La App) 24 So2d 195, rehearing denied in (La App) 24 So2d 485.

Baker v. Otto, 180 Md 53, 22 A2d 924; Cook v. Hollyday, 185 Md 656, 45 A2d 761

Palmer v Arnett, 352 Mich 22, 88 NW2d 445.

Colstad v Levine, 243 Minn 279, 67 NW2d 648.

Hines v Donovan, 101 NH 239, 139 A2d 884.

Re Honig, 10 NJ 74, 89 A2d 411.

RCL quoted in Searcy v. Novo (La App) 188 So 490

p. 288, n. 15. Littleton v. Kincaid (CA4th) 179 F2d 848, 27 ALR2d 572, cert den 340 US 809, 95 L ed 595, 71 S Ct 36, 38.

Moore v. Rochester Weaver Min. Co. 42 Nev 164, 174 P 1017, 19 ALR 830.

p. 288, n. 19.
While in some jurisdictions the rule of independent advice has been held applicable to transactions between attorney and client, it has, on the contrary, been frequently held that a transaction between attorney and client may be upheld if the attorney himself gives the client the proper advice. Anno: 123 ALR 1515, 1518.

§ 49. Transactions Concerning Subject-matter of Retainer.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1284.

Am Jur cited in Spencer v. Nelson (Cal App) 238 P2d 169, hear gr by sup ct.

Hunt v. Picklesimer, 290 Ky 573, 162 SW2d 27.

Matthews v. Spears (La App) 24 So2d 195, rehearing denied in (La App) 24 So2d 485.

Palmer v Arnett, 352 Mich 22, 88 NW2d 445.

Petraborg v. Zontelli, 217 Minn 536, 15 NW (2d) 174.

Re Honig, 10 NJ 74, 89 A2d 411.

p. 288, n. 1. Cite to footnote beginning: "A constructive trust." Anno: 129 ALR 696; 159 ALR 1008.

p. 289, n. 5. Stearns v. Wollenberg, 51 Or 88, 92 P 1079, 14 LRA(NS) 1095.

It has been held that, in a transaction between an attorney and client otherwise characterized by the highest integrity and utmost good faith, bad faith will not be imputed to the attorney merely because he seeks to protect his own interests. Appeal of Burke, 378 Pa 616, 108 A2d 58, 47 ALR2d 1367.

§ 50. Burden of Proof.

Am Jur quoted in Searcy v. Novo (La App) 188 So 490 (notes 6-8).

Boyle v. Beltzhoover, 119 W Va 626, 196 SE 503 (notes 6-10).

Am Jur cited in McCargo v Steele (DC Ark) 160 F Supp 7, affd (CA8) 260 F2d 753.

Johnson v Rolf, 208 Ark 554, 188 SW2d 137.

Toner v Hubbard (Fla App) 105 So2d 180.

Hardin v. Baynes, 198 Ga 683, 32 SE2d 384.

Hunt v. Picklesimer, 290 Ky 573, 162 SW2d 27.

Colstad v Levine, 243 Minn 279, 67 NW2d 648.

Nelson v. Hammett (Mo) 189 SW2d 238.

Frost v. Bachman 259 App Div 745, 18 NYS (2d) 702.

Severns v. Boylan, 75 Ohio App 15, 60 NE2d 521; Holtzman v. Hopwood Realty, 77 Ohio App 516, 65 NE2d 409, rehearing denied in (Ohio App) 68 NE2d 239.

RCL quoted in Re Pate, 232 Mo App 478, 119 SW(2d) 11.

p. 289, n. 6. Moore v. Rochester Weaver Min. Co. 42 Nev 164, 174 P 1017, 19 ALR 830.

p. 289, n. 9. York v. James, 62 Wyo 184 165 P2d 109, 162 ALR 730.

The burden is upon an attorney to show the fairness, adequacy, and equity of a transaction whereby he receives something of benefit contrary to the interests of his client, either by purchase from the client or by acquiring interests adverse to the client. Gaffney v. Harmon 405 Ill 273, 90 NE2d 785, 20 ALR2d 1273.

The general principle that when a transaction between an attorney and his client is attacked, the burden is cast upon the attorney to prove that it was not influenced by the relationship has been invoked or applied in cases involving attacks by clients on purchases of their property by their attorneys at tax or judicial sale Anno: 20 ALR2d 1306.

Page 289. Add, following note 10: Any such transaction is presumptively invalid on the ground of constructive fraud, and this presumption can be overcome only by the clearest and most satisfactory evidence.[10.1]

[10.1] Moore v. Rochester Weaver Min. Co. 42 Nev 164, 174 P 1017, 19 ALR 830.

§ 51. Gifts or Bequests.

Am Jur quoted in Stormon v Weiss (ND) 65 NW2d 475.

Am Jur cited in Re Brown, 165 Or 575, 108 P(2d) 775.

Nicholson v. Shockey, 192 Va 270, 64 SE2d 813.

Re Barnes Estate, 14 Wis 2d 643, 112 NW2d 142.

p. 290, n. 11. McDonald v. Hewlett, 102 Cal App2d 680, 228 P2d 83, 24 ALR2d 1281 (nontestamentary gift)

Anno: 24 ALR2d 1293 et seq. (nontestamentary gift).

Page 290. Add, following note 11: A presumption generally arises, where the relationship of attorney and client is shown, that with respect to gifts from the client to the attorney, the latter has exercised undue influence over the former.[11.5] In the American jurisdictions this inference is rebuttable,[11.51] being at most prima facie, but in some of the English decisions it has been said that there can be no rebuttal if it is shown that the relationship existed when the gift was made.[11.52] On the whole, however, it would seem that in the American jurisdictions, the attorney may, by the introduction of clear and convincing evidence, rebut the presumption of undue influence arising out of the confidential relationship of attorney and client, while in England the rule appears to be that the gift is absolutely void.[11.53]

While the opportunity of rebutting the presumption of undue influence by evidence to the contrary is afforded the attorney under the American rule, it should be noted that evidence that such undue influence was in fact exerted may be introduced by the party seeking to set aside the gift. Thus, it may be seen that the evidence which is introduced may either strengthen the presumption on the one hand, or weaken or dispel it, on the other. In this respect it would be well to note that certain general factors, consisting of evidence on the matter, have been considered by the courts as influencing their determination of the issue.[11.54] One such evidentiary factor, generally alluded to by the courts in cases in which it is to be found, is the effect which mental weakness on the part of the donor has on the issue of undue influence. As a general rule, where such mental weakness is shown, whether arising from old age or infirmity of the mind, and whether such weakness is such as to incapacitate the donor entirely or only partially, the presumption of undue influence is considerably strengthened. The result, of course, from the practical view, is that the donee would have to introduce evidence of a high nature to rebut the greatly strengthened presumption which thus arises.[11.55]

Another factor which often receives discussion is whether the donor has received disinterested and competent legal advice from a source equal to the donee in understanding of the subject matter of the transaction. As some courts have expressed it, the donor must show that the donee has received such advice as a condition precedent to the establishment of the validity of the gift.[11.56] Similarly, as it is contrary to human nature to impoverish oneself under circumstances of need or expected need, the view has been taken that where the gift is shown to be thus improvident its invalidity is substantially evident.[11.57] So too, as it is not consistent with fair dealing that a person conceal, or delay in revealing, an alleged gift, such a delay, extending until after the death of the donor or the removal of witnesses who otherwise might have been able to shed light upon the circumstance, has been held to show on the part of the donee a consciousness of guilt or a belief that the gift would not have been upheld had it been revealed sooner.[11.58]

On the other hand, the courts have refused to hold one donor guilty of laches in failing to promptly assail a gift, particularly where the relationship of attorney and client has continued for the entire or a substantial part of the time elapsing, since the presumption of undue influence is considered to have continued during such time.[11.59]

And it may be noted that in an English case it has been stated by way of dictum that a gift from client to attorney, otherwise invalid, may be rendered valid by a subsequent ratification by the client at a time when the relationship has terminated.[11.6]

[11.5] McDonald v. Hewlett, 102 Cal App2d 680, 228 P2d 83. 24 ALR2d 1281.

Armstrong v. Morrow, 166 Wis 1, 163 NW 179, Ann Cas 1918E 1156.

Anno: 24 ALR2d 1293 (nontestamentary gift).

This presumption, it has been pointed out, arises not from any actual wrongdoing between the parties, but as the result of the solicitude of the courts for the presumably weaker party and their determination that there shall be no overreaching by the stronger party. Anno: 24 ALR2d 1291.

[11.51] Anno: 24 ALR2d 1291 (nontestamentary gift).

[11.52] Anno: 24 ALR2d 1291 (nontestamentary gift).

Some qualifications of this strict English rule have been indicated, as, for example, that ratification of the gift at a later date, when the relationship has ended, may result in its being upheld, and in at least one case it has been stated that where considerations such as kind feelings existing between the client and the attorney are present, the gift may be upheld. Anno: 24 ALR2d 1291.

[11.53] Anno: 24 ALR2d 1301 (nontestamentary gift).

[11.54] Anno: 24 ALR2d 1291 (nontestamentary gift).

[11.55] Anno: 24 ALR2d 1291, 1296 (nontestamentary gift).

[11.56] Anno: 24 ALR2d 1291, 1298 (nontestamentary gift).

In Lloyd v. Coote & Ball (Eng) [1915] 1 KB 242, Ann Cas 1916E 434—Div Ct, the failure of an attorney to advise a client whom he induced to execute acknowledgments of debts barred by statute, to obtain independent legal advice, was held sufficient to void such acknowledgments.

[11.57] McDonald v. Hewlett, 102 Cal App2d 680, 228 P2d 83, 24 ALR2d 1281 (wherein a nontestamentary gift of over $50,000 by a client to his attorney was set aside as having been made under undue influence, and the court indicated that a factor which served to strengthen its conclusion was the fact that the gift had the effect of pauperizing the client at a time when he was very ill, unable to work, and under hospital care).

Anno: 24 ALR2d 1292, 1300 (nontestamentary gift).

[11.58] McDonald v. Hewlett, 102 Cal App2d 680, 228 P2d 83, 24 ALR2d 1281 (wherein an alleged gift from a hospitalized and apparently helpless client was not revealed by the attorney until after the former's death, the court declared that long delay in disclosing an alleged transfer, or the fact that there was no disclosure until after the death of the donor, were circumstances which rendered the testimony of the claimant subject to suspicion).

Anno: 24 ALR2d 1292, 1301.

[11.59] Armstrong v. Morrow, 166 Wis 1, 163 NW 179, Ann Cas 1918E 1156 (wherein an assignment of a mortgage was obtained by an attorney from an elderly client who was shown to have placed implicit trust and confidence in the attorney, who was an intimate friend and close associate for several years prior to and after the assignment, the contention that since the client had lived four years after the assignment he was guilty of laches in not moving more seasonably to set the assignment aside was held untenable, the court pointing out that so far as appeared from the record, the confidential relation and undue influence existing before the assignment continued thereafter to about the time that the client died, and that under these circumstances there was nothing to arouse him to action, and hence no delay amounting to laches).

Anno: 24 ALR2d 1292, 1301 (nontestamentary gift).
11.6 Anno: 24 ALR2d 1301 (nontestamentary gift).

§ 53. Effect of Laches upon Client's Right to Relief.

RCL cited in Wallner v. Fidelity & D. Co. 253 Wis 66, 33 NW2d 215, 10 ALR2d 745.

§ 54. Generally.

RCL cited in Roberts v. Roberts (Tex Civ App) 193 SW2d 707.
p. 291, n. 2. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965.
As to effect of stipulation against compromise without attorney's consent in contingent fee contract, see infra, § 163 (Supp.).

§ 55. Lobbying Contracts.

R. C. L. quoted in Hollister v. Ulvi, 199 Minn. 269, 271 N. W. 493.
RCL cited in Johnston v. J. R. Watkins Co. 195 Okla 341, 157 P2d 755.

§ 56. Contracts to Obstruct Justice or to Shield or Promote Crime.

Am Jur cited in Murrel v Bridges, 225 Ark 53, 279 SW2d 30.

§ 57. Contracts to Procure Liberation or Pardon of Convict.

p. 293, n. 4. Anno: 148 ALR 774.

§ 58. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Chandler v Howard (Mo) 312 SW2d 26; Demmel v Hammett, 360 Mo 737, 230 SW2d 686.
Am Jur cited in Dreka v. Whitehair, 150 Fla 617, 8 So(2d) 23.
p. 293, n. 6. Okfuskee County v. Hazelwood, 79 Okla 185, 192 P 217, 11 ALR 709.
Anno: 20 ALR2d 1280.
p. 294, n. 9. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1309–1319.

§ 59. Purchase of Outstanding Titles or Claims.

Am Jur cited in Demmel v. Hammett, 360 Mo 737, 230 SW2d 686.
Williams v. International Harvester Co. 172 Or 270, 141 P2d 837.

§ 60. Purchase at Tax or Judicial Sale.

p. 294, n. 15. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1285.
A purchase of land at a tax sale by the owner's attorney operates only as a payment of the taxes. Anno: 75 Am St Rep 233.
p. 294, n. 16. Gaffney v. Harmon, 405 Ill 273, 90 NE2d 785, 20 ALR2d 1273.
Bank of Mill Creek v. Elk Horn Coal Corp. 133 W Va 639, 57 SE2d 736 (receivers of corporation held not permitted to sell property to their attorneys).
Anno: 20 ALR2d 1284 et seq.
p. 295, n. 18. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1301–1304, 1307; 27 ALR2d 1312.
The confidential relationship existing between an attorney and client is sufficient to create a constructive trust in property purchased by the attorney under an oral agreement by him to bid in the property at a sheriff's sale for their mutual benefit. Anno: 14 ALR2d 1286.
p. 295, n. 19. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1301–1304.
p. 295, n. 20. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1301–1304.
It has been held that if attorneys for the wife in divorce proceedings brought by her improperly secure a decree dividing property belonging to her, between herself and her husband, and the evidence shows a case of implicit trust and confidence by her in her attorneys, her acquiescence in such decree cannot avail her attorneys to their advantage and to her detriment, where such attorneys subsequently purchased at an execution sale of the interest improvidently awarded to the husband under the decree in the divorce proceedings; as to them she is not estopped from claiming her property. Bucher v. Hohl, 199 Mo 320, 97 SW 922, 116 Am St Rep 492.

Page 295. Add, following note 20: Where counsel, however, is merely consulted as to the state of the title to land which is subsequently sold, he is not prohibited from becoming the purchaser thereof, where he has given the correct advice concerning the liens on the property.[20.1] It has also been held that an attorney at law, like others usually disqualified to purchase at judicial sales, may do so if necessary for the protection of his own interests,[20.2] provided that he has first properly obtained an order of court granting permission to purchase.[20.3]

The usual mode of seeking relief from a purchase by an attorney is by motion or suit to set aside the sale. Either, if promptly instituted, is likely to prove successful unless the attorney affirmatively shows that his action was entirely proper and that no advantage was taken of the party complaining. Sometimes the equity may be worked out by merely requiring the attorney to account with his client for the profits of the property purchased and afterwards disposed of.[20.4]

20.1 Kauder v. Lautman, 114 NJ Eq 197, 168 A 660, citing RCL, affirmed in 116 NJ Eq 145, 172 A 565.
Anno: 21 Ann Cas 275 et seq.; 20 ALR2d 1312.
20.2 Anno: 136 Am St Rep 816; 20 ALR2d 1299, 1300.
20.3 Anno: 21 Ann Cas 275; 20 ALR2d 1299, 1300.
20.4 Anno: 136 Am St Rep 816; 20 ALR2d 1307–1309.

So, too, miscellaneous equitable remedies, such as a suit to remove a cloud upon title or to cancel deeds have been successfully employed.[20.41] Probably the remedy or relief most frequently sought is by way of an action or suit to impress a constructive trust upon the property invalidly purchased by the attorney.[20.42]

Where the sale to the attorney of the client's property at judicial or tax sale is invalidated, in so far as the attorney is concerned, he is entitled to reimbursement for the purchase money paid by him, as well as for taxes and other liens discharged by him while in possession of the property, plus amounts expended for useful improvements, such allowances to be diminished by rents and profits received by him while in possession of the property.[20.44]

20.41 Bucher v. Hohl, 199 Mo 320, 97 SW 922 116 Am St Rep 492.
Anno: 20 ALR3d 1306–1309.
20.42 Gaffney v. Harmon, 405 Ill 273, 90 NE 2d 785, 20 ALR2d 1273.
Anno: 20 ALR2d 1306–1308.
20.44 Anno: 20 ALR2d 1304–1306.
An attorney who holds title to realty, in which his client formerly held a life estate, by redemption from an execution sale and by assignment of a tax title and which is declared by the court to be held in trust for the client, has been held not thereby deprived of the right to reimbursement for his expenditures and a reasonable compensation for his services upon an accounting. Gaffney v. Harmon, 405 Ill 273, 90 NE2d 785, 20 ALR2d 1273.

§ 61. Effect of Prior Termination of Relation.

p. 295, n. 1. 20 ALR2d 1309 et seq.
There is no objection to the attorney's becoming the purchaser of property at a judicial sale in which his former client is interested, where there is no evidence of undue steps having been taken by him to the prejudice of his former client, or of his having used for his own advantage information acquired in his professional employment. Kauder v. Lautman, 114 NJ Eq 197, 168 A 660, citing RCL, affirmed in 116 NJ Eq 145, 172 A 565.
Anno: 21 Ann Cas 277 et seq.

p. 295, n. 3. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1309 et seq.

p. 295, n. 4. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1310.

It has been held that an attorney who enters into an agreement with his client, under which the client executes a note for sums due the attorney and for additional fees with the understanding that judgment shall be taken thereon by the attorney who as judgment creditor shall redeem realty of the client formerly sold under execution, and convey the property to the client upon reimbursement, may not profit from the redemption by terminating the attorney-client relationship. Gaffney v. Harmon, 405 Ill 273, 90 NE2d 785, 20 ALR2d 1273.

§ 62. Effect of Good Faith.

Am Jur quoted in Demmel v. Hammett, 360 Mo 737, 230 SW2d 686.

p. 295, n. 6. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1296, 1297.

It has been held that an executor or trustee could not, against the dissent of the cestui que trust, make a valid sale of property of the estate to the attorney for the executor, notwithstanding the transaction was conducted in good faith and the purchase price was reasonably adequate. The court observed that the incapacity of the attorney to become a purchaser of the assets of the estate without the full knowledge and consent of all parties in interest rests upon the ground of public policy, and that the inexorable character of the rule "is grounded in sound morals, and is reflected in the supplicating words of the Lord's Prayer, 'Lead us not into temptation.'" Anno: 20 ALR2d 1297.

p. 296, n. 7. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1297-1299.

However, receivers were held not permitted to make a sale of corporate property to their attorneys who paid adequate consideration in good faith where the identity of the purchasers was concealed from the stockholders and from the court on the authority of which the receivers acted. Bank of Mill Creek v. Elk Horn Coal Corp. 133 W Va 639, 57 SE2d 736.

p. 296, n. 8. Anno: 20ALR2d 1293-1296.

Dealings between an attorney and his client come within the general principle applied in Virginia to trustees, under which it has been held not enough, where the trustee sells trust property to himself with the consent of the beneficiary, that the beneficiary had full knowledge of the facts and of his legal rights, and that his consent was not improperly induced by the trustee, but it is also essential that the price be fair and reasonable. Littleton v. Kincaid (CA4th) 179 F2d 848, 27 ALR2d 572, cert den 340 US 809, 95 L ed 595, 71 S Ct 36, 38.

§ 63. Effect of Laches upon Right to Relief.

Am Jur cited in Demmel v. Hammett, 360 Mo 737, 230 SW2d 686.

p. 296, n. 9. Anno: 20 ALR2d 1301, 1302.

p. 296, n. 10. Bucher v. Hohl, 199 Mo 320, 97 SW 922, 116 Am St Rep 492.

Anno: 20 ALR2d 1302-1304.

It has been held that a suit by a client to have his former realty, which was acquired by his attorney by redemption from an execution sale and by purchase of a tax title, declared to be held in trust is not barred by laches where, since acquisition of the property by the attorney, the rents have been adequate to reimburse the attorney for his services and money expended, including tax obligations, and no injury to the attorney other than loss of expected profits of the transaction would result. Gaffney v. Harmon, 405 Ill 273, 90 NE2d 785, 20 ALR2d 1273.

§ 64. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Hoffman v. Hogan, 345 Mo 903, 137 SW(2d) 441.

Zimmer v. Gudmundsen, 142 Neb 260, 5 NW (2d) 707.

W. C. Turnbow Petroleum Corp. v. Fulton (Tex Civ App) 199 SW2d 263.

Am Jur cited in Estate of Rorem, 245 Iowa 1125, 66 NW2d 292, 47 ALR2d 1089.

Wilson v Wahl, 182 Kan 532, 322 P2d 804; State v Leigh, 178 Kan 549, 289 P2d 774.

Olitkowski v St. Casimir's Sav. & L. Asso. 302 Mich 303, 4 NW2d 664.

Sluggett v. Phillips (Mo App) 178 SW2d 458; Moffett Bros. Partnership Estate v. Moffett. 345 Mo 741, 137 SW(2d) 507

W. C. Turnbow Petroleum Corp. v. Fulton (Tex Civ App) 199 SW2d 263.

p. 296. n 11. Re Estate of Rorem, 245 Iowa 1125, 66 NW2d 292, 47 ALR2d 1089.

Sedlak v Duda, 144 Neb 567, 13 NW2d 892, 154 ALR 490.

Gottwals v. Rencher, 60 Nev 35, 98 P2d 481, 126 ALR 1262.

Anno: 126 ALR 1271.

Sound pubic policy requires that an attorney not represent conflicting interests. Gardine v. Cottey, 360 Mo 681, 230 SW2d 731, 18 ALR2d 1100.

Where the owner of an automobile involved in an accident claimed the driver was using it without permission there was a conflict of interest between the insurer of the owner and the driver making the representation of both by the same attorneys improper and justifying a new trial. Hammett v. McIntyre, 114 Cal App2d 148, 249 P2d 885.

p. 296, n. 12. Sedlak v. Duda, 144 Neb 567, 13 NW2d 892, 154 ALR 490.

p. 296, n. 13. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Hammett v McIntyre, 114 Cal App2d 148, 249 P2d 885.

King Constr. Co. v. Mary Helen Coal Corp. 194 Ky 435, 239 SW 799, citing RCL.

Sedlak v. Duda, 144 Neb 567, 13 NW2d 892, 154 ALR 490

Anno: 52 ALR2d 1254.

p. 297, n. 15. It has been held that where an insurer's attorney has reason to believe that the discharge of his duties to his client, the insured, will conflict with his duties to his employer, the insurer, it becomes incumbent upon him to terminate his relationship with the client. Allstate Ins. Co. v Keller, 17 Ill App 2d 44, 149 NE2d 482, 70 ALR2d 1190.

Page 297. Add, following note 16: It has been held that where in the course of the trial of an action against one insured by an automobile liability policy obligating the insurer to defend claims against the insured it becomes apparent that the claim in suit is not within the coverage of the policy, it would be professional misconduct for attorneys employed by the insurer to continue to represent the insured, by reason of the conflict of interest between the insurer and the insured.[16.5]

It is the duty of attorneys, hired by an automobile liability insurer to defend the insured, upon learning of the possible conflict of interests between the insurer and insured, to immediately notify the insured of this fact.[16.51]

[16.5] Helm v. Inter-Insurance Exchange, 354 Mo 935 192 SW2d 417 167 ALR 238

[16.51] Allstate Ins. Co. v Keller, 17 Ill App 2d 44, 149 NE2d 482, 70 ALR2d 1190.

§ 65. Where Interests Are Not Adverse or Both Clients Consent.

Am Jur quoted in Hoffman v. Hogan, 345 Mo 903, 137 SW(2d) 441.

Am Jur cited in McClendon v. Eubanks, 249 Ala 170, 30 So2d 261

Wilson v Wahl, 182 Kan 532, 322 P2d 804.

Rippon v Mercantile Safe Deposit & Trust Co. 213 Md 215, 131 A2d 695.

Moseley v. Deans, 222 NC 731, 24 SE2d 630.

p. 297, n. 17. Shaw v Bill, 95 US 10, 24 L ed 333, Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Sedlak v Duda, 144 Neb 567, 13 NW2d 892, 154 ALR 490

Anno: 47 ALR2d 1104-1107 (propriety of representation of heir or other beneficiary by attorney for executor or administrator in controversy with other heirs or beneficiaries); 52 ALR2d 1262-1268.

Whether an attorney has violated his professional duty by changing sides depends upon the facts of the particular case, one of which is the likelihood that his former client has sustained injury. Gottwals v. Rencher, 60 Nev 35, 98 P(2d) 481, 126 ALR 1262.

Whether an executor may act for one of the heirs in a controversy with other heirs involving property of the estate has been held to depend upon the circumstances of the particular case, including the fact that the other heirs did not consider him their attorney but were at all times represented by other attorneys of their own choice. Re Estate of Rorem, 245 Iowa 1125, 66 NW2d 292, 47 ALR2d 1089. Anno: 47 ALR2d 1106.

Under Canon 6 of the Canons of Professional Ethics of the American Bar Association, adopted as rules of court by various courts, imposing the professional obligation not to accept employment in matters affecting any interest of a former client as to which confidence has been reposed, it has been held to be the work done for the client and the attorney's access to the confidential information of the client that is crucial in determining applicability of the canon, and it is immaterial that the attorney acquired such information while a mere clerk in the employ of another, rather than as an associate counsel. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA 2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Page 297. Add, following note 17: The authorities seem in agreement that the privilege of objecting to an attorney's representing a party because he previously represented the party's adversary may be waived by the latter, and that effect will be given to such waiver where all the proper elements of waiver are present.[17.1]

17.1 Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Gottwals v Rencher, 60 Nev 35, 98 P2d 481, 126 ALR 1262.

Anno: 126 ALR 1273; 52 ALR2d 1268-1276.

p. 297, n. 18.

Even though husband and wife consent to be represented by the same attorney in their divorce and in carrying out a property settlement, a fraud is perpetrated upon the wife where the attorney induces her to sign a deed carrying out the settlement without disclosing to her the facts showing a conflict of interest and also his own and his father-in-law's interest in the matter. Gardine v. Cottey, 360 Mo 681, 230 SW2d 731, 18 ALR2d 1100.

It has been held that a former client's consent to an attorney to accept employment from another in a matter adversely affecting an interest of the former client as to which confidence has been reposed, is not evidenced by an ambiguous statement of the former client's vice president with respect to the former attorney's intention to restrict his representation of opposing clients to cases involving differences of time and locale than those involved in the cases in which he had access to the former client's confidential material. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

§ 66. Effect of Former Retainer.

Am Jur quoted in Porter v. Huber (DC) 68 F Supp 132.

Hoffman v. Hogan, 345 Mo 903, 137 SW2d 441.

Am Jur cited in Wilson v Wahl, 182 Kan 532, 322 P2d 804; State v Leigh, 178 Kan 549, 289 P2d 774.

State v Burns (Mo) 322 SW2d 736.

Butler Bros. Development Co. v Butler, 111 Mont 329, 108 P2d 1041.

Adams v. Adams, 156 Neb 778, 58 NW2d 172.

p. 297, n. 20. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Gottwals v Rencher, 60 Nev 47, 98 P2d 481, 126 ALR 1262.

Re Themelis, 117 Vt 19, 83 A2d 507.

Anno: 52 ALR2d 1250 et seq.

p. 297, n. 1. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Sedlak v Duda, 144 Neb 567, 13 NW2d 892, 154 ALR 490.

Gottwals v Rencher, 60 Nev 47, 98 P2d 481, 126 ALR 1262.

Re Themelis, 117 Vt 19, 83 A2d 507. (Holding also that knowledge of prior employment and consent to adverse employment by the parties might justify an attorney in matters of private interest, but not in a matter of divorce or legal separation where other interests, such as those of the children, are involved.)

Anno: 126 ALR 1271; 52 ALR2d 1247-1250.

The fact that an attorney's relationship to a former client arose merely because he was a law clerk with a firm which represented the client has been held not to take the attorney out of the rule barring him from later representing interests adverse to such client, since it is the work done for the client and the access to confidential information secured from the client which is crucial in determining the attorney's obligation. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Disqualification of an attorney from representing the plaintiff in a civil action on the ground of his former representation of the defendants in matters as to which confidence was reposed has been held not to be precluded by the fact that the information of adverse impact thus received has not yet been used or may never be so used. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA 2d NY) 216 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

p. 298. n. 2. Anno: 52 ALR2d 1253.

Page 298. Add following note 2: On the other hand, the view has been taken that, absent the transmission of confidential information from a client to an attorney, the attorney is not thereafter disqualified from representing an interest adverse to that of the client.[2.1]

2.1 Anno: 52 ALR2d 1254.

p. 298. n. 3. Re Themelis, 117 Vt 19, 83 A2d 507.

Anno: 126 ALR 1274; 52 ALR2d 1279 et seq.

On evidence that an attorney representing the plaintiff in an action against the government for amounts allegedly due plaintiff for services performed pursuant to a series of contracts with the Veterans' Administration, had been employed as an attorney by the Veterans' Administration, serving in the office which handled the very contracts involved in the action against the government, and, in addition, had been active in behalf of the government in transactions involving those contracts, the court has held that disqualification of the attorney from representing the plaintiff in the action against the government was warranted. Anno: 52 ALR2d 1281.

Page 298. Add following note 3: In at least one case the view has been taken that, where an attorney has been employed by one having an interest adverse to the interest of the attorney's former client, the subsequent client may be enjoined from using confidential information obtained by the attorney in his former employment.[3.5] A judgment in favor of the later client, obtained in the litigation in which the later client was represented by the attorney, will be reversed if the trial court's failure to restrain the attorney amounts to a prejudicial error.[3.51] And in at least one instance an attorney's conduct has been held to bar reversal of a judgment against the later client.[3.52]

3.5 Anno: 52 ALR2d 1291.

3.51 Anno: 52 ALR2d 1286-1289.

3.52 Sedlak v Duda, 144 Neb 567, 113 NW2d 892, 154 ALR 490.

Anno: 52 ALR2d 1292.

p. 298, n. 4. Anno: 52 ALR2d 1249.

Page 298. Add, following note 5: And conversely, where an attorney acted as legal advisor for a grand jury in an investigation of matters some of which led to a proceeding to remove a district attorney, he cannot defend the district attorney in that proceeding.[5.5]

[5.5] Hawkins v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Ct. 67 Nev 248, 216 P2d 601.

p. 298, n. 6. Anno: 126 ALR 1273.

Page 298. Add at end of section: No bar exists where the evidence fails to establish that a true attorney-client relationship existed between the attorney and one claiming to have been a former client.[7.5]

[7.5] Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 217 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

Lester v Gay, 217 Ala 585, 117 So 211, 59 ALR 1561.

Anno: 52 ALR2d 1256–1262.

§ 67. Power to Bind Client as Agent.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1848–1:1855; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1207.

Am Jur cited in Laird v Air Carrier Engine Service, Inc. (CA5 Fla) 263 F2d 948.

Atlantic Co. v Farris, 62 Ga App 212, 8 SE2d 665; Auld v Colonial Stores, 76 Ga App 329, 45 SE2d 827 (dissent op).

Jaquith v Stanger, 79 Idaho 49, 310 P2d 805.

p. 298, n. 12.

See Taylor v. Parkview Memorial Asso. 317 Mich 164, 26 NW2d 748, 171 ALR 507, holding that in an action by an executor to foreclose a land contract entered into by the plaintiff's testator as vendor where the defendant relied upon a notice of forfeiture of the contract given by the executor's attorney, testimony of the attorney offered to show limitations on his authority as attorney for the executor is properly excluded as not binding on the defendant where such alleged limitations were not known to him and not made in his presence.

Page 298. Add, following note 13: It has been held that while an attorney may be vested with express authority to indorse negotiable paper for and on behalf of his client, his mere rightful possession of a negotiable instrument belonging to the client does not imply such authority; that an attorney at law has no implied authority to indorse the name of his client to a negotiable instrument merely because of the existence of the relationship of attorney and client or because that instrument happens to be connected in some manner with the litigation which the attorney is handling for the client.[13.5]

[13.5] Security Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 195 Okla 107, 155 P2d 249, 169 ALR 790.

§ 68. Authority in Litigation and in Special Employment Distinguished.

Am Jur cited in Laird v Air Carrier Engine Service, Inc. (CA5 Fla) 263 F2d 948.

p. 299, n. 14. Anno: 37 ALR2d 493.

p. 299, n. 16. In the absence of express authority for more general representation an attorney's power of representation has been held confined to matters which have been entrusted to him. Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. (CA2d NY) 217 F2d 920, 52 ALR2d 1231.

§ 69. Collection of Client's Claim.

Am Jur quoted in John Bean Mfg. Co. v. Citizens Bank, 60 Ga App 615, 4 SE(2d) 924.

McCoy v. Barclay, 250 App Div 682, 295 NYS 130 (n. 18).

Am Jur cited in Security Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 195 Okla 107, 155 P2d 249.

RCL cited in Dacus v. Maryland Casualty Co. 40 N. M. 110, 55 P. (2d) 663.

p. 299, n. 1. Anno: 30 ALR2d 949.

p. 300, n. 6. Helgeson v. Farmers Ins. Exchange, 116 Cal App2d Supp 925, 255 P2d 484 (wherein the bank was liable to the client for cashing a check payable to him and the attorney, the check having been indorsed by the attorney, who then absconded with the funds).

Crahe v. Mercantile Trust & Sav. Bank, 295 Ill 375, 129 NE 120, 12 ALR 92.

Anno: 12 ALR 121, 124; 94 ALR 561–564; 37 ALR2d 491–493.

Where an attorney could not contact a client who was in military service at the time, his act in indorsing a draft made payable to his client and purporting to be a release of all claims arising out of an accident in which the client was injured, and in placing such proceeds to the credit of the client, has been held not such an authorized indorsement as to render it the act of the client, since the express authority of the attorney to so act was not shown, nor could implied authority arise from the mere relation of attorney and client. Sainsbury v. Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines Inc. (CA4th Md) 183 F2d 548, 21 ALR2d 266.

p. 300, n. 7. Crahe v. Mercantile Trust & Sav. Bank, 295 Ill 375, 129 NE 120, 12 ALR 92.

Anno: 12 ALR 121, 124; 94 ALR 561–564; 37 ALR2d 493.

p. 300, n. 8. Anno: 30 ALR2d 947–949.

Page 300. Add, at end of section: On the other hand, the view has been taken that since an attorney employed to collect a claim on behalf of his client has authority to receive cash in settlement of the claim, the authority to indorse and thus convert the commercial paper into cash in settlement of the claim is implied.[12.5] Where there is necessity for haste in collecting the amount represented by a check forwarded to an attorney, it appears that an attorney has the implied power to indorse the check and collect the amount in order to forestall later uncollectibility.[12.51] Where an attorney has customarily indorsed checks made payable to his client, to the knowledge of the bank permitting him to indorse and transfer such commercial paper, an apparent authority has been held to arise in favor of the bank.[12.52]

[12.5] Security Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 195 Okla 107, 155 P2d 249, 169 ALR 790.

Anno: 37 ALR2d 494–496.

[12.51] Anno: 37 ALR2d 496.

[12.52] Anno: 37 ALR2d 497.

§ 70. Surrender or Waiver of Client's Rights.

Am Jur quoted in Ex parte Industrial Finance & Thrift Co. 255 Ala 464, 51 So2d 894.

McCombs v McCombs, 227 Ark 1, 295 SW2d 774.

Am Jur cited in Bommarito v. Southern Canning Co. (CA8th Mo) 208 F2d 56; Sainsbury v. Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines (CA4th Md) 183 F2d 548, 21 ALR2d 266.

Couch v Landers (Mo) 316 SW2d 588.

McKeague v Freitas, 40 Hawaii 108.

Perkins v Public Serv. Co. 93 NH 459, 45 A2d 210.

Robinson v State (ND) 63 NW2d 521.

p. 300, n. 13 Anno: 30 ALR2d 947.

§ 71. Ratification of, or Estoppel to Deny, Unauthorized Acts.

Re Lacivita (CA3 NJ) 255 F2d 365.

Bergum v Palmborg, 239 Minn 569, 58 NW2d 722.

Moe v. Zitek, 75 ND 222, 27 NW2d 10.

p. 301, n. 19.

It has been held that a client ratifies his attorney's act if he does not repudiate it promptly upon receiving knowledge that the attorney has exceeded his authority. Yarnall v. Yorkshire Worsted Mills, 370 Pa 93, 87 A2d 192, 30 ALR 2d 939.

p. 301, n. 20. Yarnall v. Yorkshire Worsted Mills, 370 Pa 93, 87 A2d 192, 30 ALR2d 939.

§ 72. Delegation of Authority.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1856–1:1858.

§ 73. — Employment of Assistant or Associate Counsel.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1226.

Am Jur cited in Wells, F. & Co. v. San Francisco, 25 Cal2d 37, 152 P2d 625.

Skeen v. Peterson, 113 Utah 483, 196 P2d 708.

§ 74. Imputation of Attorney's Knowledge to Client.

Am Jur quoted in Solomon v. First Nat. L. Ins. Co. (La App) 5 So(2d) 589.

Dumas v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. 94 NH 484, 56 A2d 57.

Wauwatosa Realty Co. v Bishop, 6 Wis2d 230, 94 NW2d 562.

Am Jur cited in Fidelity & C. Co. v. Beeland Bros. Mercantile Co. 242 Ala 591, 7 So (2d) 265.

Freeman v Superior Court, 44 Cal2d 533, 282 P2d 857.

Doner v. Honstead, 61 Idaho 669, 106 P(2d) 868.

Raible v. Raydel, 162 Ohio St 25, 120 NE2d 425.

Phillips v Ball (Okla) 358 P2d 193.

Weiss Apparel, Inc. v. Elks Home Asso. 64 Pa D & C 61.

RCL cited in Solomon v. First Nat. L. Ins. Co. (La App) 5 So(2d) 589.

Rossey v. Mayburg Chemical Co. 58 Pa D & C 532.

p. 302, n. 13. Link v Wabash R. Co. 370 US 626, 8 L ed 2d 734, 82 S Ct 1386.

Re Rule, 25 Cal 2d 1, 152 P2d 1003, 155 ALR 1319.

Katz v. Kowalsky, 296 Mich 164, 295 NW 600, 134 ALR 179

It has been held that an attorney who enters his appearance of record in any litigation is the agent of the party as long as such attorney remains the existing attorney of record, and the party is bound by such attorney's knowledge and notice of the proceedings in that case so long as it is pending. State ex rel. Brubaker v Pritchard, 236 Ind 222, 138 NE2d 233, 60 ALR2d 1239.

§ 75. Knowledge Acquired in Another Transaction or Outside Employment.

Am Jur cited in Phillips v Ball (Okla) 358 P2d 193.

Armstrong v May, 33 Wash 2d 112, 204 P2d 510.

§ 76. Knowledge Acquired in Employment of Another Client.

Am Jur cited in Reeg v West, 160 Cal App 2d 617, 325 P2d 164.

RCL cited in Silbaugh v. Guardian Bldg. & L. Asso. 164 Or 286, 97 P(2d) 943, 99 P(2d) 1017, 101 P(2d) 420.

§ 78. Imputation of Attorney's Negligence to Client.

Am Jur quoted in Beth v. Harris, 208 Ark 903, 188 SW2d 119.

Am Jur cited in Longyear v Edwards, 217 Or 314, 342 P2d 762; Bowles v Creason, 159 Or 129, 78 P2d 324 (n. 5).

Real Estate Com. v McLemore, 202 Tenn 540, 306 SW2d 683.

Texas Employers Ins. Asso. v Wermske, — Tex —, 349 SW2d 90.

RCL cited in Mosher v. Mutual Home & Sav. Asso 35 Ohio L Abs 445, 41 NE(2d) 871.

p. 306, n. 10. Anno: 74 ALR2d 1390.

Page 306. Add new paragraph at end of section: It has been held that the clients of an attorney are not liable for damages alleged to have been caused by the attorney's assault on a third party while the third party and the attorney were engaged in taking depositions, for the taking of which the attorney had been employed.[11.5] [11.5] Pyle v. Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. (CA5th Miss) 179 F2d 677.

§ 79. Generally.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1859–1:1862; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1171–2:1175, 2:1204; 10 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 10:1154.

Am Jur cited in Gatewood v. Board of Comrs. 119 Ind App 297, 86 NE2d 298.

Cooper v. Little, 29 Tenn App 685, 201 SW2d 210.

§ 80. Presumption of Authority; Burden of Proving Want of Authority.

Am Jur quoted in Sachs v. Title Ins. & T. Co. 305 Ky 153, 202 SW2d 384.

Am Jur cited in Bowles v. American Brewery (CCA 4th) 146 F2d 842.

Gatewood v. Board of Comrs. 119 Ind App 297 86 NE2d 298.

State ex rel. Coleman v. District Ct. 120 Mont 372, 186 P2d 91; Rieckhoff v. Woodhull, 106 Mont 22, 75 P2d 56 (n. 19).

Harrington v. Buchanan, 222 NC 698, 24 SE 2d 534.

Moe v. Zitek, 75 ND 222, 27 NW2d 10.

Minnesota v. Karp, 84 Ohio App 51, 84 NE2d 76.

Bowles v. Creason, 159 Or 129, 78 P2d 324 (n 19).

RCL quoted in Dacus v. Maryland Casualty Co. 40 NM 110, 55 P2d 663.

RCL cited in Friedman v. Booth Fisheries Corp. 28 Del Ch 211, 39 A2d 761.

§ 81. Sufficiency of Proof of Want of Authority.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1171-2:1175.

Am Jur cited in Campbell v Hot Springs, 232 Ark 878, 341 SW2d 225.

Mullins v La Bahn, 244 Wis 76, 11 NW2d 519

§ 82. Challenging Authority to Appear.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1171-2:1174.

Am Jur cited in Waltzinger v Birsner, 212 Md 107, 128 A2d 617.

Mitchell v McDonald, 114 Mont 292, 136 P2d 536.

§ 83. Effect of Unauthorized Appearance.

Am Jur cited in Zorn v. Lowery, 236 Ala 62, 181 So 249 (notes 17–20); A.B.C. Truck Lines v. Kenemer, 247 Ala 543, 25 So2d 511.

Way v. Turner 80 Ga App 814, 57 SE2d 439

State ex rel. Durham v Marion Circuit Court, 240 Ind 132, 162 NE2d 505.

§ 84. Withdrawal or Striking Out of Appearance.

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. Durham v Marion Circuit Court, 240 Ind 132, 162 NE2d 505.

§ 85. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in State ex rel. Shannon v Sterling, 248 Minn 266, 80 NW2d 13.

State Highway Com. v Fortune, 77 SD 302, 91 NW2d 675.

Am Jur cited in England v Doyle (CA9 Cal) 281 F2d 304; Laird v Air Carrier Engine Service, Inc. (CA5 Fla) 263 F2d 948.

Schleiger v Schleiger, 137 Colo 279, 324 P2d 370.

State ex rel. Durham v Marion Circuit Court, 240 Ind 132, 162 NE2d 505.

Timmons v Holmes, 249 Iowa 888, 89 NW2d 371.

Couch v Landers (Mo) 316 SW2d 588.

Noska v Mills (Tex Civ App) 141 SW2d 429.

RCL quoted in Zurich General Acci. & Liability Ins. Co. v. Kinsler, 12 Cal2d 98, 81 P2d 913.

RCL cited in Rains v. Alaska Consol. Oil Fields, 8 Alaska 256

p. 311, n. 4. Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v Indemnity Ins. Co. (CA10 Colo) 260 F2d 361, 69 ALR2d 684.

p. 312, n. 6.

See State ex rel. Land Office Comrs. v. Jones, 198 Okla 187, 176 P2d 992, 174 ALR 1.

Page 312. Add, following note 13: An attorney employed by the next friend of a minor to conduct litigation for the minor may exercise all the powers and duties of an attorney of record in any litigation.[13.1]

While a court has power to allow an attorney not employed by defendants in a criminal case to appear as their "next friend" under appropriate circumstances such as incapacity or isolation from counsel, such an attorney has no standing to litigate the case where he is a stranger to the defendants, his intervention is unauthorized by them and originally opposed by their counsel, it does not appear that he would be a helpful or chosen champion, and the defendants had able and zealous counsel of their own choice.[13.5]

The fact that a judicial proceeding was instituted by an attorney while employed under a general or periodic retainer contract does not entitle him to continue to act therein for the client after his discharge.[13.52]

[13.1] Garner v. Schilling Co. 128 Fla 353, 174 So 837, 111 ALR 682.

[13.5] Rosenberg v. United States, 346 US 273, 97 L ed 1607, 73 S Ct 1152.

[13.52] Anno: 43 ALR2d 681.

§ 86. Exclusiveness of Control.

Am Jur cited in Timmons v Holmes, 249 Iowa 888, 89 NW2d 371.

§ 87. Commencement of Suit or Proceedings by or against Client.

Am Jur quoted in Kupfer v Board of Zoning Appeals, 130 Ind App 55, 162 NE2d 110.

Am Jur cited in Bardahl Mfg. Corp. v District Court of County of Jefferson, — Colo —, 372 P2d 447.

p. 313, n. 9.

A person participates in an arrest to the extent of giving voluntary aid and assistance sufficient to support a malicious prosecution action against him where he is present in his attorney's office when a party is arrested therein by a police officer and thereafter accompanies the attorney to a magistrate's office to which the arrested party is taken by the police officer, and there testifies against such party before the magistrate. Anno: 120 ALR 1325.

It has been held that the request of the attorney was, under the circumstances, the request of the client, and that the latter was liable for false imprisonment where the client, having consulted his attorney in relation to a charge of malicious trespass, went with the attorney to an office of a justice of the peace, where the client signed and swore to a complaint, and the attorney, in the client's presence and without protest from him, asked the justice to issue a warrant under the complaint for plaintiff's arrest, whereupon the justice issued a warrant before the filing of an information by the prosecuting attorney. Anno: 120 ALR 1325.

One for whose benefit a ca. sa. was issued, at the instance of his counsel, and who approved of the arrest, has been held properly liable for damages for a false imprisonment, although he may not have directed the ca. sa. Anno: 120 ALR 1325

In a suit for malicious prosecution based upon a previous civil action brought against plaintiff in the name of defendant as next friend for a minor, on a claim for work and labor, wherein it appeared that the minor's attorney requested defendant if he would allow his name to be used as next friend stating it would not subject him to any trouble or cost and that that was the only way minors could collect their claims legally, it was declared that the evidence of the circumstances under which defendant allowed his name to be used completely negatived any malicious intent on his part. Anno: 120 ALR 1325.

§ 89. Attachment and Arrest.

Houser v Frank, 186 Kan 455, 350 P2d 801.

§ 90. Writs, Notices, Pleadings, and Technical Formalities.

Am Jur quoted in Bank For Savings & Trusts v Towe, 231 SC 268, 98 SE2d 539.

Am Jur cited in Kelley v. Abram (DC) 20 F Supp 229 (n 14)

p. 314, n. 14. It has been held that an attorney signing a notice sent in behalf of his client is acting as an agent of the client, and his act is the act of the client. Bulldog Concrete Forms Sales Corp. v Taylor (CA7th Ind) 195 F2d 417, 49 ALR2d 1.

Page 314. Add, following note 14: Service of process respecting active actions may be made upon attorneys of record in litigation that has not been finally concluded.[14.5] [14.5] Pike v. Pike, 24 Wash2d 735, 167 P2d 401, 163 ALR 1314.

Service upon the attorney of record of an appellant in a divorce action of an order to show cause why she should not comply with the trial court's order respecting the custody of the children, is sufficient. Pike v. Pike, 24 Wash2d 735, 167 P2d 401, 163 ALR 1314.

§ 91. Stipulations and Agreements.

Am Jur quoted in Schleiger v Schleiger, 137 Colo 279, 324 P2d 370; Middleton v Stavely, 124 Colo 88, 235 P2d 596.

Am Jur cited in Acme Poultry Corp. v. United States (CCA4th) 146 F2d 738, writ of certiorari denied in 324 US 860, 89 L ed 1417, 65 S Ct 865; Eury v. Huff (CCA4th) 141 F2d 554.

Couch v Landers (Mo) 316 SW2d 588.

Rieckhoff v. Woodhull, 106 Mont 22, 75 P2d 56 (n 18)

Gottwals v. Rencher, 60 Nev 35, 98 P2d 481, 126 ALR 1262.

Mueller v Eucenham, 33 NJ Super 156, 109 A2d 462; State v Mulvaney, 21 NJ Super 457, 91 A2d 359; State v Graham, 19 NJ Super 70, 88 A2d 5.

State v. Barley, 240 NC 253, 81 SE2d 772.

Union Storage & Transfer Co. v Smith, 79 ND 605, 58 NW2d 782.

RCL cited in Grocery & Food Warehousemen Local Union v. Kroger Co. 364 Pa 195, 70 A2d 218.

Page 314. Add, following note 6: It has been held that an attorney may bind his client by an agreement not to proceed in a pending suit without first notifying counsel for the opposing party.[6.5]

[6.5] State ex rel. Land Office Comrs. v. Jones, 198 Okla 187, 176 P2d 992, 174 ALR 1.

p. 314, n. 18. Cahaley v. Cahaley, 216 Minn 175, 12 NW2d 182, 157 ALR 1.

Gottwals v. Rencher, 60 Nev 35, 98 P2d 481, 126 ALR 1262.

An attorney employed to conduct litigation may, without the knowledge of his client, bind the client by a stipulation waiving a jury trial. Shores Co. v. Iowa Chemical Co. 222 Iowa 347, 268 NW 581, 106 ALR 198.

§ 92. — Limitations on Power.

Am Jur cited in United States ex rel. Goldsby v Harpole (CA5 Miss) 263 F2d 71, cert den 361 US 838, 4 L ed 2d 78, 80 S Ct 58.

De Long v Owsley, 308 Ky 128, 213 SW2d 806.

Couch v Landers (Mo) 316 SW2d 588.

Rieckhoff v. Woodhull 106 Mont 22, 75 P2d 56 (n 10) (dissent op).

State v. Barley, 240 NC 253, 81 SE2d 772.

RCL quoted in Sudekum v. Fasnacht, 236 Mo App 455, 157 SW2d 264.

RCL cited in World F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Tapp, 286 Ky 650, 151 SW2d 428.

Page 315. Add, following note 12: An attorney, in making an agreement with another attorney on a matter affecting procedure only, must act in the utmost good faith to the end that all the substantive rights of his client are fully protected, and a party should not be made to suffer because of a misunderstanding between counsel in the case in connection with such an agreement.[12.5] [12.5] Cahaley v. Cahaley, 216 Minn 175, 12 NW 2d 182, 157 ALR 1.

An agreement between attorneys for an extension of time to answer, which is indefinite in its terms, should not be construed by counsel technically or strictly, in taking a default judgment, so as to deprive a party unjustly of his rights, but rather in the spirit of professional courtesy and mutual helpfulness. Cahaley v. Cahaley, 216 Minn 175, 12 NW2d 182, 157 ALR 1.

§ 93. Conclusiveness of Admissions of Attorney.

Am Jur quoted in Smith v. State, 217 Miss 123, 63 So2d 557

Am Jur cited in General Constr. Co. v Hering Realty Co. (DC SC) 201 F Supp 487.

RCL cited in Ellis v. Ellis, 8 Alaska 373.

§ 94. — When Not Binding on Client.

Am Jur cited in State Highway Com. v Fortune, 77 SD 302, 91 NW2d 675.

Cato v Silling, 137 W Va 694, 73 SE2d 731.

§ 95. Incurring Incidental Expenses.

Am Jur cited in Skeen v. Peterson, 113 Utah 483, 196 P2d 708

p. 317, n. 1. He may bind his client for the cost and expense of printing briefs, abstracts of record, appeal papers and the like. Petrando v Barry, 4 Ill App2d 319, 124 NE2d 85.

§ 96. Release of Client's Cause of Action.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1863; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1206.

Am Jur cited in Bath v. Norman, 226 NC 502, 39 SE2d 363.

Gasior v Wentz (ND) 89 NW2d 886; Mongeon v Burkebile, 79 ND 234, 55 NW2d 445.

p. 317, n. 3.

Authority of an attorney to indorse and collect a check given to his client for a release of a claim for personal injuries, so as to preclude appeal by the client from an adverse judgment in an action to recover damages for the injuries, may not be implied from the mere relationship of client and counsel. Sainsbury v. Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, Inc. (CA4th Md) 183 F2d 548, 21 ALR2d 266.

§ 97. Dismissal, Discontinuance, Nonsuit, Retraxit, or Reinstatement.

Am Jur cited in Mongeon v Burkebile, 79 ND 234, 55 NW2d 445.

p. 318, n. 9. Anno: 56 ALR2d 1293.

p. 318, n. 10. Anno: 56 ALR2d 1292.

p. 318, n. 11. Anno: 56 ALR2d 1292.

Page 318. Add following note 11: The rule prevailing in most jurisdictions is that an attorney employed to prosecute an action has implied authority, by virtue of such employment, to have the action discontinued or dismissed where such discontinuance or dismissal will not operate as a bar to the institution of a new action on the same cause, or, as expressed in some cases, where the dismissal or other termination is "without prejudice."[11.5] On the other hand, according to most authorities, an attorney has no general or implied authority by virtue of his employment, to have an action dismissed, or to consent to the dismissal thereof, where such dismissal would operate as a bar to a subsequent action on the same cause or as a surrender of any substantial right or claim of the client, usually referred to as a dismissal "with prejudice" or "on the merits."[11.51] Special authorization by the client is ordinarily necessary for such purpose.[11.52] The rule that the dismissal of an action with prejudice is not within the scope of the general authority of an attorney has been held applicable in the case of an attorney acting in an official capacity as well as in the case of one privately employed.[11.53] Where special authorization is necessary in order to make a dismissal or other termination of an action by an attorney binding on the client, the decisions are generally to the effect that it will be presumed, prima facie, that the attorney acted under the pursuant to such authorization.[11.54]

A dismissal or discontinuance at the instance of the plaintiff's attorney for the following reasons, respectively, has been considered to be within the scope of his general or implied authority: the absence of the plaintiff when the case was called for trial;[11.55] the probability of a defeat on the merits;[11.56] the insufficiency of the evidence then known or available;[11.57] and to permit the use of a part defendant as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff.[11.58] But the fact that an attorney believes that the client is not entitled to prevail in the action does not authorize him to dismiss it with prejudice without the client's consent.[11.59]

The authority of an attorney to dismiss an action upon a compromise or settlement of the case has usually been made to depend upon his authority to make or accept such compromise or settlement.[11.6]

[11.5] Bacon v Mitchell, 14 ND 454, 106 NW 129, 4 LRA NS 244.

Virginia Concrete Co. v Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, 197 Va 821, 91 SE2d 415, 56 ALR2d 1283.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 1291.

[11.51] Turner v Fleming, 37 Okla 75, 130 P 551, 45 LRA NS 265, Ann Cas 1915B 831.

Virginia Concrete Co. v Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, 197 Va 821, 91 SE2d 415, 56 ALR2d 1283.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 1292.

[11.52] Anno: 56 ALR2d 1293.

[11.53] Virginia Concrete Co. v Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, 197 Va 821, 91 SE2d 415, 56 ALR2d 1283.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 1295.

[11.54] Anno: 56 ALR2d 1295.

[11.55] Anno: 56 ALR2d 1296.

[11.56] Bacon v Mitchell, 14 ND 454, 106 NW 129, 4 LRA NS 244.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 1296.

[11.57] Anno: 56 ALR2d 1296.

[11.58] Anno: 56 ALR2d 1296.

[11.59] Virginia Concrete Co. v Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, 197 Va 821, 91 SE2d 415, 56 ALR2d 1283.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 1296.

[11.6] Anno: 56 ALR2d 1296.

p. 318, n. 12. Anno: 56 ALR2d 1293, 1294.

It has been held that a retraxit can be entered only by the plaintiff in person in open court, and not by his attorney except upon special authority. Virginia Concrete Co. v Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, 197 Va 821, 91 SE2d 415, 56 ALR2d 1283.

p. 318, n. 13. Board of Comrs. of Funded Debt v Younger, 29 Cal 147, 87 Am Dec 164.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 1294.

Page 318. Add at end of section: Where an action is dismissed or otherwise terminated at the instance of an attorney acting without proper authority, the client is ordinarily entitled to have the order or judgment set aside and the cause reinstated,[15.5] or he may have the order or judgment amended or corrected so as to show that the dismissal or discontinuance is "without prejudice," upon timely application for such relief and a showing of his right thereto.[15.51] Where the dismissal was made or agreed to in connection with a compromise or settlement of the client's claim, the remedy of the latter has been held to be in the nature of a rescission, so as to require, as a condition of relief, that the adverse party be placed in statu quo.[15.52] And where the settlement was unauthorized, there may be circumstances under which the plaintiff will be remitted to his remedy against his attorney.[15.53]

15.5 Turner v Fleming, 37 Okla 75, 130 P 551, 45 LRA NS 265, Ann Cas 1915B 831.

Virginia Concrete Co. v Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, 197 Va 821, 91 SE2d 415, 56 ALR2d 1283.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 1299.

15.51 Anno: 56 ALR2d 1299.

15.52 Anno: 56 ALR2d 1299.

15.53 Anno: 56 ALR2d 1299.

§ 98. Compromise of Cause of Action.

Am Jur cited in Sainsbury v. Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines (CA4th Md) 183 F2d 548, 21 ALR2d 266.

People v. Wilson 78 Cal App2d 108, 177 P2d 567.

McKeague v Freitas, 40 Hawaii 108.

Fillhardt v. Schmidt, 291 Ky 668, 165 SW2d 155.

Gasior v Wentz (ND) 89 NW2d 886.

Sustrik v Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. 189 Pa Super 47, 149 A2d 498.

Virginia Concrete Co. v Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, 197 Va 821, 91 SE2d 415; Harris v Diamond Constr. Co. 184 Va 711, 36 SE2d 573.

RCL cited in Jenkins v. Bowling Green, 261 Ky 679, 88 SW2d 692.

Galbraith v. Monarch Gold Dredging Co. 160 Or 282, 84 P2d 1110.

p. 318, n. 16. Ricketts v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (CCA2d NY) 153 F2d 757, 164 ALR 387.

Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223, 21 A2d 396, 136 ALR 226 (assistant corporation counsel appearing in case for city).

Anno: 30 ALR2d 945–947; 42 ALR2d 1359 (will contest).

An attorney at law has been held to be without authority to compromise a pending action without specific authority from his client, especially where the contract of employment expressly provides that neither the attorney nor client may settle or compromise the claim without the written consent of the other or without all parties being present and agreeing thereto. National Valve & Mfg. Co. v Wright, 205 Okla 571, 240 P2d 766, 29 ALR2d 1448.

p. 319, n. 17. Anno: 30 ALR2d 950.

p. 319, n. 18. Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223, 21 A2d 396, 136 ALR 226

p. 319, n. 20. Anno: 30 ALR2d 951.

p. 319, n. 2. Anno: 30 ALR2d 953.

p. 320, n. 4. Anno: 42 ALR2d 1360 (will contest).

p. 320, n. 5. Anno: 30 ALR2d 949.

§ 99. — Ratification or Estoppel to Repudiate.

Am Jur cited in Conder Petroleum Co. v. Greene (Tex Civ App) 164 SW2d 713.

p. 320 n. 12. Anno: 30 ALR2d 955, 956.

A stipulation settling a replevin action, executed without authority by plaintiff's attorney, has been held ratified by the plaintiff where, with knowledge of the terms of the settlement, he accepts the net proceeds of the cash sum paid by the defendant thereunder, makes his first formal objection about eight months later without claiming his counsel's lack of authority, and does not repudiate the stipulation until the lapse of twenty months. Yarnall v. Yorkshire Worsted Mills, 370 Pa 93, 87 A2d 192, 30 ALR2d 939.

An abuse of discretion has been held not committed by the trial court in refusing, without a hearing, a rule to show cause why a stipulation settling a replevin action should not be set aside on the ground of absence of authority of the attorney, where it affirmatively appears from the petition taken in connection with the record facts before the court that the settlement had been ratified by the petitioner. Yarnall v. Yorkshire Worsted Mills, 370 Pa 93, 87 A2d 192, 30 ALR2d 939.

p. 320, n. 14. Anno: 30 ALR2d 955.

§ 100. Submission to Arbitration, Reference, or Amicable Action.

Am Jur cited in New Bedford Defense Products Division, etc. v Local No. 1113, International Union, etc. (DC Mass) 160 F Supp 103, affd (CA1) 258 F2d 522.

§ 101 Consenting to or Confessing Judgment.

Am Jur quoted in Renken v Sidebotham (Mo App) 227 SW2d 99.

Kelly v Walker, 208 Tenn 388, 346 SW2d 253.

p. 322, n. 16.

If the defendant assents to a decree by its solicitor, it is equivalent to a finding of fact that the solicitor was authorized to act as he did, and it binds the court on appeal so far as the question is one of fact. Phillips v. Acacia Mut. L. Ins. Co. 124 Fla 179, 168 So 34, citing RCL.

§ 102. Generally.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1864–1:1866.

Am Jur cited in Scarth v Scarth, 211 Or 121, 315 P2d 141.

RCL cited in Damm v. Damm, 77 RI 24, 72 A2d 839.

§ 103. Collection or Satisfaction of Judgment.

Am Jur quoted in Glenwood Lumber & Coal Co. v. Hammers, 226 Iowa 788, 285 NW 277.

Am Jur cited in Wherry v. Rambo, 97 Cal App2d 569, 218 P2d 142.

Smith v Ward, 161 Kan 453, 169 P2d 93.

p. 323, n. 1. Garner v. Schilling Co. 128 Fla 353, 174 So 837, 111 ALR 682.

Shaffer v. McCrackin, 90 Iowa 578, 58 NW 910, 48 Am St Rep 465.

As to authority when employed by next friend or guardian ad litem of infant to conduct litigation for infant, see INFANTS.

p. 323, n. 3. Anno: 30 ALR2d 949.

§ 104. Sale, Transfer, or Assignment of Judgment or Its Proceeds.

Am Jur quoted in Re Booth (Prob Ct) 10 Ohio Ops 147, 25 Ohio L Abs 598 (n 6).

p. 323, n. 10. Mohler's Appeal, 5 Pa 418, 47 Am Dec 413 (authority to assign).

§ 105. Release of Judgment or Lien Thereof.

RCL cited in Doxsee Co. v. Persons Claiming Interest, 3 Cal2d 609, 45 P2d 192.

§ 106. Opening, Modifying, Vacating, or Reviewing Judgment.

Am Jur cited in Keane v. Allen, 69 Idaho 53, 202 P2d 411.

p. 324, n. 16.

A final divorce decree cannot be contested by the complainant's attorney of record after its entry because of complainant's failure properly to enter substitution of another attorney or pay in full the fees due the attorney of record. Annotation: 169 ALR 1014.

p. 324, n. 19. Anno: 171 ALR 258; 42 ALR 2d 1119–1122.

In several cases the view has been taken that, at least under the circumstances, the service of a motion to modify a divorce decree or other judgment as to child custody upon the attorney who represented the opposing party would be valid and effective. Anno: 42 ALR2d 1119.

Page 324. Add following note 20: In a number of cases the effectiveness of the service of a motion to modify a divorce decree or other judgment as to child custody upon the attorney who represented the opposing party has been denied.[20.5] 20.5 Anno: 42 ALR2d 1117–1119, 1122; 71 ALR2d 1402.

Adequate notice of a proceeding, instituted after expiration of the time for an appeal to modify a final decree awarding the custody of a minor child, has been held not given to the opposing parties by its service upon the attorney who represented them in the original proceeding, in the absence of anything appearing of record as to continuation of the attorney's authority. Moore v Lee (Fla) 72 So2d 280, 42 ALR2d 1112.

The fact that the husband's service of notice to modify the divorce decree as to child custody was made upon the wife's attorney during the same term of court as that in which the original decree was entered has been held not sufficient to make such service upon the wife's attorney effective, particularly in view of the fact that such attorney asserted that he was no longer employed by the wife. Anno: 42 ALR2d 1122.

§ 107. Prosecuting Appeal or Writ of Error.

Am Jur cited in Zorn v. Lowery, 236 Ala 62, 181 So 249 (n 8).

RCL cited in Jones v Banner Creamery (Tex Civ App) 214 SW2d 487

p. 325, n. 8. Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v Indemnity Ins. Co. (CA10 Colo) 260 F2d 361, 69 ALR2d 684.

§ 116. Settlement or Compromise Out of Court.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1867, 1:1868.

Am Jur cited in Sentco, Inc. v McCulloh (Fla) 84 So2d 498

State ex rel. McNabb v Allen Superior Ct. 225 Ind 402, 75 NE2d 788.

Purman's Estate, 358 Pa 187, 56 A2d 86, 175 ALR 1129; Wahl v. Strous, 344 Pa 402, 25 A2d 820.

p. 328, n. 13. Butler v. Young, 121 W Va 176, 2 SE2d 250, 121 ALR 1119.

As to effect of stipulation against compromise without attorney's consent in contingent fee contract, see infra, § 163 (Supp).

§ 118. Dismissal of Suit.

RCL cited in Re Grimes, 170 Or 204, 131 P2d 448

§ 119. Effect of Client's Fraud or Collusion.

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. McNabb v. Allen Superior Ct. 225 Ind 402, 75 NE2d 788.

Gravity Drainage Dist. v. Edwards, 207 La 1, 20 So2d 405.

§ 120. Generally.

Am Jur cited in Fowler v. American Federation of Tobacco Growers, Inc. 195 Va 770, 80 SE2d 554.

p. 331, n. 15.

It has been held that an attorney who voluntarily engages to render services for another without compensation is liable for the consequences of his improper management and may not allege lack of consideration as a defense. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

Page 331. Add new paragraph following note 17: The basis for holding an attorney liable for the loss of his client's money or property in his possession or entrusted to him, where the loss results from causes other than criminal conduct on the part of the attorney and where there is no question of commingling, is generally negligence on his part.[17.5]

In the one case in which a former client sought to recover damages allegedly suffered as a consequence of the attorney's subsequent representation of his adversary, the court, without considering the ethical questions involved, denied the relief sought.[17.52]

[17.5] Glenn v. Haynes, 195 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

Anno: 26 ALR2d 1340

[17.52] Anno: 52 ALR2d 1290.

§ 121. Liability on Contract.

Am Jur cited in Lucas v Hamm, 56 Cal 2d 583, 15 Cal Rptr 821, 364 P2d 685, cert den 368 US 987, 7 L ed 2d 525, 82 S Ct 603.

p. 331, n. 4. Anno: 116 ALR 1021.

p. 332, n. 5. Anno: 116 ALR 1021.

p. 332, n. 6. Anno: 116 ALR 1023.

p. 332, n. 7. Anno: 116 ALR 1025.

§ 122. Injury Resulting from Violation of Authority or Instructions.

Am Jur cited in Merriman v. Merriman, 290 Ill App 139, 8 NE2d 64.

p. 332, n. 10. Anno: 45 ALR2d 46 et seq.

p. 332, n. 15. Anno: 45 ALR2d 17.

p. 332, n. 16. Anno: 45 ALR2d 32.

§ 123. Fraud, Unfair Dealing, or Unlawful Exactions.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1283, 2:1284

p. 333, n. 19. It has been held that all the elements of actionable fraud are set forth by a complaint against an attorney by his client, where it is alleged that the plaintiff was deprived of her equity in realty as a result of her reliance upon fraudulent misrepresentations made to her by the attorney pursuant to a conspiracy with other defendants, under which the plaintiff was persuaded to execute a quitclaim deed of her realty to the other defendants in return for promises to make payments on the mortgage debt, and under which the attorney and the other defendants planned to sell the property and share the profits. Lietz v Primock, 84 Ariz 273, 327 P2d 288, 67 ALR2d 1262.

§ 124. Negligence in Performance of Duties.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1281 2:1295.

Am Jur cited in Kendall v. Rogers, 181 Md 606, 31 A2d 312.

Meagher v Kavli, 256 Minn 54, 97 NW2d 370.

Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144.

p. 333, n. 5. Anno: 45 ALR2d 11 et seq.

p. 334, n. 7. Anno: 45 ALR2d 17.

p. 334, n. 8. Anno: 45 ALR2d 18.

p. 334, n. 10. Anno: 45 ALR2d 15.

§ 125. — What Amounts to Negligence.

Am Jur quoted in Sjobeck v. Leach, 213 Minn 360, 6 NW2d 819.

Am Jur cited in Meagher v Kavli, 256 Minn 54, 97 NW2d 370.

Glenn v Haynes, 192 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1340.

p. 334, n. 18. Anno: 45 ALR2d 14.

p. 334, n. 19. Anno: 45 ALR2d 11 et seq.

p. 334, n. 20. Pete v Henderson, 124 Cal App2d 487, 269 P2d 78, 45 ALR2d 58.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 63.

p. 335, n. 1. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

p. 335, n. 5. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

§ 126. — Errors of Judgment and Mistakes of Law.

Am Jur cited in Lucas v Hamm, 56 Cal 2d 583, 15 Cal Rptr 821, 364 P2d 685, cert den 368 US 987, 7 L ed 2d 525, 82 S Ct 603.

Meagher v Kavli, 256 Minn 54, 97 NW2d 370.

Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144.

p. 335, n. 6. Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144, 45 ALR2d 1.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 16.

p. 335, n. 7. Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144, 45 ALR2d 1.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 15–17.

p. 335, n. 8. Sullivan v. Stout, 120 NJL 304, 199 A 1, 118 ALR 211

p. 336, n. 10. Anno: 45 ALR2d 15.

§ 127. — Ignorance of the Law.

Am Jur cited in Meagher v Kavli, 256 Minn 54, 97 NW2d 370.

§ 128. Negligence in Preparing and Conducting Litigation.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1271-2:1273, 2:1275–2:1278.

Am Jur cited in Meagher v Kavli, 256 Minn 54, 97 NW2d 370.

p. 336, n. 15. Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144, 45 ALR2d 1.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 5.

p. 336, n. 16. Noziska v Aten, 35 SD 451, 152 NW 694, Ann Cas 1916C 589 (defective service of process).

Anno: 45 ALR2d 30–52.

In several cases an attorney has been held guilty of actionable negligence where the client suffered the loss of an action or other damages because of the lawyer's negligent misnomer of plaintiff or defendant. Anno: 45 ALR2d 35.

p. 336, n. 18. Anno: 45 ALR2d 11 et seq.

p. 336, n. 19. Anno: 45 ALR2d 11 et seq.

p. 336, n. 1. Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517 80 SE2d 144, 45 ALR2d 1.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 16.

Page 336. Add at end of section: The general principles as to duty and proof have been applied in a wide variety of circumstances involving numerous alleged acts of misconduct taking place at every stage of the proceeding from initiation of the action to the failure to properly enter judgment or to appeal after adverse judgment, in most of which the attempt to hold the attorney liable has been unsuccessful, either because of negligence or because of the inability of the failure of proof on the basic issue to demonstrate that the damages alleged were occasioned by the attorney's fault rather than by the weaknesses of the client's case in the original proceedings.[1.5]

Claims that an attorney was liable for damages because of his allegedly negligent withdrawal from a case he had been engaged to prosecute or defend have been rejected in a number of cases, the courts concluding either that there was no showing of negligence under the circumstances or that the damages complained of had not been shown to have been approximately caused by the attorney's act.[1.51] Occasional unsuccessful attempts have been made to recover from an attorney on the theory that he had negligently advised his client as to the acceptance or rejection of an offer of compromise.[1.52]

Negligence of an attorney in failing to take proper steps to protect his client's right of appeal or review has been held actionable where, as a result, the right of appeal was lost,[1.53] or where it appeared that such an appeal would have resulted favorably to the client.[1.54] An attorney may also be held liable where he wrongfully takes an appeal under circumstances in the light of which he should have realized it would be fruitless.[1.55] It has frequently been held that charges of negligence in failing to obtain appellate review or a new trial after an unfavorable judgment or verdict below would not support a verdict against the attorney in the absence of a showing that if the appeal or new trial had been obtained a judgment more favorable to the plaintiff would have resulted.[1.56]

1.5 Anno: 45 ALR2d 11, 22–58.

An attorney has been held not liable for a loss sustained by his client by the dismissal of his action against foreign insurance companies for want of proper service of process, where the attorney followed a method theretofore prevailing in the state without challenge for two decades or more. Hodges v Carter, 239 NC 517, 80 SE2d 144, 45 ALR2d 1.

1.51 Anno: 45 ALR2d 45, 46.

1.52 Anno: 45 ALR2d 48.

1.53 Pete v Henderson, 124 Cal App2d 487, 269 P2d 78, 45 ALR2d 58.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 52.

1.54 Anno: 45 ALR2d 52.

1.55 Anno: 45 ALR2d 53.

1.56 Pete v Henderson, 124 Cal App2d 487, 269 P2d 78, 45 ALR2d 58.

Anno: 45 ALR2d 55–58.

§ 129. Negligence in Enforcing Judgment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1285.

Am Jur cited in Lundberg v Backman, 11 Utah 2d 330, 358 P2d 987.

p. 337, n. 3. Anno: 45 ALR2d 49.

p. 337, n. 6. Anno: 45 ALR2d 53, 54.

§ 130. Negligence in Collection of Claims.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1271–2:1274, 2:1296.

Am Jur cited in Beach v. Goepfert (CCA8th) 147 F2d 480; El Paso v. West (CCA5th) 102 F2d 927, rehearing denied in (CCA5th) 104 F2d 96 and writ of certiorari denied in 308 US 557, 84 L ed 492, 60 S Ct 111.

p. 337, n. 9. Anno: 45 ALR2d 22–30.

p. 337, n. 10. Anno: 45 ALR2d 23 et seq.

p. 337, n. 11. Anno: 45 ALR2d 23.

p. 338, n. 12. Anno: 45 ALR2d 24, 25.

§ 131. Failure to Remit; Loss or Conversion of Money Collected.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1282.

Am Jur quoted in Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1340.

RCL cited in State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Asso v. Niklaus, 149 Neb 859, 33 NW2d 145.

p. 338, n. 15. Anno: 26 ALR2d 1342.

p. 338, n. 16. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

Anno: 26 ALR2d 1342.

p. 338, n. 17. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

Anno: 26 ALR2d 1345.

p. 338, n 19. Anno: 26 ALR2d 1343–1345.

Page 338. Add new paragraph at end of section: Some jurisdictions, expressly or by implication, support the view that an attorney may set off his claim for unrelated services against his client's claim for money collected, either under the theory of attorney's lien or under the rule with respect to offset of debts generally.[19.5] But some courts, while recognizing the right of an attorney to set off his claim for services resulting in the collection of money for a client against the client's claim for the fund,[19.51] have denied the attorney's right to set off his claim for unrelated services against the client's claim for the money collected.[19.52]

19.5 White v. Ward, 157 Ala 345, 47 So 166, 18 LRA NS 568.

Anno: 173 ALR 429.

19.51 Anno: 173 ALR 434.

19.52 Noel Estate v. Dickson & Denny, 212 La 313, 31 So2d 810, 173 ALR 423.

Anno: 173 ALR 434.

Attorneys may not, in a client's action against them to recover the proceeds of a judgment recovered by the attorneys for the client, assert a reconventional demand based on claims for fees for various unrelated services rendered and suits filed during a period of years, under a code provision requiring that the demand in reconvention, though different from the main action, be necessarily connected with and incidental to the same. Noel Estate v. Dickson & Denny, 212 La 313, 31 So2d 810, 173 ALR 423.

Attorneys may not, in a client's action against them to recover the proceeds of a judgment recovered by the attorneys for the client, maintain a plea of setoff and compensation based upon unliquidated claims for fees for various services rendered and suits filed during a period of years, under a code provision that in order for compensation to take place between two debts, they must be equally liquidated. Noel Estate v. Dickson & Denny, 212 La 313, 31 So2d 810, 173 ALR 423.

§ 132. Negligence or Mistake in Investigating, Abstracting, or Conveying Title.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1279, 2:1280, 2:1297.

Am Jur cited in Gagne v Bertran, 43 Cal 2d 481, 275 P2d 15 (dissent op).

Page 338. Add, following the word "matter" in the second line of the section:[19.1]

19.1 Sullivan v. Stout, 120 NJL 304, 199 A 1, 118 ALR 211.

Page 338. Add, following note 1: An attorney employed to make title search does not, by accepting the employment, assume to warrant the title or the correctness of his work.[1.1]

1.1 Sullivan v. Stout, 120 NJL 304, 199 A 1, 118 ALR 211.

A certificate by an attorney employed to make a title search that he has examined the title and that the title to the property in question is vested in fee simple in person's name does not amount to an express warranty of title, but is merely evidence of the act done by the attorney in purported satisfaction of the obligation assumed by him in accepting such employment. Sullivan v Stout, 120 NJL 304, 199 A 1, 118 ALR 211.

§ 133. Drafting, Preserving, and Recording Legal Documents.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1298.

p. 339, n. 5. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1368 (drawing invalid will, liability when employed by potential beneficiary).

p. 339. n. 7. Anno: 26 ALR2d 1342.

§ 134. Liability for Acts of Partner, Assistant, Clerk, or Agent.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1300.

p. 339, n. 11. Anno: 26 ALR2d 1343.

p. 339, n. 14. Rouse v. Pollard, 130 NJ Eq 204, 21 A2d 801, 136 ALR 1105.

A client who goes to a law firm, states a specific legal service as the reason for her visit, and is introduced to a member of the firm for the performance of that service, has no justification therein for relying upon the responsibility of the partnership for any disconnected service which may be assumed by that member outside one that is characteristically within the practice of law. Rouse v. Pollard, 130 NJ Eq 204, 21 A(2d) 801, 136 ALR 1105.

Page 339. Add, following note 14: And, as a general proposition, it would seem that the acceptance or receipt of money for investment generally, or for investment in the future in undesignated securities, is not within the ordinary scope of the business of a law firm, so as to charge a law firm with liability for the misconduct of a partner growing out of the receipt or acceptance of money from a client for such purpose, in the absence of knowledge of or consent to and ratification of such a transaction.[14.5]

[14.5] Anno: 136 ALR 1110.

See Rouse v. Pollard, 130 NJ Eq 204, 21 A(2d) 801, 136 ALR 1105.

In England it appears that the practice was, and perhaps to some extent still is, prevalent to receive money from clients for the purpose of supplying other clients with loans, the solicitor apparently deriving his fee from the transaction by searching the title and drawing up the necessary documents of conveyance and security. Under the English decisions, and apparently as an outgrowth of this practice, it has been held or stated that the receipt of money for investment in a specific or particular security is within the scope of the ordinary business of an attorney, and that law firm (or the individual partners thereof) is liable for the conduct of a member or partner thereof in connection with receiving money from a client for the purpose of investing it in a specific security, notwithstanding that the other members or partners may have no knowledge of the transaction. Anno: 136 ALR 1112. See Blair v. Bromley, 5 Hare 542, 67 Eng Reprint 1026, 19 Eng Rul Cas 450.

Members of a law firm are not estopped to deny authority of another member to invest funds for a client so as to render them liable for misappropriation of funds which a client intrusted to him for that purpose, because, without knowledge on their part of any misconduct by him, he paid out of the client's funds a relatively small sum in payment of a charge for legal services rendered by the firm to her, the propriety and amount of which are not questioned. Rouse v. Pollard, 130 NJ Eq 204, 21 A2d 801, 136 ALR 1105

p. 340, n. 17. Anno: 26 ALR2d 1343.

§ 135. Form of Remedy.

Am Jur cited in Armour & Co. v Lambdin, 154 Fla 86, 16 So2d 805.

p. 340, n. 1. Anno: 45 ALR2d 15.

p. 340, n. 2.

A suit may be maintained by a client against his attorneys to recover a specific sum as the proceeds of a judgment recovered by the attorneys for the client, without suing for a general accounting relative to the attorneys' entire services, including not only those rendered in the suit producing the funds in question but also those in unrelated matters. Noel Estate v. Dickson & Denny, 212 La 313, 31 So2d 810, 173 ALR 423.

§ 137. Applicability of Statute of Limitations.

Am Jur cited in Beach v. Goepfert (CCA 8th) 147 F2d 480; El Paso v. West (CCA 5th) 102 F(2d) 927, rehearing denied in (CCA 5th) 104 F2d 96, and writ of certiorari denied in 308 US 557, 84 L ed 492, 60 S Ct 111.

p. 341, n. 9. Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A(2d) 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Anno: 151 ALR 1388.

Leading text writers also lay down this rule. Anno: 151 ALR 1389.

p. 341, n. 10. Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A(2d) 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Anno: 151 ALR 1388.

Where there are additional facts which change the relationship between an attorney and the client for whom he has received or collected money to an express and continuing trust, the attorney will not be allowed to avail himself of the statute of limitations against an action by the client for the money collected or received. Anno: 151 ALR 1392.

In at least one case the court seems to have indicated that the attorney's position as an officer of the court prohibited him under proper circumstances of availing himself of the statute of limitations as a defense in an action brought against him by his client for his failure to pay over money collected for such client. Anno: 151 ALR 1393.

It may be noted that cases which hold that the statute of limitations does not begin to run against an action against an attorney for money collected or received for a client until the client has made a demand for the remittance thereof (see 34 Am Jur 148, Limitation of Actions, § 185) seems to predicate the requirement of a demand for remittance upon the necessity of ending a trust relationship existing prior to such demand between the attorney and the client. Anno: 151 ALR 1394

p. 341, n. 11.

See 34 Am Jur 148, Limitation of Actions, § 185.

Page 341. Add at end of section: Some conflict of opinion exists among the courts as to which of several statutes of limitation applies to an action against an attorney for negligence in the performance of professional services.[11.5] In a number of cases the courts, while going on the theory that an action against an attorney for negligence in the performance of his professional duty was an action upon a contract, have held that the statute of limitations governing such actions was that limiting the time for bringing an action for malpractice.[11.51] In other cases, the statute of limitations dealing with actions for malpractice has been held inapplicable in actions against attorneys for negligence.[11.52]

In a number of cases, the courts, without going into any discussion of the theory of the plaintiff's action, have held that an action against an attorney for his negligence in the performance of professional services is based on breach of contract and is accordingly governed by the statute of limitations applicable to contract actions.[11.53] The statute of limitations governing an action upon a contract, obligation or liability not founded upon an instrument of writing has been held to apply to an action against an attorney for negligence in the performance of professional services.[11.54] And in at least one jurisdiction it has been said that the determinative question was rather whether the plaintiff in his declaration stated a cause of action for injuries to the person, and that if so, then the statute of limitations applicable to such actions, and not the statute applicable to contract actions, would govern.[11.55]

11.5 Anno: 49 ALR2d 1216–1223.
11.51 Anno: 49 ALR2d 1218.
11.52 Anno: 49 ALR2d 1219.
11.53 Cornell v Edsen, 78 Wash 662, 139 P 602, 51 LRA NS 279.
Anno: 49 ALR2d 1219–1221.
11.54 Anno: 49 ALR2d 1221–1223.
11.55 Bland v Smith, 197 Tenn 683, 277 SW2d 377, 49 ALR2d 1212.
Anno: 49 ALR2d 1217.

The one-year statute of limitations applicable to actions for personal injuries, rather than the six-year statute of limitations applicable to actions on contracts, has been held to apply to an action by a client against his attorney, where it appears from the declaration that the action is based on an injury to the person for which damages are sought. Bland v Smith, 197 Tenn 683, 277 SW2d 377, 49 ALR2d 1212.

§ 138. Pleading.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1271–2:1273, 2:1275, 2:1277, 2:1279–2:1285.

p. 341, n. 12. Lietz v Primock, 84 Ariz 273, 327 P2d 288, 67 ALR2d 1262.

p. 341, n. 14. Anno: 45 ALR2d 14, 15.

§ 139. Burden of Proof.

Am Jur cited in Dreka v. Whitehair, 150 Fla 517, 8 So2d 23.

p. 342, n. 19. Anno: 45 ALR2d 14.

It has been held that a prima facie case for the recovery by a client of jewelry entrusted to her attorney, sufficient for submission to the jury, is established by proof showing delivery to the attorney, the client's title and right to immediate possession, and a failure to return the jewelry upon demand, and that the burden shifted to the attorney to show that the failure of delivery was not due to the absence of reasonable care for its protection and safe delivery, under the circumstances of the attorney's engagement. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

p. 342, n. 1. Anno: 45 ALR2d 14.
p. 342, n. 2. Anno: 45 ALR2d 21, 26, 29.
p. 342, n. 3. Anno: 45 ALR2d 19–21.
p. 342, n. 4. Anno: 45 ALR2d 22.

§ 141. Trial; Questions of Law and Fact.

p. 343, n. 14.

The degree of care required to be exercised by an attorney to protect a client's property in the attorney's possession from loss is for determination by the court, but the care exercised is a question of fact for determination by the jury under proper instructions from the court. Glenn v. Haynes, 192 Va 574, 66 SE2d 509, 26 ALR2d 1334.

p. 343, n. 16. It has been held that in an action against an attorney by his former client for negligence in failing to file timely notice of an appeal, so that the latter is compelled to pay a judgment against him, the question whether such judgment is erroneous and would have been reversed on the appeal is in issue and should be determined by the trial court in the new action. Pete v Henderson, 124 Cal App2d 487, 269 P2d 78, 45 ALR2d 58.

§ 142. Measure and Mitigation of Damages.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1271–2:1273, 2:1275, 2:1277, 2:1279, 2:1280, 2:1282.

p. 343, n. 18. Anno: 45 ALR2d 63 et seq.

Damages recoverable upon proof of the required facts in an action against an attorney by his former client for negligence in failing to file timely notice of an appeal from an erroneous judgment, have been held to include so much of the amount the client was compelled to pay thereon as he would not have been required to pay on determination of the appeal. Pete v Henderson, 124 Cal App2d 487, 269 P2d 78, 45 ALR2d 58.

It has been held that where the attorney is engaged to defend an action, which is lost because of his negligence, the amount of the judgment suffered by the client is a proper element of recovery. Anno: 45 ALR2d 67.

p. 344, n. 19. Anno: 45 ALR2d 69.

Page 344. Add following note 3: Interest on the amount of the claim lost due to the attorney's negligence has been held recoverable.[3.5] Expenses or costs incurred by the client as a result of the negligence of an attorney entrusted with litigation have occasionally been held to constitute a proper element of recovery in a malpractice action.[3.51] Fees or expenses paid to the attorney or otherwise expended by the client as a result of the attorney's negligence have been held a proper element of damages.[3.52]

3.5 Anno: 45 ALR2d 70.
3.51 Anno: 45 ALR2d 68.
3.52 Pete v Henderson, 124 Cal App2d 487, 269 P2d 78, 45 ALR2d 58.
Anno: 45 ALR2d 69.

§ 143. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1286–2:1289.

Am Jur cited in Re Ferrell (Mun Ct App Dist Col) 172 A2d 555.

Re Butler, 137 Ohio St 115, 28 NE2d 196.

p. 344, n. 10.

The concern of the court in a summary proceeding against an attorney by or in the interest of the client is not the legal right of the affiant as affected by the attorney's acts, but the alleged misconduct of the attorney himself, who is the court's own officer. Re Long, 287 NY 449, 40 NE(2d) 247, 141 ALR 651.

p. 344, n. 11.

A client has no absolute right to invoke a summary remedy against an attorney to require him to turn over money or papers in his possession belonging to the client: the remedy is always subject to the discretion of the court, and it is for the court to say when and under what circumstances it will entertain the proceedings. Re Long, 287 NY 449, 40 NE(2d) 247, 141 ALR 651.

That money was paid to attorneys by an incompetent prior to the adjudication of incompetency does not deprive the court of power in summary proceedings to require the return of the money to his committee. Re Long, 287 NY 449, 40 NE(2d) 247, 141 ALR 651.

§ 144. As Affected by Right to Jury Trial.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1286–2:1289.

Am Jur cited in People's Sav. Bank v. Chesley, 138 Me 353, 26 A(2d) 632

Weatherly v Longoria (Tex Civ App) 292 SW 2d 139, error ref n r e.

§ 145. Necessity of Relation of Attorney and Client.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1286–2:1289.

Am Jur cited in Brown v Superior Court, 78 Ariz 120, 276 P2d 540

p. 346, n. 5. Anno: 65 ALR2d 1371 (drawing invalid will, liability to beneficiary).

§ 146. Procedure.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1286–2:1289.

Am Jur cited in Re Butler, 137 Ohio St 115, 28 NE(2d) 196.

p. 346, n. 10. Anno: 141 ALR 655.

See Re Long, 287 NY 449, 40 NE(2d) 247, 141 ALR 651.

Page 346. Add, following note 10: And he is also entitled to introduce evidence.[10.5]

10.5 Anno: 141 ALR 655.

See Re Long, 287 NY 449, 40 NE(2d) 247, 141 ALR 651 (a summary proceeding to compel attorneys forthwith to return to the committee for their incompetent client a sum of money, which the incompetent had paid them for services rendered in the incompetency proceeding and in accordance with a written memorandum signed by him after the papers in the incompetency proceeding had been filed, in which it was held that the attorneys should have been given opportunity to call witnesses and to confront and cross-examine the witnesses from whom came the evidence upon which the charge of professional misconduct was based. The court stated that it did not mean to prescribe exact rules of procedure to be followed in a summary proceeding of this character, but pointed out that the attorneys were entitled at least to an opportunity to be heard—to test the basis of the charge against them by cross-examination of witnesses and to offer evidence which might affect the conclusion by the court upon the facts of record). Heffren v Jayne, 39 Ind 463, 13 Am Rep 281 (in which the court said "In this quasi prosecution, the defendant should be permitted to show the circumstances under which the money was withheld, in mitigation, if not in justification, of their conduct"); White v. Ward, 157 Ala 345, 356, 47 So 166, 18 LRA(NS) 568 (overruling Macdonald v. State, 143 Ala 101, 39 So 257) (in which it was held that an attorney, proceeded against summarily under a statute, for failure to pay over money collected for his client, was not deprived of the right to defend on the merits in case he failed to pay the money into court, by a provision of the statute that he might avoid interest and penalty by payment of the money into court to await judgment).

p. 347, n. 14. Re Long, 287 NY 449, 40 NE(2d) 247, 141 ALR 651.

§ 147. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Wall v Johnson (Fla) 80 So2d 362.

Am Jur cited in Hoppe v. Klapperich, 224 Minn 224, 28 NW2d 780, 173 ALR 819.

Waggoner v Glacier Colony of Hutterites, 131 Mont 525, 312 P2d 117.

p. 348, n. 3. See Biakanja v Irving, 49 Cal 2d 647, 320 P2d 16, 65 ALR2d 1358 (in which the court refused to apply the privity rule to permit a notary public who had negligently failed to supervise the execution of a will drawn by him to escape liability to a person named as a beneficiary in the ineffective instrument, and, so far as in conflict with its present decision disapproved of that in Buckley v Gray, 110 Cal 339, 42 P 900, 31 LRA 862, 52 Am St Rep 88).

Anno: 65 ALR2d 1364, 1370 (drawing invalid will).

Page 348. Add, following note 6: The general rule is that even though the attorney retains as payment for his services, or for some other debt owing by his client, under an agreement with the latter, part or all of the proceeds of a judgment recovered by the client which is subsequently reversed, he is not obliged to make restitution to the judgment debtor provided he acted in good faith in prosecuting the action in which the judgment was recovered. But if the judgment was void, or if the attorney knew it was obtained by fraud or he otherwise did not act in good faith in retaining the money, he is liable to make restitution.[6.5]

[6.5] Anno: 87 ALR 175–178.

See Am Law Inst Restatement of Restitution, § 74 (comment h).

p. 348, n. 7.

An attorney forfeits the immunity which he enjoys as a quasi-judicial officer as to acts done in the performance of his duties to his client when he knowingly becomes an instrumentality for the perpetration of a fraud or for the malicious prosecution and imprisonment of a party against whom he knows his client has no just claim or cause of arrest. Hoppe v. Klapperich, 224 Minn 224, 28 NW2d 780, 173 ALR 819.

§ 149. On Contracts Made in Interest of Client.

Am Jur cited in Moran v Loefler-Greene Supply Co. (Okla) 316 P2d 132.

p. 349, n. 17. McCloskey v Bril, 286 App Div 143, 142 NYS2d 5, affd per curiam 1 NY2d 755, 152 NYS2d 301, 135 NE2d 53.

§ 153. Generally.

Practice Aids: Attorneys' Fees, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 233 et seq.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1869-1:1873; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1227, 2:1232, 2:1238–2:1240, 2:1255.

Am Jur cited in Desny v Wilder, 46 Cal2d 715, 299 P2d 257; Re Reade, 31 Cal2d 669, 191 P2d 745.

Hightower v Trinity Church of Covington (Ky) 313 SW2d 858.

RCL cited in Wilson v. Goldman (Mo App) 104 SW(2d) 681

p. 352, n. 12. Anno: 78 ALR2d 339, 365.

§ 154. Necessity of Employment or Retainer.

Practice Aids: Attorneys' Fees, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 233 et seq.

Am Jur cited in Bogorad v Schwarz (CA4th Md) 208 F2d 704; Berry v. Root (CCA5th) 148 F2d 945, writ of certiorari denied in 326 US 755, 90 L ed 453, 66 S Ct 91.

Geier v Laughlin (Mun Ct App Dist Col) 129 A 2d 401.

Hightower v Trinity Church of Covington (Ky) 313 SW2d 858.

Re Interstate Trust & Banking Co. 235 La 825, 106 So 2d 276.

R. C. L. quoted in Becht v. Miller, 279 Mich. 629, 273 NW 294

p. 352, n. 16. Anno: 78 ALR2d 324–388.

p. 352, n. 17. Anno: 78 ALR2d 361–375.

Page 352. Add, following note 17: An attorney employed to prosecute a claim on a contingent basis may not retain out of the amount recovered the expense incurred in employing another attorney to assist him on appeal, although such employment was authorized by the client, where he failed to explain that the terms of his retainer bound him to do all the work required.[17.1] Nor may the client employ another attorney to assist in the litigation and deduct his compensation from the percentage due the original attorney under a contingent fee contract.[17.2] p. 352, n. 18. Burnett v Graves (CA5 Tex) 230 F2d 49, 56 ALR2d 1, cert den 351 US 984, 100 L ed 1498, 76 S Ct 1051 (applying Texas law).

[17.1] Manzo v. Dullea (C. C. A. 2d) 96 F. (2d) 135, 116 A.L.R. 1241.

[17.2] Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 1248.

Caughlan v International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, 52 Wash 2d 656, 328 P2d 707, 78 ALR2d 313.

For a collection and detailed discussion of cases considering what constitutes acceptance or ratification of, or acquiescence in, services rendered by an attorney so as to raise an implied promise to pay the reasonable value thereof, see the annotation in 78 ALR2d 318.

p. 352, n. 19. Anno: 78 ALR2d 331, 332.

p. 352, n. 20. Anno: 78 ALR2d 333.

p. 352, n. 1. Anno: 78 ALR2d 334.

§ 155. —Liability of Third Person Benefited by Attorney's Services to Another.

Am Jur quoted in United Services Auto. Asso. v Hills, 172 Neb 128, 109 NW2d 174.

Draper v Draper, 24 Tenn App 548, 147 SW 2d 759.

Am Jur cited in Berry v. Root (CCA 5th) 148 F2d 945, writ of certiorari denied in 326 US 755, 90 L ed 453, 66 S Ct 91.

Re Reade, 31 Cal2d 669, 191 P2d 745.

Gibson v. Gibson, 122 Ind App 559, 106 NE2d 102

Re Interstate Trust & Banking Co. 235 La 825, 106 So 2d 276.

McKevitt v. Golden Age Breweries, 14 Wash 2d 50, 126 P2d 1077.

RCL quoted in Christian Women's Benev. Asso. v. Atlanta Trust Co. 181 Ga. 576, 183 S. E. 551.

RCL cited in Eckford v. Atlanta. 173 Ga 650. 160 SE 773 (note 12)

p. 353, n. 2. Anno: 78 ALR2d 328.

p. 353, n. 3. Anno: 78 ALR2d 376.

p. 353, n. 4. Anno: 78 ALR2d 375–388.

p. 353, n. 5. Anno: 78 ALR2d 379.

§ 156. Right of Unlicensed Attorney to Fees.

Am Jur cited in Hardy v. San Fernando Valley Chamber of Commerce. 99 Cal App2d 572, 222 P2d 314.

Taft v Amsel, 23 Conn Supp 225, 180 A2d 756.

p. 353, n. 10. Anno: 118 ALR 652.

p. 353, n. 11. Anno: 118 ALR 653.

p. 354, n. 13.

The fact that an attorney, who had practiced for many years in other states, failed to obtain a license to practice in Idaho, where he handled a probate matter. has been held not to preclude his recovery for services rendered in that matter, since by comity attorneys from other states are usually accorded the special privilege of handling an isolated matter without being licensed. Anno: 118 ALR 654.

Page 354. Add, following note 14: There is authority to the effect that an attorney failing to pay a required annual registration fee or license tax is entitled to collect for legal services rendered.[14.1]

[14.1] Anno: 118 ALR 653.

§ 157. Attorneys Appointed to Defend Indigents or Prosecute Disbarment Proceedings.

p. 354, n. 17. Ruckenbrod v. Mullins. 102 Utah 548. 133 P(2d) 325, 144 ALR 839.

Anno: 130 ALR 1440: 144 ALR 847

p. 354, n. 18. Ruckenbrod v. Mullins. 102 Utah 548. 133 P(2d) 325. 144 ALR 839.

Anno: 130 ALR 1444: 144 ALR 847.

But the fact that attorneys are properly required by the state to be licensed does not, of itself, justify the state in requiring them to render services gratuitously to indigent defendants. Ruckenbrod v. Mullins. 102 Utah 548. 133 P(2d) 325. 144 ALR 839

Page 354. Add, following "process of law" in the eleventh line in the section:[18.5]

[18.5] Ruckenbrod v. Mullins. 102 Utah 548. P(2d) 325, 144 ALR 839.

Anno: 130 ALR 1442; 144 ALR 848.

Page 354. Add, following note 19: And even though a statute makes it the duty of the court to assign counsel to an accused who is without means of employing one, it has been held that in order to render a county responsible. the legislature must make some provision specially providing for the payment of compensation to assigned counsel.[19.5]

[19.5] Anno: 130 ALR 1442.

p. 354, n. 20. Anno: 130 ALR 1445; 144 ALR 848.

p. 354, n. 21. Anno: 130 ALR 1445.

To require an attorney to defend a criminal prosecution for a pauper defendant without receiving any compensation for his services is in conflict with a constitutional provision that "no man's particular services shall be demanded without just compensation." Knox County Council v. State, 217 Ind 493. 29 NE(2d) 405. 130 ALR 1427.

p. 354, n. 22. Anno: 130 ALR 1445.

Page 354. Add, following note 22: In one of these jurisdictions it has been held that a statute having the effect of forbidding any allowance or recovery against a county for attorneys' fees for defending a pauper in a criminal case, unless there is an existing appropriation by the county council at the time, is unconstitutional as depriving the courts of their inherent power to see that the constitutional right of an accused to be represented by counsel is given effect, but that the inherent power of a court in a criminal prosecution against a pauper to see that the constitutional right of the defendant to be represented by counsel is given effect, is not unconstitutionally impeded by a legislative enactment requiring that, on a change of venue, the compensation of counsel appointed by the court shall be settled and allowed by the judge of the court from which the change of venue is granted.[22.5]

Many of the states at the present time have statutes which provide for the compensation of attorneys assigned to defend indigent persons accused of crime. Some of these statutes appear to extend the right to public compensation to all crimes, others to all felonies, but in one state at least, the right is limited to those appointed to defend persons accused of an offense punishable by death.[22.6]

[22.5] Knox County Council v. State, 217 Ind 493, 29 NE(2d) 405, 130 ALR 1427.

Anno: 130 ALR 1448.

[22.6] Anno: 130 ALR 1450 et seq (which sets out in detail cases arising under various statutes): 144 ALR 848.

Reimbursement of assigned attorneys for personal and incidental expenses, in addition to compensation for services, have been provided by statute. See annotation in 130 ALR 1461

p. 355, n. 1. Anno: 144 ALR 848; 55 ALR2d 1085 et seq.

The general rule (established in Griffin v Illinois, 351 US 12, 100 L ed 891, 76 S Ct 585, 55 ALR2d 1055. reh den 351 US 958, 100 L ed 1480, 76 S Ct 844) that an indigent convicted of crime is, as a matter of federal constitutional law, entitled to state aid in obtaining appellate review of trial errors where review of such errors is available to persons able to pay the attendant expenses, does not reach the question whether such an indigent is entitled to be furnished with counsel to prosecute his appeal. A clear solution to this question must await further development of the Griffin rule. Anno: 55 ALR2d 1085.

p. 355, n. 2. Anno: 55 ALR2d 1085.

§ 158. Right to Retaining Fee.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1874–1:1881.

§ 159. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Reid v Johnson (Fla App) 106 So 2d 624.

Re Irwin, 162 Or 221, 91 P2d 518.

Am Jur cited in Spilker v. Hankin, 88 App DC 206, 188 F2d 35.

Potter v. Daily, 220 Ind 43, 40 NE(2d) 339.

Higgins v Beaty, 242 NC 479, 88 SE2d 80.

Ofstad v. Beck, 65 SD 387, 274 NW 498 (notes 16–18).

Stiers v. Hall, 170 Va 569, 197 SE 450 (notes 16–18).

RCL cited in Wilson v. Goldman (Mo App) 104 SW(2d) 681.

p. 356, n. 16. Higgins v Beaty, 242 NC 479, 88 SE2d 80, 54 ALR2d 600.

p. 356, n. 17. Higgins v Beaty, 242 NC 479, 88 SE2d 80, 54 ALR2d 600.

p. 356, n. 3. Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS 2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, L ed 2d 380, 80 S Ct 401.

p. 356, n. 4. Anno: 43 ALR2d 684.

It has been held that since an attorney possesses superior knowledge of the work which a retainer is likely to involve, it is only fair to expect him to designate clearly the services covered by the retainer when he accepts employment, and if he later claims compensation for work which he contends was not included in the retainer, ambiguities and doubts concerning the agreement should be resolved against him. Anno: 43 ALR2d 684.

§ 160. Contracts Made during Existence of Relation of Attorney and Client.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1882–1:1886; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1226.

Am Jur quoted in Stiers v. Hall, 170 Va 569, 197 SE 450 (notes 9–15)

Am Jur cited in Spilker v Hankin, 88 App DC 206, 188 F2d 35.

Lawrence v. Tschirgi, 244 Iowa 386, 57 NW2d 46.

Re Schanzer's Estate, 7 App Div 2d 275, 182 NYS2d 475, affd 8 NY2d 972, 204 NYS2d 349, 169 NE2d 11.

Skeen v. Peterson, 113 Utah 483, 196 P2d 708.

R. C. L. cited in Rippey v. Wilson, 280 Mich. 233, 273 NW 552.

§ 161. — Increasing Attorney's Compensation.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1226.

Am Jur cited in Skeen v. Peterson, 113 Utah 483, 196 P2d 708.

RCL cited in State v. MacIntyre, 238 Wis 406, 298 NW 200.

Page 358. Add at end of section: The right of a retained attorney to be actively or specially employed by the client for compensation in addition to the specified retainer fee depends upon whether the contract contains any provision to that effect.[4.5]

[4.5] Anno: 43 ALR2d 692.

§ 162. Contracts Made after Completion of Services or Termination of Relation.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1225.

Am Jur cited in Potter v. Daily, 220 Ind 43, 40 NE(2d) 339.

Am Jur cited in Burleson v. Morse (Tex Civ App) 172 SW(2d) 361.

Stiers v. Hall, 170 Va 569, 197 SE 450 (n. 5).

RCL cited in La Fleaur v. Kinard (Tex Civ App) 161 SW2d 144.

§ 163. Contracts for Contingent Fees.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1887–1:1908; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1229, 2:1230.

As to the amount of compensation to which the attorney is entitled under a contingent fee contract as affected by expenses incurred by the attorney, see infra, § 206 (Supp.).

Am Jur cited in Cone v. Benjamin, 157 Fla 800, 27 So2d 90

R. C. L. quoted in Hollister v. Ulvi, 199 Minn. 269, 271 N. W. 493; Adkins v. Staker, 130 Ohio St. 198, 198 N. E. 575.

R. C. L. cited in American Vitrified Products Co. v. Crooks, 20 Ohio L. Abs. 627, motion to certify record overruled. June 12. 1935

p. 359, n. 9. Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, 4 L ed 2d 380, 80 S Ct 401.

A contingent fee arrangement between an attorney and his client has been held not in itself subject to condemnation as unethical. Re Quinn, 25 NJ 284, 135 A2d 869, 70 ALR2d 956.

Page 359. Add, following note 13: Stipulations contained in contracts between an attorney and his client whereby the attorney's right to compensation is expressly made contingent upon the successful prosecution of the suit, providing against compromise or settlement without the attorney's consent, have generally been held invalid as antagonistic to those considerations of public policy which favor an amicable adjustment of litigation.[13.1] But in numerous cases stipulations against the client's compromising his cause of action without consulting the attorney have been held valid, at least in the absence of any showing of bad faith.[13.2] And there is a sharp conflict of authority upon the question of the effect of the invalidity of a stipulation against compromise by the client upon the enforceability of other provisions of the contract fixing the attorney's compensation. Thus, in a number of cases in which this question arose, the entire contract was held to be vitiated; and some other cases in which the exact point was not raised may also be regarded as supporting that view.[13.3] However, about an equal number of decisions in which the particular point was raised have taken the view that, notwithstanding the invalidity of the stipulation against compromise by the client, the rest of the contract may be enforced, at least in a proper case.[13.4] [13.1] Butler v. Young, 121 W Va 176, 2 SE(2d) 250, 121 ALR 1119.

Anno: 121 ALR 1122.

This result has been reached in various kinds of actions, of which those to recover for personal injuries have been by far the most numerous. Anno: 121 ALR 1122.

[13.2] Anno: 121 ALR 1125.

[13.3] Anno: 121 ALR 1127.

[13.4] St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965; Butler v. Young, 121 W Va 176, 2 SE(2d) 250. 121 ALR 1119.

Anno: 121 ALR 1129.

p. 360, n. 17.

A statute authorizing an attorney to contract for a portion of the proceeds of a client's cause of action not in excess of 50 per cent of the net amount of the judgment recovered has been held not to apply to a layman agreeing to have proceedings instituted and to pay the expenses thereof in return for an oil and gas lease and a portion of the minerals in the land to be recovered. Cox v. Freeman, 204 Okla 138, 227 P2d 670, 28 ALR2d 1230.

Page 360. Add following note 17: The few cases considering court rules limiting the amount of contingent fees or otherwise imposing conditions on contingent fee contracts have reached varying results as to the validity of such a rule, although the courts are not in conflict as to the general principles to be applied, being in substantial agreement that if the rule merely sets forth procedural aids or requirements, it is valid, whereas if it establishes substantive law opposed to that in force in the state, it is invalid.[17.5]

[17.5] Anno: 77 ALR2d 412.

In an action for a declaratory judgment, an attack was made on a rule promulgated by the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division. First Judicial Department, pertaining to the amount of contingent fees in claims and actions for personal injury and wrongful death. The rule included a tenatative schedule, subject to variation under justifiable circumstances, characterizing as unreasonable and unconscionable the collection of contingent fees in excess of certain percentages for specified amounts of recovery. Among other claims, the contention was made that the rule conflicted with a statute providing for the compensation of an attorney to be governed by agreement, express or implied. The validity of the rule was upheld. Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, 4 L ed 2d 380, 80 S Ct 401.

§ 164. — Consideration Affecting Validity.

Practice Aids: Attorneys' Fees, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 233 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1229.

Am Jur quoted in Fitzpatrick v. Kellner 187 Miss 843, 193 So 911.

Am Jur cited in Cone v. Benjamin, 157 Fla 800, 27 So2d 90.

RCL quoted in American Vitrified Products Co. v. Crooks, 20 Ohio L. Abs. 627, motion to certify record overruled. June 12. 1935.

p. 360, n. 19. It has been held that a contingent fee which reaches or approaches 50 per cent of the recovery ceases to be a measure of due compensation for professional services rendered, and makes the lawyer a partner or proprietor in the lawsuit. Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, 4 L ed 2d 380, 80 S Ct 401.

It has been held that the percentage charged by an attorney under a contingent fee agreement may be greater where the amount of the claim is small than where the recovery is large, without rendering the fee unlawful. Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, 4 L ed 2d 380, 80 S Ct 401.

p. 360, n. 1.

A contract between an attorney and client that the attorney shall have one third of the amount recovered for his client in litigation over the ownership of property is one to be closely scrutinized to safeguard the client against overreaching by the attorney. Norrell v Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230, 4 A2d 88, 120 ALR 1238.

p. 360, n. 2.

An agreement between the executors of an estate amounting to more than a million dollars, and a law firm of which one of them was a member, for the rendition of services in the settlement of the estate and the adjustment of inheritance taxes, in consideration of a fee of reasonable amount, is not against public policy, particularly where the compensation of the executors was limited by the will to 5 per cent of the income of the estate in excess of $15,000 per annum. Jones v. Peabody, 182 Wash 148, 45 P(2d) 915, 100 ALR 64.

§ 165. — Effect of Agreement to Pay Costs and Expenses.

Am Jur cited in Cone v. Benjamin, 157 Fla 800, 27 So2d 90.

§ 166. — In Divorce and Alimony Proceedings.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1228.

Am Jur quoted in Evans v. Hartley, 57 Ga. App. 598, 196 S. E. 273 (n. 13).

Am Jur cited in Cone v. Benjamin, 157 Fla 800, 27 So2d 90.

Dannenberg v. Dannenberg, 151 Kan 600, 100 P2d 667.

Bucknam v. Bucknam, 347 Mo 1039, 151 SW(2d) 1097.

State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Asso. v Jensen, 171 Neb 1, 105 NW2d 459; State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Asso. v Dunker, 160 Neb 779, 71 NW2d 502.

Re Smith, 42 Wash2d 188, 254 P2d 464.

RCL quoted in Opperud v. Bussey, 172 Okla 625, 46 P (2d) 319.

p. 362, n. 13. Since contingent fee contracts in divorce actions are contrary to public policy they should be eradicated from practice, and, moreover, an attorney in a divorce action may not recover what his services are reasonably worth. Baskerville v Baskerville, — Minn —, 75 NW2d 762, overruling Klampe v Klampe, 137 Minn 227, 163 NW 295, and 145 Minn 404, 177 NW 629.

§ 167. — Effect of Agreement as Equitable Assignment.

Am Jur cited in Com. v. Benjamin, 157 Fla 800, 27 So2d 90.

Page 362. Add, following "of the judgment" in third line of the section: or proceeds of settlement.

p. 362, n. 14. Mirasola v. Rodgers, 120 W Va 685, 200 SE 30, 124 ALR 1504.

Anno: 124 ALR 1513.

An agreement between the payee of a note and an attorney that the latter should collect the note and have for his fee a fixed portion of what he could collect, constitutes an immediate equitable assignment pro tanto of that portion. Mirasola v. Rodgers, 120 W Va 685, 200 SE 30, 124 ALR 1504.

As to collusive settlement prior to collection or suit as extinguishing such equitable assignment, see infra, § 172 (Supp.).

p. 362, notes 17, 18. Anno: 124 ALR 1509.

Page 362. Add, following note 19: Under some circumstances it has been held that an attorney has an equitable assignment under a contingent fee contract of a portion of his client's share in a decedent's estate,[19.5] while under other circumstances the existence of such an assignment has been denied.[19.51]

19.5 Anno: 175 ALR 1139.

19.51 Anno: 175 ALR 1137.

An agreement by the distributee of a decedent's estate to pay an attorney retained to look after her interests a stated percentage of all she should receive after paying the fees of another attorney is not an equitable assignment pro tanto of the distributee's interest. Purman's Estate, 358 Pa 187, 56 A2d 86, 175 ALR 1129.

§ 168. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1259.

§ 169. Fraud, Bad Faith, Negligence.

Am Jur cited in Re Thomasson, 347 Mo 748, 148 SW(2d) 757.

Page 363. Insert at beginning of section: A lawyer who does not at all times represent his client with undivided fidelity is not entitled to compensation for his services.[6.5] p. 363, n. 9. It has been held that an attorney's delay from October 18 to October 24 in filing an answer is not such neglect as justifies the client in refusing to pay his fee, where a default judgment had been entered against the client as of October 13, so that the answer would not have been effective even though filed immediately. Lyons v Hall (La App) 90 So2d 519, 60 ALR2d 1003.

6.5 Re Thomasson, 355 Mo 274, 196 SW2d 155, 170 ALR 1170.

§ 170. Serving Adverse Interests.

Am Jur cited in Estate of Rorem, 245 Iowa 1125, 66 NW2d 292, 47 ALR2d 1089.

p. 363, n. 12. It has been held that the good faith or honesty of an attorney representing adverse interests without consent of the parties does not entitle him to compensation. Re Estate of Rorem, 245 Iowa 1125, 66 NW2d 292, 47 ALR2d 1089.

An executor's attorney whose services are found to have a reasonable value of $2,000 has been held not deprived of the right to any compensation by his representation of the executor's brother in a suit brought by the latter to establish his and the executor's equitable interest in realty of the estate, which was opposed by the other beneficiaries under the will, where it appeared that the suit was commenced nearly two years after the estate was opened and after much of the attorney's work was done, and where the other beneficiaries were at all times represented by other attorneys of their own choice; error was not committed under such circumstances by making a reduced award of $1,500. Re Estate of Rorem, 245 Iowa 1125, 66 NW2d 292, 47 ALR2d 1089.

Page 363. Add at end of section: Where an attorney has accepted employment to represent an interest adverse to that of a former client, the courts have, on the facts presented, held that the attorney's conduct did not free the former client from the obligation to pay the attorney the fees called for by the contract between the attorney and the former client.[12.5] In some, but not all, cases the courts have refused to enforce the employment contract between the attorney and the later client.[12.51]

12.5 Anno: 52 ALR2d 1289.

12.51 Anno: 52 ALR2d 1289, 1290.

§ 171. Failure of Performance, Withdrawal, or Abandonment of Case.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1259.

Am Jur quoted in Odom v Hilton, 105 Ga App 286, 124 SE2d 415.

Am Jur cited in Moore v Fellner, 50 Cal 2d 330, 325 P2d 857.

Empire State Ins. Co. v Chafetz (CA5 Fla) 302 F2d 828.

R. C. L. quoted in Beaumont v. J. H. Hamlen & Son, 190 Ark 630, 81 SW2d 24.

RCL cited in Young v. Tian (Tex Civ App) 150 SW(2d) 317.

p. 364, n. 18.

An attorney's abandonment of his client so as to lose his rights under the contract between them cannot be predicated upon his advice and protest to the client against making what he regarded as an improvident settlement of an action which had been advanced by him and counsel employed by him to the point of being set for trial, notwithstanding that the client had the right to settle without attorney's consent. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965.

Refusal of an attorney having a contingent fee contract to aid his client in making what the former regards as an improvident settlement does not amount to a violation of his contract or defeat recovery under a statute which gives him a lien upon the cause of action, the client having made the settlement without his consent. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965.

§ 172. Discharge or Prevention of Performance by Client.

Am Jur quoted in Goodkind v. Wolkowsky, 132 Fla 63, 180 So 538 (notes 20–2).

Am Jur cited in Com. use of Clay County v. Sizemore, 269 Ky. 722, 108 S. W. (2d) 733 (notes 20, 1).

South Carolina Pub. Serv. Authority v. Weeks, 201 SC 199, 22 SE(2d) 249.

p. 364, n. 1. Wojcik v Miller Bakeries Corp. 2 NY2d 631, 142 NE2d 409; Re Montgomery, 272 NY 323, 6 NE2d 40, 109 ALR 669 (stating that an attorney engaged under a contract for a definite purpose, and not under a general retainer, is entitled to compensation on quantum meruit).

See infra, § 182 (Supplement).

If the discharge of an attorney by client is without cause, the client is liable for compensation and damages. Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719.

Where an attorney has no lien in the absence of an agreement therefor, his remedy for a wrongful discharge is by an independent action. Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P2d 63, 124 ALR 719.

A client exercising his power to discharge his attorney and terminate the relation subjects himself to liability in the amount of the reasonable value of services rendered, and under some conditions to liability for damages for breach of contract where the discharge has been wrongful. Re Lachmund, 179 Or 420, 170 P2d 748, 166 ALR 479

When an executor employs, as attorney for the estate, the person selected by the testator, without employing such attorney for any definite time or for the completion of a specified project, it is within both the power and the right of the executor to discharge the attorney, at any time, subject only to liability to compensate the attorney in the reasonable value of the services rendered prior to termination of the employment. Re Lachmund, 179 Or 420, 170 P2d 748, 166 ALR 479.

p. 364, n. 3.

Judgment for plaintiff in an action for services rendered as attorney is supported by a finding that plaintiff was employed to prosecute a claim for personal injuries sustained in an automobile accident for a fee of one third of the recovery in case of suit or one fourth if settlement should be obtained and worked on the case until he obtained a settlement, notwithstanding further findings that the defendant subsequently retained another attorney unknown to the plaintiff until that attorney entered appearance in the action which the plaintiff had brought and that the draft in settlement was made payable to the client and such attorney, where it was also found that plaintiff was never discharged as attorney. Miller v Urban, 123 Conn 331, 195 A 193, 118 ALR 951.

In case of the substitution of attorneys without cause, the discharged attorney's right to recover a fee which by agreement was contingent on recovery of money or other property does not arise until recovery through the services of the substituted attorney. Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal (2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719.

Page 364. Add, following note 3: Where an agreement between the payee of a note and an attorney that the latter should collect the note and have for his fee a fixed portion of what he should collect constitutes an immediate equitable assignment pro tanto of that portion,[3.1] a collusive settlement, prior to collection or suit, between payee and payor, after the latter has notice of the attorney's assignment, does not extinguish it.[3.2]

An attorney who is discharged for sufficient cause has no right of recovery.[3.3]

When the employment under a general or periodic retainer fee or salary contract is for a definite period, the wrongful discharge of attorney prior to the expiration of the specified period constitutes a breach of the contract, and has been variously held to entitle the attorney to the stated compensation for the entire period,[3.5] or to be compensated on the basis of quantum meruit for services theretofore performed under the contract,[3.51] or to the recovery of damages.[3.52]

[3.1] See supra, § 167 (Supp.).

[3.2] Mirasola v. Rodgers, 120 W Va 685, 200 SE 30, 124 ALR 1504.

[3.3] Re Montgomery, 272 NY 323, 6 NE(2d) 40, 109 ALR 669

[3.5] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680.

[3.51] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680.

[3.52] Anno: 43 ALR2d 680.

§ 173. —Settlement Compromise, or Dismissal of Suit.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1221, 2:1260.

Page 365. Add, following note 9: A statute providing that where an action or cause of action is settled by agreement without the consent of the attorney for plaintiff, the court shall upon motion enter judgment for a reasonable fee in favor of such attorney, does not contemplate the service of more than one attorney or firm of attorneys, and does not contemplate a fee to the attorney retained by the client and to a firm of attorneys employed by the former to assist him.[9.5]

[9.5] St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965.

§ 175. Death, Incapacity, or Disbarment of Attorney.

Am Jur quoted in Roe v. Sears, R. & Co. (CCA 7th) 132 F(2d) 829.

p. 365, n. 13. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669 (holding that where the attorney is employed under express contract, recovery is limited in quantum meruit to the contract price).

p. 365, n. 14. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669.

As to measure of recovery being limited by terms of contract, see infra, § 201.

Page 366. Add, following note 20: However the contrary view has been taken.[20.5] [20.5] Stein v. Shaw. 6 NJ 525. 79 A2d 310.

§ 176. Illegality of Contract of Employment.

R. C. L. quoted in Hollister v. Ulvi. 199 Minn. 269. 271 N. W. 493.

§ 177. — Contracts Procured through Solicitation.

Am Jur quoted in Bump v District Ct. 232 Iowa 623. 5 NW(2d) 914.

RCL cited in Brown v. Durham, 175 Okla 500. 53 P2d 551; Re Durham. 190 Okla 588. 126 P(2d) 69.

§ 178. — Right to Compensation on a Quantum Meruit.

Am Jur quoted in Ownby v Prisock, — Miss —, 138 So 2d 279.

Am Jur cited in Rosenberg v. Lawrence, 10 Cal. (2d) 590, 75 P. (2d) 1082 (notes 17. 18) (dissent. op.).

RCL cited in Rosenberg v. Lawrence, 10 Cal2d 590, 75 P2d 1082, affirming (Cal App) 69 P(2d) 200; Evans v. Hartley. 57 Ga App 598, 196 SE 273.

p. 367, n. 17. Butler v. Young, 121 W Va 176. 2 SE(2d) 250. 121 ALR 1119

p. 367, n. 18. Darnell v. Broken Bow, 139 Neb 844. 299 NW 274. 136 ALR 101.

p. 367. n. 19.

In Callahan v. Jones, 200 Wash 241, 93 P (2d) 326, 123 ALR 1178, a statute forbidding a prosecuting attorney from being engaged as attorney or counsel for any party in a civil action depending upon the same facts as those involved in a criminal proceeding participated in by him was held to preclude the recovery on the contract or on quantum meruit of fees for services rendered in the recovery of stolen property, based upon an agreement made previous to the termination of the prosecution undertaken by such officer for the theft thereof

p. 368, n. 1. McCarthy v. Santangelo, 137 Conn 410, 78 A2d 240 (where the agreement created an inducement to violate public policy).

Page 368. Add, following note 5: And where an attorney is to receive one-third of an alimony award as his compensation for services in a divorce action, he will not be allowed recovery on quantum meruit.[5.3]

A fee on a quantum meruit basis is in effect provided for by a statute which provides in terms that in case settlement without consent of the attorney is made by parties after suit is filed, the court shall upon motion enter judgment for a reasonable fee in favor of such attorney and against the party in whose favor judgment may have been rendered, if the cause had proceeded to trial, and that the amount shall not necessarily be limited to the amount of the settlement.[5.5]

[5.3] McCarthy v. Santangelo. 137 Conn 410. 78 A2d 240.

[5.5] St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546. 129 SW(2d) 970. 122 ALR 965.

§ 180. Retention of Fees from Funds in Hand.

Page 369. Add new paragraph at end of section: Some jurisdictions, expressly or by implication, support the view that an attorney may set off his claim for unrelated services against his client's claim for money collected, either under the theory of attorney's lien or under the rule with respect to offset of debts generally.[9.5] Some courts, while recognizing the right of an attorney to set off his claim for services resulting in the collection of money for a client against the client's claim for the fund, have denied the attorney's right to set off his claim for unrelated services against the client's claim for the money collected.[9.51]

[9.5, 9.51] See supra, § 131 (Supp).

§ 181. Remedy by Suit.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1211, 2:1212, 2:1214–2:1220, 2:1222–2:1226. 2:1229–2:1231. 2:1233, 2:1236. 2:1237.

Am Jur cited in Bolte v. Rainville. 138 NJ Eq 508. 48 A2d 191.

p. 369, n. 13. Lyons v Hall (La App) 90 So2d 519, 60 ALR2d 1003.

§ 182. — For Wrongful Discharge.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1220.

Am Jur quoted in Goodkind v. Wolkowsky. 132 Fla 63. 180 So 538 (notes 4–5).

Am Jur cited in Berry v Nichols, 227 Ark 297, 298 SW2d 40.

p. 370, n. 4. Re Montgomery. 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 616 et seq.

p. 370, n. 5. Higgins v Beaty. 242 NC 479. 88 SE2d 80, 54 ALR2d 600.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 609 et seq.

p. 370, n. 6. Re Montgomery. 272 N. Y. 323. 6 N. E. (2d) 40. 109 A.L.R. 669.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 615. 618–620.

p. 370, n. 7. Anno: 54 ALR2d 616.

p. 370, n 8. Anno: 54 ALR2d 608, 609.

Page 370. Add new paragraph following note 9: It seems that in practically all jurisdictions an attorney employed under a contingent fee contract who is discharged without fault on his part may maintain an action to recover the reasonable value of his services rendered up to the time of his discharge.[9.51] And in some jurisdictions such a discharge of such an attorney is regarded as putting an end to the contract, so that his recovery of compensation, if any, must be upon quantum meruit.[9.53] However, other jurisdictions, in addition to the right to maintain an action for the reasonable value of the services, permit such a discharged attorney to maintain an action to recover damages as for breach of the contract,[9.55] or permit him to recover as for constructive performance.[9.57] In jurisdictions where the discharged attorney may recover as for constructive performance, it is logical to suppose that three courses are open to him: (1) an action to recover the stipulated contingent fee, (2) an action for damages for breach of contract, or (3) a suit on quantum meruit. That choice of remedies has been distinctly recognized in at least one jurisdiction.[9.59] According to one view, if the attorney elects to sue for the fee his suit must be brought after the client has obtained a settlement or otherwise recovered in his action.[9.61] But according to certain other cases, recovery of the full fee, as damages, may be based on any showing that the client's claim was collectible or that the attorney probably would have succeeded in collecting it.[9.63] It has been intimated that if the attorney acquiesces in his discharge his right to recover will be limited to the quantum meruit.[9.65]

[9.51] Anno: 136 ALR 252.

[9.53] Anno: 136 ALR 232, 254.

See Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223. 21 A(2d) 396. 136 ALR 226.

[9.55] Anno: 136 ALR 232, 242.

[9.57] Anno: 136 ALR 232, 233.

[9.59] Anno: 136 ALR 232.

[9.61] Anno: 136 ALR 232.

[9.63] Anno: 136 ALR 232, 245.

[9.65] Anno: 136 ALR 233.

It is not clear, however, what, if anything, is to be done to manifest nonacquiescence in a discharge, since an offer to continue performance of the employment contract must ordinarily be futile, and in fact absurd. The cases contain little to indicate that such an offer is required. Anno: 136 ALR 233.

As to measure of damages where attorney employed under contingent fee contract is discharged without fault on his part, see infra, § 202.

§ 183. Recovery in Client's Action.

Am Jur quoted in Grigsby v. Hopkins (Tex Civ App) 218 SW2d 275, refused.

As to right to contest entry of final divorce decree on ground of nonpayment of fees, see supra, § 106 (Supplement).

p. 370, n. 10. As to inclusion of attorneys' fees in judgment in action for wages due, under statute providing therefor, see MASTER AND SERVANT.

As to the right of a court in a bastardy proceeding to order a father to pay attorneys' fees, under a statute requiring him to support the child, see BASTARDS, Vol. 7, § 129, n. 17.1 (Supp.)

p. 370, n. 11. It has been held that the court in a divorce action has no authority to fix the amount of attorneys' fees each party is to pay their respective attorneys. O'Neill v O'Neill, 164 Neb 674, 83 NW2d 92, 66 ALR2d 875.

§ 184. Right of Attorney to Continue Action Which Client Has Settled or Compromised.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1254.

Am Jur quoted in Mabry v. Knabb, 151 Fla 432, 10 So(2d) 330.

§ 185. — Divorce or Other Marital Action.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1228.

Am Jur quoted in State ex rel. McNabb v. Allen Superior Ct, 225 Ind 402, 75 NE2d 788.

Am Jur cited in Hadlock v Hadlock (Fla App) 137 So 2d 873.

Hardy v Hardy, 228 Ind 295, 92 NE2d 221; State ex rel. McNabb v Allen, Superior Ct, 225 Ind 402, 75 NE2d 788.

Kull v. Brown (Tex Civ App) 165 SW2d 1011.

p. 373, n. 11. As to right to contest entry of final divorce decree on ground of nonpayment of fees, see supra, § 106 (Supplement).

§ 186. Recourse against Adverse Party Where Suit Is Compromised or Settled.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1234, 2:1235, 2:1243.

Am Jur cited in Kull v. Brown (Tex Civ App) 165 SW(2d) 1011.

§ 187. Pleading.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1211, 2:1212, 2:1214-2:1220, 2:1222-2:1226, 2:1229, 2:1231 2:1233 2:1235

p. 374, n. 5. It has been held that, in an action by an attorney to recover compensation for legal services, an averment of a specified sum as the "agreed and reasonable fee" must be considered in the conjunctive, as pleaded. Caughlan v International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, 52 Wash 2d 656, 328 P2d 707, 78 ALR2d 313.

§ 188. Burden of Proof.

Am Jur quoted in Missildine v. Miller, 231 Iowa 371, 1 NW(2d) 110.

Am Jur cited in De Long v. Owsley (Ky) 239 SW2d 58.

Buechner v. Goodman, 174 Md 131, 197 A 586 (n. 10).

§ 189. — As to Fairness of Contract; Presumptions.

Am Jur cited in Setzer v Robinson, 57 Cal 2d 213, 18 Cal Rptr 524, 368 P2d 124.

Woods v First Nat. Bank, 314 Ill App 340, 41 NE2d 235.

Lawrence v. Tschirgi, 244 Iowa 386, 57 NW2d 46.

De Long v. Owsley (Ky) 239 SW2d 58.

Buechner v. Goodman, 174 Md 131, 197 A 586 (n. 20).

State v. MacIntyre, 238 Wis 406, 298 NW 200.

R. C. L. cited in Rippey v. Wilson, 280 Mich. 233, 273 N. W. 552.

§ 190. Proof of Value of Services.

Practice Aids: Attorneys' Fees, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 233 et seq.

Am Jur quoted in Curran v Security Ins. Co. (DC Ark) 195 F Supp 562, app dismd (CA8) 296 F2d 733.

Murray v Eagle (Okla) 300 P2d 652.

Am Jur cited in De Long v. Owsley (Ky) 239 SW2d 58.

Buechner v. Goodman, 174 Md 131, 197 A 586.

State ex rel. Beck v Associates Discount Corp. 168 Neb 298, 96 NW2d 55, mod and reh den 168 Neb 803, 97 NW2d 583.

Miller v. Burkett, 191 Okla 521, 130 P2d 996.

RCL cited in Citron v. Fields, 30 Cal App (2d) 51, 85 P(2d) 534.

Baruch v. Giblin, 122 Fla 59, 164 So 831.

p. 376, n. 9.

Objection should be sustained to the testimony of an experienced lawyer as to reasonable attorney's fee for the defense of accident claims within the coverage of an employers liability policy where, in answer to a hypothetical question based upon the data in a tabulation prepared by the statistical department of the insured, he stated that the reasonable value of the services would be exactly the figure shown by the tabulation, which was in itself inadmissible in evidence as not reflecting the actual expense or attorneys' fees incurred in respect of the particular claims in question. Ocean Acci. & G. Corp. v. Southwestern Bell Teleph. Co (CCA 8th) 100 F(2d) 441, 122 ALR 133, writ of certiorari denied in 306 US 658, 83 L ed 1056, 59 S Ct 775.

§ 191. — Admissibility of Expert Testimony.

Practice Aids: Attorneys' Fees, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 233 et seq.

Am Jur cited in Campbell v. Green (CCA 5th) 112 F(2d) 143.

Wildes v Dappinian, 87 RI 131, 138 A2d 823.

p. 377, n. 18. Re Dehner, 230 Iowa 490, 298 NW 656, 143 ALR 669.

But the court may not ignore the factual testimony as to the extent and nature of the services. Re Dehner, 230 Iowa 490, 298 NW 656, 143 ALR 669.

§ 192. — Conclusiveness of Expert Evidence.

Practice Aids: Attorneys' Fees, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 233 et seq.

Am Jur quoted in Adams v Brothers, 155 Kan 29, 122 P(2d) 757

State ex rel. Beck v Associates Discount Corp. 168 Neb 298, 96 NW2d 55, mod and reh den 168 Neb 803, 97 NW2d 583.

Am Jur cited in Campbell v Green (CCA 5th) 112 F(2d) 143.

State v Zachary, — Or —, 370 P2d 237.

Gulf Paving Co v Lofstedt 144 Tex 17 188 SW2d 155; Brown Oil Tools, Inc. v Broughton (Tex Civ App) 353 SW2d 505, error ref n r e.

p. 378, n. 19.

In determining what would be a reasonable fee for the services of an attorney in an action, the trial court and the court on appeal are not required to lay aside their general knowledge and ideas of the value of such services, and are not entirely controlled by the testimony in behalf of one of the parties, although it is not directly contradicted by the other party. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965.

§ 194. Trial; Questions for Court and Jury.

Am Jur cited in Steiner v. Stein, 2 NJ 367 66 A2d 719.

Page 378. Add at end of section: Whether a general or periodic retainer fee or salary contract may have been mutually rescinded or modified by the acts or conduct of the parties has been held, under particular circumstances, to be a question of fact.[9.5] The services to be covered by the amount specified in a general or periodic retainer contract have been held, in some cases, to present a question of fact for the jury.[9.51]

9.5 Anno: 43 ALR2d 681.
9.51 Anno: 43 ALR2d 689.

§ 195. Under Express Contract.

Forms: Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1213.

Am Jur quoted in Higgins v Beaty, 242 NC 479, 88 SE2d 80

Am Jur cited in National Bank of Topton v Holland, 190 Pa Super 501, 154 A2d 252.

p. 378, n. 11.

The amount to be taken as a basis for computing the fee of an attorney successfully prosecuting, for a percentage of any amount recovered, a claim on a fire insurance policy containing a standard mortgagee clause against an insurer which, upon the occurrence of the loss, had paid the mortgagee and taken an assignment of the mortgage but had refused to pay the owner of the insured property the amount by which the loss exceeded the mortgage, is the amount recovered and not the balance paid by the insurer after deducting the mortgage debt, for which the owner was personally liable. Manzo v. Dullea (C. C. A.) 96 F. (2d) 135, 116 A.L.R. 1241.

Page 379. Add following note 14: Where an attorney's contingent fee is, under the contract between him and his client, to be based on a percentage or fraction of the judgment or award recovered by the client, and the total amount eventually allowed the latter includes an item of interest, the questions whether, and how, the allowance of interest affects the computation of the attorney's fee depend on such variable factors as the language of the contingent fee contract, the effect of applicable statutes, and the conduct of the parties during the time the attorney-client relationship existed, and no firm answers of a general nature can be made.[14.5]

14.5 Anno: 82 ALR2d 953.

It has been held that, under an agreement between an attorney and his client for a contingent fee based on the "amounts recovered" in a condemnation suit, under which agreement the client is to retain all of a specified amount, which had previously been offered him by the condemnor, and the attorney is to receive graduated percentages of the excesses over various stipulated amounts of recovery, the attorney is not entitled to have the interest on the condemnation award added to the amount of such award for the purpose of determining the amount of his fee, but is entitled to so much of such interest as is attributable to the attorney's portion of the award under the terms of the agreement. Maw v Noble, 10 Utah 2d 440, 354 P2d 121, 82 ALR2d 949.

Page 379. Add at end of section: Contingent fees may be disallowed as between attorney and client in spite of contingent fee retainer agreements, where the amount becomes large enough to be out of all proportion to the value of the professional services rendered.[15.5]

15.5 Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, 4 L ed 2d 380, 80 S Ct 401.

§ 196. — When Contract Is Invalid.

p. 379, nn. 17, 18. Slayton v Russ, 205 Ark 474, 169 SW2d 571, 146 ALR 64.

Anno: 143 ALR 732; 56 ALR2d 48.

§ 197. — For Additional Services.

Am Jur cited in Wolf v Mutual Ben. Health & Acci. Asso. 188 Kan 694, 366 P2d 219.

Page 379. Add new paragraph at end of section: One employed as general counsel for a corporation, or to attend to another's legal business generally, or within a specified area or district, at a stated salary or for other specified compensation, is not ordinarily entitled to extra compensation for legal services performed for the client during the period of such employment, in the absence of any agreement or understanding to that effect.[7.5] The phrase "court appearances," as used in a provision that the attorney is to receive extra compensation therefor, is not necessarily limited to the physical appearance of the attorney in court, and may, under some circumstances, include work one in his office in connection with pending litigation.[7.51]

Whether the work or services for which the additional compensation is claimed was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was entered into may be a consideration of importance in determining the question.[7.52] The fact that the attorney makes no claim for extra compensation for particular services at the time of the rendition thereof,[7.53] or not until after the termination of the contract of employment,[7.54] has been given consideration as weighing against his right to such compensation.

7.5 Anno: 43 ALR2d 684.

7.51 Froedtert Grain & Malting Co. v Peter P. Woboril, Inc. 265 Wis 456, 61 NW2d 855, 43 ALR2d 671.

Anno: 43 ALR2d 684.

7.52 Anno: 43 ALR2d 684.
7.53 Anno: 43 ALR2d 684.
7.54 Anno: 43 ALR2d 684.

§ 198. Under Implied Contract.

Practice Aids: Attorneys' Fees, Am Jur Proof of Facts pp 233 et seq.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1256–2:1258.

Am Jur quoted in Curran v Security Ins. Co. (DC Ark) 195 F Supp 562, app dismd (CA8) 296 F2d 733.

Monsanto Chemical Co. v Grandbush (DC Ark) 162 F Supp 797.

Forbes v Whitsitt, 155 Kan 598, 127 P2d 450.

Am Jur cited in Schwartz v Schwerin, 85 Ariz 242, 336 P2d 144.

Hill v Superior Court, 46 Cal 2d 169, 293 P2d 10 (dissent op).

Beard v Westmoreland, 90 Ga App 632, 84 SE2d 93.

Trask v Kam (Hawaii) 352 P2d 320.

Wollard v Peterson, 145 Kan 631, 66 P2d 375 (notes 9–14).

Daly v. Donovan, 200 Minn 323, 273 NW 814 (n.8).

Prince v. Pathfinder L. Ins. Co. 133 Neb 705, 276 NW 661 (notes 9–13, 16).

Re Nixon, 21 NJ Mis R 333, 32 A(2d) 359.

Bolton v. Marshall, 153 Ohio St 250, 91 NE2d 508.

Page 380. Add, following "reasonably worth" in the third line on the page:[7.5]

7.5 Anno: 143 ALR 675; 56 ALR2d 18.

The courts recognize that the matter of fixing attorneys' fees is a matter of great difficulty and delicacy. Anno: 143 ALR 676.

A court cannot lay down any ironclad, inflexible rule for the fixing of attorneys' fees which can be applied in every case to determine the amount which will be reasonable and just compensation to an attorney. Anno: 143 ALR 676.

It has been said that while the difficulties are greater in the case of attorneys' fees, the underlying principles are the same as those governing the amount of compensation for nonprofessional services. On the other hand, it has been said that "there is but little analogy between the elements that control the determination of a lawyer's fee and those which determine the compensation of skilled craftsmen in other fields." Anno: 143 ALR 677.

The courts in a number of cases involving allowances to attorneys for services rendered to a semipublic trust, or pursuant to a semiofficial appointment, have set up as the criterion of their compensation the amounts paid to public officers for comparable services. Anno: 143 ALR 692; 56 ALR2d 45.

For a discussion the reasonableness, adequacy, or excessiveness of specific fees in specific types of actions, see annotation in 143 ALR 728 et seq.; 56 ALR2d 50–205.

The failure of an attorney, at the outset of his engagement, to inform the client what his fee would be and to keep detailed time records of services performed on behalf of the client has been held not to estop the attorney from claiming a large fee which the jury, on ample evidence, finds to be reasonable, notwithstanding a smaller fee previously charged the client for related services. Burnett v Graves (CA5th Tex) 230 F2d 49 56 ALR2d 1, cert den 351 US 984, 100 L ed 1498, 76 S Ct 1051.

p. 380, n. 8. Greenfield Villages, Inc. v. Thompson (Fla) 44 So2d 679.

Re Atwood's Trust, 227 Minn 495, 35 NW2d 736, 9 ALR2d 1126.

Cooke v. Gove, 61 Nev 55, 114 P(2d) 87, 135 ALR 855.

Anno: 143 ALR 718; 56 ALR2d 43.

It is proper for the court or jury to take into consideration the amounts usually charged or allowed for similar services in the same locality. Anno: 143 ALR 718; 56 ALR2d 43.

It has been held that the amount charged by an attorney in a case cannot be taken into consideration in determining the reasonable value of the services rendered by the attorney for the opposing party in the same case. Anno: 143 ALR 720.

It has been said that where the engagement admittedly was for the handling of the specific litigation, what the attorneys were charging in other cases, or what the circumstances were in which a different basis of compensation was made, were matters foreign to this already complex case. Burnett v Graves (CA5th Tex) 230 F2d 49, 56 ALR2d 1, cert den 351 US 984, 100 L ed 1498, 76 S Ct 1051.

It has frequently been recognized that the courts may look to minimum fee schedules adopted by bar associations as at least persuasive evidence of what constitutes a reasonable fee for legal services. Anno: 143 ALR 719, s. 56 ALR2d 45.

p. 380, n. 9. Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A(2d) 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Anno: 56 ALR2d 18 et seq.

A fee of 20 per cent of the recovery of $6,581 in an action for damage to real property as a result of bridge construction has been held inadequate and increased to 25 per cent in Noel Estate, Inc. v Dickson & Denny, 212 La 313, 31 So2d 810, 173 ALR 423, the court noting that the litigation extended over a period of almost 10 years and was heard by the supreme court on two different occasions, that it required the presentation of expert testimony on valuation, involved numerous points of law, and required the attorneys to engage in numerous conferences and make several trips to another city, and that other attorneys involved in similar litigation had collected from 25 per cent to 33⅓ per cent of the amount of recovery.

A charge of $250 has been held to be reasonable, under the circumstances, for services in defending a suit against a landlord under the rent control laws, where a default judgment had been entered, an answer was filed, the default judgment was set aside, the case was refixed for trial, and finally a dismissal was obtained for lack of prosecution. Lyons v Hall (La App) 90 So2d 519, 60 ALR2d 1003.

It has been said that the intangibles which bear upon the fairness of an attorney's fee defy translation into simple mathematics. Re Quinn 25 NJ 284, 135 A2d 869, 70 ALR2d 956.

p. 380, n. 10. Burnett v Graves (CA5th Tex) 230 F2d 49, 56 ALR2d 1, cert den 351 US 984, 100 L ed 1498, 76 S Ct 1051; Bank of China v Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. (DC Cal) 104 F Supp 59, affd (CA9th) 209 F2d 467, 48 ALR2d 172.

Frazer v First Nat. Bank, 235 Ala 252, 178 So 441, 126 ALR 1.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v Wallace, 136 Ill 87, 26 NE 493, 11 LRA 787.

Re Atwood's Trust, 227 Minn 495, 35 NW2d 736, 9 ALR2d 1126.

Darnell v Broken Bow, 139 Neb 844, 299 NW 274, 136 ALR 101.

Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A2d 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Anno: 143 ALR 697, 707, s. 56 ALR2d 34, 37–41.

p. 380, n. 11. Burnett v Graves (CA5th Tex) 230 F2d 49, 56 ALR2d 1, cert den 351 US 984 100 L ed 1498, 76 S Ct 1051; Bank of China v Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. (DC Cal) 104 F Supp 59, affd (CA9th) 209 F2d 467, 48 ALR2d 172.

Frazer v First Nat. Bank, 235 Ala 252, 178 So 441, 126 ALR 1.

St. Louis San Francisco R. Co. v Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW2d 970, 122 ALR 965.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v Wallace, 136 Ill 87, 26 NE 493, 11 LRA 787.

Nomey v Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. 212 La 820, 33 So2d 531, 1 ALR2d 946.

Re Atwood's Trust, 227 Minn 495, 35 NW2d 736, 9 ALR2d 1126.

Christ's Home v Mattson, 140 NJ Eq 433, 55 A2d 14, 173 ALR 651.

Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A2d 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Anno: 143 ALR 678–682, s. 56 ALR2d 20–24.

The novelty of the issues involved in the litigation has been referred to as affecting the difficulty, and hence the value, of legal services. Anno: 143 ALR 681, s. 56 ALR2d 23.

An award of $80,000 for services in successfully setting aside a lease of oil and gas interests has been sustained in Burnett v Graves (CA5th Tex) 230 F2d 49, 56 ALR2d 1, cert den 351 US 984 100 L ed 1498, 76 S Ct 1051, the court saying that there was an abundance of convincing expert evidence that characterized the litigation as difficult and complex, and fraught with much danger, and the handling of it by the attorneys as reflecting skilful ingenuity, especially in view of the acknowledged capacity of formidable adversaries with known repute as aggressive, vigorous, and tenacious fighters.

p. 380, n. 12. Bank of China v Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. (DC Cal) 104 F Supp 59, affd (CA9th) 209 F2d 467, 48 ALR2d 172.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v Wallace, 136 Ill 87, 26 NE 493, 11 LRA 787.

Re Atwood's Trust, 227 Minn 495, 35 NW2d 736, 9 ALR2d 1126.

Darnell v Broken Bow, 139 Neb 844, 299 NW 274, 136 ALR 101.

Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A2d 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Anno: 143 ALR 689, s. 56 ALR2d 28.

However, it has been indicated that the attorney's unique skill or experience should not be considered where the case was not such as to call for such specialized ability. Anno: 56 ALR2d 30.

p. 380, n. 14. Bank of China v Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. (DC Cal) 104 F Supp 59, affd (CA9th) 209 F2d 467, 48 ALR2d 172.

Nomey v Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. 212 La 820, 33 So2d 531, 1 ALR2d 946.

Re Atwood's Trust, 227 Minn 495, 35 NW2d 736, 9 ALR2d 1126.

Re Quinn, 25 NJ 284, 135 A2d 869, 70 ALR2d 956.

Re Lachmund's Estate, 179 Or 420, 170 P2d 748, 166 ALR 479.

Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A2d 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Higgins v J. B. Farnum Co. 61 RI 262, 200 A 538, 117 ALR 1003.

Anno: 143 ALR 693, s. 56 ALR2d 31.

Page 380. Add following note 14: Other general factors, more or less constant in the cases, which may properly be considered in passing upon the amount to be allowed as reasonable compensation to an attorney are the time and labor involved,[14.2] whether other employment is lost because of the undertaking,[14.21] the degree or amount of responsibility assumed by the attorney,[14.22] the contingency or certainty of the compensation,[14.23] the general economic conditions and price trends,[14.24] the overhead expenses of the attorney,[14.25] the number of attorneys employed, where the nature of the proceedings require the employment of two or more attorneys or firms,[14.26] the duplication of the services,[14.27] and the amount of useless or unnecessary work performed.[14.28]

There is some conflict in the expressions of the courts as to the propriety of considering the ability of the client to pay in assessing attorneys' fees. It has been said that this factor should not be considered, except perhaps in connection with the client's inability to pay a normal fee.[14.29] However, in a large number of cases the courts have taken cognizance of the financial status of the person to be charged in fixing reasonable compensation for legal services.[14.3] These general principles have been applied by the courts in awarding, or passing upon the propriety of, fees for services in a wide variety of actions or circumstances.[14.31]

14.2 Bank of China v Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. (DC Cal) 104 F Supp 59, affd (CA9th) 209 F2d 467, 48 ALR2d 172.

St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW2d 970, 122 ALR 965.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v Wallace, 136 Ill 87, 27 NE 493, 11 LRA 787.

Re Atwood's Trust, 227 Minn 495, 35 NW2d 736, 9 ALR2d 1126.

Darnell v Broken Bow, 139 Neb 844, 299 NW 274, 136 ALR 101.

Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A2d 640, 151 ALR 1384.

Anno: 143 ALR 682, s. 56 ALR2d 24.

14.21 Mellon v Fulton, 22 Okla 636, 98 P 911, 19 LRA NS 960.

Anno: 143 ALR 688, s. 56 ALR2d 27.

14.22 Re Atwood's Trust, 227 Minn 495, 35 NW2d 736, 9 ALR2d 1126.

Anno: 143 ALR 698, s. 56 ALR2d 35.

14.23 Oxborough v St. Martin, 169 Minn 72, 210 NW 854, 49 ALR 1115.

Anno: 143 ALR 705, s. 56 ALR2d 36.

14.24 Anno: 143 ALR 721, s. 56 ALR2d 46.

14.25 Anno: 143 ALR 721, s. 56 ALR2d 47.

14 26 Anno: 143 ALR 686.

14.27 Anno: 143 ALR 685, s. 56 ALR2d 49.

14.28 Anno: 143 ALR 686, s. 56 ALR2d 49.

In sustaining an award against a claim of inadequacy, the court in Cirimele v Shinazy, 134 Cal App2d 50, 285 P2d 311, 52 ALR2d 860, pointed out that a good deal of the legal work for which compensation was sought had to do with defendant's successful motion for change of venue, and said that the trial court might well have considered that plaintiff brought this expense upon himself by filing the action in the wrong county in the first place.

14.29 Anno: 143 ALR 716, s. 56 ALR2d 41.

14.3 Huffman's Estate, 349 Pa 59, 36 A2d 640, 151 ALR 1384 (estate matters).

Garden v Riley, 116 W Va 723, 183 SE 46, 143 ALR 662.

Anno: 143 ALR 712, s. 56 ALR2d 41.

14.31 Anno: 143 ALR 728 958, s. 56 ALR2d 50–205

p. 381, n. 15. Garden v. Riley. 116 W Va 723, 183 SE 46, 143 ALR 662

Anno: 143 ALR 684: 56 ALR2d 26.

p. 381. n. 16. Anno: 143 ALR 682.

A $10,000 fee charged by two lawyers for their services in negotiating for the refinancing of a mortgage against a resort tract, drawing up a trust agreement for the holding of the tract for development and sale, and expending efforts over a two-year period in organization, promotion, and management, has been held not to be excessive. Appeal of Burke, 378 Pa 616 108 A2d 58, 47 ALR2d 1367.

Page 381. Add, following note 16: Generally, if a party desires to litigate, he must pay his attorney a reasonable fee for his professional services; and if the amount involved is small and the client instructs the attorney to do a large amount of work, the former cannot complain if the bill seems disproportionately large, providing he had a full knowledge of the facts.[16.1] On the other hand, there is some duty resting upon the attorney, if he intends to base his bill entirely upon the reasonable value of his services, to make clear to the client that the amount of work involved will cause the fee to be out of proportion to the money involved, so that the client may determine whether or not he desires to proceed with the matter.[16.2] If the attorney, under such circumstances, fails to so inform his client, the court may feel justified in reducing the fee.[16.3]

16.1 Higgins v. J. B. Farnum Co. 61 RI 262, 200 A 538, 117 ALR 1003.

Annotation: 117 A.L.R. 1008.

16.2 Higgins v. J. B. Farnum Co. 61 RI 262, 200 A. 538, 117 A.L.R. 1003.

Annotation: 117 A.L.R. 1008.

16.3 Higgins v. J. B. Farnum Co. 61 RI 262 200 A. 538, 117 A.L.R. 1003 (the fee was reduced as being excessive).

Annotation: 117 A.L.R. 1008.

Page 381. Add new paragraph following note 18: In several jurisdictions the courts have held that they may take into account, in determining the amount to be allowed as counsel fees, the fact that the services were necessarily, or by agreement, to be rendered gratuitously unless successful.[18.5] However, in other jurisdictions the courts have held that as a general rule the fact that an attorney has agreed that he shall make no charge for his services unless successful, or that the services are necessarily gratuitous unless successful, cannot be considered in determining the amount to be allowed as compensation.[18.6]

18.5 Anno: 135 ALR 860.

18.6 Cooke v. Gove. 61 Nev 55, 114 P(2d) 87. 135 ALR 855.

Anno: 135 ALR 865.

§ 199. Interest on Fees.

p. 381, n. 20.

Where a claim for attorney's fees, not fixed by agreement, is filed before a commissioner of accounts and the amount thereof is contested before the commissioner and is reduced by him, interest is chargeable on the amount allowed only from the date of the filing of the commissioner's report fixing the amount of the recovery, when the commissioner's report is finally affirmed. Garden v. Riley, 116 W Va 723, 183 SE 46 143 ALR 662

p. 381, n. 2. It has been held that interest on the amount of compensation awarded an attorney for legal services runs from the date of the demand for such compensation, but interest on attorneys' fees awarded in the action for compensation commences on the date of the judgment. Burnett v Graves (CA5th Tex) 230 F2d 49, 56 ALR2d 1, cert den 351 US 984, 100 L ed 1498, 76 S Ct 1051.

§ 200. Statutory Limitation on Amount of Fees.

Am Jur cited in Haberberger v. Myer. 4 NJ 116, 71 A2d 717.

p. 381, n. 7. Annotation: 103 A.L.R. 907.

An attorney is not unconstitutionally deprived of his property, in violation of the Federal Constitution, by being limited to a fee of $3 for preparing the papers to secure a claim under the War Risk Insurance Act of September 2, 1914, chap. 293 (38 Stat. at L. 711).

Margolin v. United States, 269 U. S. 93, 70 L. ed. 176, 46 S. Ct. 64.

p. 382, n. 9.

The Supreme Court of the United States has nullified the holdings in the state courts in regard to the inapplicability of such statutes to contracts entered into before the enactment of the legislation restricting the amount of fees. Annotation: 69 L. ed. 779.

§ 201. On Death of Attorney.

p. 382, n. 11. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669.

§ 202. On Discharge by Client.

Am Jur quoted in Higgins v Beaty, 242 NC 479, 88 SE2d 80.

Am Jur cited in Berry v Nichols, 227 Ark 297, 298 SW2d 40

Bolton v Marshall, 153 Ohio St 250, 91 NE2d 508.

p. 382, n. 16. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669.

Page 382. Add, following note 16: As to whether, in a suit upon quantum meruit, an express contract as to the amount of compensation will control the recovery there is a conflict of authority.[16.1] Some courts hold that where the attorney is discharged without cause, he is not limited by the contract price, but may recover the reasonable value of his services, whatever that value may be.[16.11] Other courts declare that an attorney discharged without cause cannot recover in quantum meruit more than he would have been entitled to had he been permitted to complete the performance of his contract.[16.12]

[16.1] Anno: 109 ALR 674; 54 ALR2d 621.

[16.11] Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669.

Anno: 109 ALR 675; 43 ALR2d 679; 54 ALR 2d 621.

The fact that the contract under which an attorney is employed has been canceled and annulled by the discharge of the attorney without fault on his part cannot limit the amount of recovery by the attorney upon quantum meruit, although it may be considered in fixing the amount of the reasonable value of the service rendered. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669.

The allowance of $10,000 for services rendered by an attorney under a contract by which he was to receive $5,000, where he had been discharged without cause after he had performed about five sixths of the service contracted for, was held, in the circumstances, to be the fair and reasonable value of the service rendered, and his right to compensation on the quantum meruit basis held not limited to the contract price. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669

[16.12] Anno: 109 ALR 676; 54 ALR2d 623.

p. 382, n. 17. Higgins v. Beaty, 242 NC 479, 88 SE2d 80, 54 ALR2d 600.

See Denio v. Huntington Beach, 22 Cal(2d) 580, 140 P(2d) 392, 149 ALR 320.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 611-614, 628.

Page 382. Add following note 17: Where an attorney who was substituted signed a stipulation with the new attorney that he was to receive 20 per cent of the recovery, a trial judge before whom the case was settled could not disregard the stipulation.[17.5]

[17.5] Wojcik v Miller Bakeries Corp. 2 NY2d 631, 142 NE2d 409.

p. 382, n. 19. Anno: 54 ALR2d 628.

p. 382, n. 20. Anno: 54 ALR2d 614, 615, 623-626.

p. 383, n. 1. As to application of this principle to quantum meruit actions, see preceding notes in this section.

p. 383, n. 2. Re Montgomery, 272 N. Y. 323, 6 N. E. (2d) 40, 109 A.L.R. 669.

Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, 4 L ed 2d 380, 80 S Ct 401.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 615, 621.

Page 383. Add following note 2: It has generally been held that an attorney who is discharged without cause or fault on his part before completely performing the specific work he was employed to do under a contract providing for a stipulated retainer fee, or a specific fixed fee, plus certain contingent fees may recover the retainer fee, or fixed fee, contracted to be paid.[2.5]

[2.5] Genrow v Flynn, 166 Mich 564, 131 NW 1115, 35 LRA NS 960, Ann Cas 1912D 638.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 626-628.

p. 383, n. 3. See Crowley v. Wolf, 281 NY 59, 22 NE(2d) 234, 131 ALR 970, infra, § 203 (Supp.). See infra, notes 5.51 et seq. (Supp.)

p. 383, notes 4-5. See infra, notes 5.51 et seq (Supp.).

Page 383. Add new paragraph following note 5: There seems to be no doubt that an attorney employed under a contingent fee contract who is discharged without fault on his part may, if he so elects, recover simply the reasonable value of the services rendered up to the time of his discharge.[5.51] And there is an increasing tendency to hold that an attorney so employed who is so discharged is not, as a general rule, entitled to recover on the contract, but may recover merely on a quantum meruit the reasonable value of the services he rendered.[5.52] However, in the majority of jurisdictions wherein the question has arisen, it has been held that an attorney employed under a contingent fee contract and discharged without fault on his part may recover damages as for breach of contract.[5.53] But in a minority of jurisdictions there has been laid down the doctrine (based largely on an opinion rendered by the New York Court of Appeals in the year 1916) that a client has the "right" to discharge his attorney at any time, with or without cause regardless of the terms of the employment contract, and that consequently the attorney cannot recover damages as for breach of contract, even though the agreement provided for a contingent fee.[5.54]

In some jurisdictions an attorney employed under a contingent fee contract who is discharged without fault on his part may recover, as damages, the full stipulated fee which, if expressed in percentage, is ordinarily computed on the amount the client is able to secure by settlement or judgment after the attorney's discharge. In some instances the rule allowing such recovery has been qualified, however, to the extent that it has been held that the attorney may recover a stipulated percentage computed on amount received by client after the attorney's discharge; that he may recover a stipulated percentage computed on amount recovered by substituted attorney, less reasonable abatements to be made in respect of expenses saved, etc.; that he may recover a stipulated percentage computed on amount secured in a settlement by substituted attorney; or that he may recover stipulated a percentage of the amount of the offer of a settlement procured by him for the client in accordance with her instructions, notwithstanding she then discharged him and refused to complete the settlement.[9.55] Damages consisting of the full stipulated fee have frequently been allowed where the client prosecuted his claim with success or obtained a settlement thereof after the discharge of the attorney.[5.56] And according to certain cases, the attorney may recover as damages the full contingent fee on establishing the collectibility of the client's claim or that the attorney would have succeeded in collecting it.[5.57] In other cases, however, it has been considered that damages amounting to the full fee can be recovered by the attorney only after the client has recovered on his claim.[5.58] Some cases, although allowing the attorney to recover as for breach of contract, do not allow the full fee as the measure of damages where the employment contract had not been substantially performed.[5.59]

Where the attorney's recovery is merely upon the quantum meruit, the terms of the contract, although not controlling, are frequently regarded as matter to be taken into consideration in determining the amount to be allowed.[5.61] Thus, it has been held that in estimating the reasonable value of the services rendered by the discharged attorney the court may take into consideration the fact that the services were rendered upon a contingent basis.[5.62] However, some cases hold or affirm that the amount of recovery to be allowed to the discharged attorney on the quantum meruit is to be determined without regard to the terms of the contract.[5.63] And where the discharge of the attorney is regarded as canceling his contract of employment the terms of the contract are not regarded as actually establishing the standard of compensation. So, a percentage of such amount as the client may recover cannot be allowed as the reasonable value of services rendered by the discharged attorney.[5.64]

In fixing the amount to be recovered by the discharged attorney on quantum meruit, consideration is frequently given to the ultimate result of the client's litigation.[5.65] However, as has already been indicated, several cases have held that the reasonable value of the services of the discharged attorney, as recoverable on a quantum meruit, cannot be fixed at a percentage of such amount as the client may recover in his suit.[5.66] It has been held that the amount to be allowed to the attorney on a quantum meruit is not to be fixed with reference to the possible or wholly speculative results which he might have achieved in the litigation had he been permitted to continue.[5.67] It has also been held that the amount to be allowed to the discharged attorney is to be determined in view of the character of the services he was capable of rendering, and which he did render.[5.68]

In many cases it has been held that an attorney employed under a contingent fee contract who is discharged without fault on his part may, at least in some circumstances, recover the full stipulated fee on the theory of constructive performance.[5.69] In most of these cases where recovery of the full fee was apparently allowed as for full performance the client had obtained a judgment or settlement subsequent to the attorney's discharge.[5.71] But in some instances the right to recover the full fee has been upheld notwithstanding the client had not obtained judgment or settlement in his suit.[5.73] Particularly where the attorney's discharge was prior to recovery by the client, but in some instances where substituted attorneys had successfully prosecuted the client's case, the view taken in numerous instances has been that the discharged attorney cannot recover the full contingent fee as for full performance.[5.74] Thus, the doctrine that the attorney cannot recover the full contingent fee has in some instances been adhered to even where subsequent to the discharge the client had fully or substantially recovered on his claim.[5.75]

[5.51] Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal(2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719; Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223, 21 A(2d) 396, 136 ALR 225; Crowley v. Wolf, 281 NY 59, 22 NE(2d) 234, 131 ALR 970; Martin v. Camp, 219 NY 170 627, 221 NY 631, 114 NE 46, 1072, 116 NE 1060, LRA1917F 402; Scheinesohn v. Lemonek, 84 Ohio St 424, 95 NE 913, Ann Cas 1912C 737

Anno: 136 ALR 252.

[5.52] Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223, 21 A(2d) 396, 136 ALR 226; Crowley v Wolf, 281 NY 59, 22 NE(2d) 234, 131 ALR 970; Martin v. Camp, 219 NY 170, 627, 221 NY 631, 114 NE 46, 1072, 116 NE 1060, LRA1917F 402.

Anno: 136 ALR 254.

[5.53] Brodie v. Watkins, 33 Ark 545, 34 Am Rep 49; Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal(2d) 368, 90 P(2d) 63, 124 ALR 719; Bartlett v. Odd Fellows' Sav. Bank, 79 Cal 218, 21 P 743, 12 Am St Rep 139; Scheinesohn v Lemonek, 84 Ohio St 424, 95 NE 913, Ann Cas 92C 737; First Nat. Bank & T. Co. v. Bassett, 183 Okla 592, 83 P(2d) 837, 118 ALR 1276; Polsley & Son v. Anderson, 7 W Va 202, 23 Am Rep 613.

Anno: 136 ALR 242.

In First Nat. Bank & T. Co. v. Bassett, 183 Okla 592, 83 P(2d) 837 118 ALR 1276, where the discharged attorney was allowed to recover the reasonable value of his services up to the time of his discharge, taking into consideration the final results achieved by the substituted attorneys, the court declared that the recovery in such a case "seems to be allowed upon the contract, quantum meruit entering as a measure for determining the value of the services rendered, and not in itself providing the basis of recovery."

[5.54] Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223, 21 A(2d) 396, 136 ALR 226; Martin v. Camp, 19 NY 170, 627, 221 NY 631, 114 NE 46, 1072, 116 NE 1060, LRA1917F 402.

Anno: 136 ALR 244.

In Martin v. Camp, 219 NY 170, 627, 221 NY 631, 114 NE 46, 1072, 116 NE 1060, LRA 1917F 402, where the action was brought to recover damages for breach of the attorney's contract entitling him to a percentage of the amount recovered, it was held that such recovery was not allowable, because, the court said, the discharge of the attorney did not constitute a breach of the contract, it being an implied term of the contract that the client might terminate it at any time, with or without cause. Consequently the court declared that the attorney was limited to recover the reasonable value of the services rendered up to the time of his discharge. This rule, the court stated, was "well calculated to promote public confidence in the members of an honorable profession whose relation to their clients is personal and confidential," yet it is to be observed that the court said that the rule that the attorney is limited to a recovery upon a quantum meruit "does not relate to a case where the attorney in entering into such a contract has changed his position or incurred expense, or to a case where an attorney is employed under a general retainer for a fixed period to perform legal services in relation to matters that may arise during the period of the contract."

In Cole v. Myers, 128 Conn 223, 21 A(2d) 396, 136 ALR 226, the view was taken that an attorney employed on a percentage contract and discharged without fault on his part is not entitled to recover damages.

5.55 Anno: 136 ALR 245.

5.56 Anno: 136 ALR 247.

In Brodie v. Watkins, 33 Ark 545, 34 Am Rep 49, where the attorney's contract entitled him to 10 per cent of the amount which might be collected, but about a year after his services commenced he was discharged, without fault on his part, and other attorneys of high standing were employed who recovered property of the value of $10,000, it was held that that amount might be taken as a guide in estimating the pecuniary loss sustained by the discharged attorney, since it might be supposed that he would have done as well as those substituted for him. This ruling proceeded upon the general principle that where there is "a special agreement for labor, service, or the delivery of goods, at a stipulated value, and the party bound to the services or the delivery is ready and willing to perform his part, but it is wrongfully prevented by the other, the measure of damages is the profit which would have inured to the party willing to perform, if the contract had been fully executed on both sides."

5.57 Anno: 136 ALR 249.

In Scheinesohn v. Lemonek, 84 Ohio St 424, 95 NE 913, Ann Cas 1912C 737, where the attorney was to receive for his services 25 per cent of the amount he should collect, but was discharged before rendering any services and before the client had been in any way benefited, it was held that the rule of quantum meruit could not, under such circumstances, apply, but that nevertheless a cause of action for breach of contract accrued to the attorney, so that upon his establishing that the claim was collectible he was entitled to recover damages, that the right to such recovery did not depend on whether or not the claim was afterwards collected by some one else, and that the measure of recovery was "the value of the attorney's anticipated services" as "fixed by the agreement of the parties," that is, it seems, one fourth of the amount of the claim which was collectible. The court said that "the fact of the impracticability of ascertaining a satisfactory measure of damages sustained by the attorney" from the breach differentiated the case from those of the breach of ordinary contracts of employment.

5.58 Anno: 136 ALR 250.

An attorney employed on a contingent fee contract who is discharged without cause may recover the reasonable value of his services up to the time of his discharge in an action brought for that purpose, or he may sue for the fee contracted to be paid; but if the suit is of the latter character the cause of action does not become complete until the client recovers on his claim. Echlin v. Superior Ct. 13 Cal(2d) 368. 90 P(2d) 63. 124 ALR 719.

5.59 First Nat. Bank & T. Co. v. Bassett, 183 Okla 592, 83 P(2d) 837, 118 ALR 1276; Polsley & Son v. Anderson, 7 W Va 202, 23 Am Rep 613.

Anno: 136 ALR 250.

In First Nat. Bank & T. Co. v. Bassett, 183 Okla 592, 83 P(2d) 837, 118 ALR 1276, although the court conceded that the attorney (who was employed under a percentage contract which specified that the fee should be received "if and when the recovery should finally be determined") was, in the measure of his recovery, limited to the reasonable value of the services rendered up to the time of his discharge, it was nevertheless held that his claim was on the contract and that the final results achieved in the litigation were elements to be considered in fixing the amount of his recovery.

The view has been taken that "if the compensation under the contract is contingent on the success of the suit, and the attorney is discharged without fault on his part, the measure of damages is not the contingent fee, but a reasonable compensation for the services actually rendered." Anno: 136 ALR 251.

5.61 Anno: 136 ALR 255.

5.62 Anno: 136 ALR 256.

5.63 Anno: 136 ALR 257.

5.64 Anno: 136 ALR 256.

The Kentucky rule is that the discharged attorney may recover, on the quantum meruit, "the contract price, abated by such sum as is reasonably represented by the unperformed part of the labor." Anno: 136 ALR 257.

5.65 Anno: 136 ALR 258.

5.66 See supra, n. 5.64.

5.67, 5.68 Anno: 136 ALR 258.

5.69 Anno: 136 ALR 235.

5.71 Anno: 136 ALR 235.

If the attorney's contract is to be regarded as having been substantially performed, with success to the client, at the time the discharge occurred, there is no reason for denying recovery of the stipulated contingent fee. Anno: 136 ALR 241.

In McGowan v. Parish, 237 US 285, 59 L ed 955, 35 S Ct 543, where the attorneys, having agreed to prosecute and collect a claim against the government in consideration of 20 per cent of whatever might be awarded or collected, succeeded in securing the passage of an act of Congress authorizing payment of the claim, under which act they applied to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment but without success, following which they were discharged and other attorneys substituted who obtained payment through a mandamus proceeding, it was held, in a suit in equity, that since the services of the discharged attorneys were admittedly of great value and had resulted in securing to the client "a complete right to the payment of the money," and it was his fault and not theirs that the final steps to recover it were not taken by them, no reason was shown why they should not receive the stipulated fee, the amount thereof having been deposited with the court.

5.73 Anno: 136 ALR 240.

5.74 Anno: 136 ALR 234.

5.75 Anno: 136 ALR 237.

§ 203. On Dismissal or Discontinuance of Action by Client.

p. 383, n. 6. See infra, this section (Supp.).

Page 383. Add new paragraph following note 8: Usually, an attorney whose contract of employment in a civil case provides for a contingent fee only cannot recover compensation under the contract, where the client abandons the litigation without a recovery or successful defense. In so ruling the courts have ordinarily attached no importance to the client's loss of faith in the litigation, even where such fact has distinctly appeared.[8.51] But ordinarily an attorney employed on a contingent fee basis may recover the reasonable value of services rendered, where without his consent his client discontinues the litigation, because of an apparent loss of faith therein.[8.53] It thus seems that in order wholly to defeat the attorney's claim to compensation it must appear not merely that the client lost faith in the litigation and exercised his right to abandon it, but that he had good cause for so doing. And there is much in the cases to suggest that the attorney must have been allowed a reasonable opportunity to bring about a favorable result.[8.55]

8.51 Crowley v. Wolf, 281 NY 59, 22 NE(2d) 234, 131 ALR 970.

Anno: 131 ALR 977.

8.53 Anno: 131 ALR 975.

See, however, Crowley v. Wolf, 281 NY 59, 22 NE(2d) 234, 131 ALR 970, which seems to indicate that if a client, after having allowed the attorney a reasonable opportunity to prosecute the claim successfully, reasonably, and with probable correctness, concludes that the claim is without merit, and abandons it, the attorney, though employed on a contingent fee contract, may be discharged without right to any compensation whatever, and in which the question whether a dismissal precludes a recovery by the attorney upon a quantum meruit was apparently regarded as depending on whether the dismissal was "wrongful" or was "justified." There is some further authority tending to support this view. Anno: 131 ALR 974.

[8.55] Anno: 131 ALR 974.

See, however, Crowley v. Wolf, 281 NY 59, 22 NE(2d) 234, 131 ALR 970, which holds in effect that a client has the right to discontinue and abandon a suit at any time when he becomes satisfied that his cause of action lacks merit, and is not bound to continue the litigation merely in order to give counsel employed on a contingent fee basis an opportunity to earn a fee, especially where the cause of action has been the subject of a trial in which an adverse judgment was rendered.

§ 204. On Settlement or Compromise by Client.

Am Jur quoted in Forman v. Kennedy, 156 Fla 219, 22 So2d 890.

Am Jur cited in Jellico Coal Min. Co. v. Pope, 292 Ky 171, 166 SW(2d) 287.

p. 384, n. 14.

Where an insurance adjuster obtained a settlement for less than the face value of the policy by inducing the insured to abandon his lawyer and save the contingent fee which he had contracted to pay, it was held that the jury might well have concluded that, but for the interference, the attorney would have recovered the full amount of the policy for his client, and that the damages for the wrongful interference with the contract should therefore embrace all elements reasonably flowing therefrom and not be limited by the amount of the settlement made in its perpetration. State Farm Fire Ins. Co. v. Gregory (CA4th SC) 184 F2d 447.

p 384, n. 17.

In determining what would be a reasonable fee for an attorney as regards his statutory lien where the action was settled by agreement of the parties without his consent, the court takes into consideration the amount of time and labor involved, the skill and ability of the attorney, and the nature and extent of the litigation. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965.

In St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965, an allowance of a fee of $1,000 on a quantum meruit in favor of the attorney in an action for personal injuries against a railroad in which a judgment for $3,000 was demanded, and which was settled by the parties without the attorney's consent, was held upon consideration of the entire record to be excessive, and subject to modification by reducing the amount to $500.

§ 205. When Adversary Agrees to Pay Fee.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1909.

Page 385. Add following note 5: The "reasonable attorney fee" for which provision is made in case suit is brought is not necessarily gauged by the legal services actually rendered, but is limited to reasonable compensation for legal services that are reasonably necessary under the circumstances of the case.[5.5]

[5.5] Cirimele v Shinazy, 134 Cal App2d 50, 285 P2d 311, 52 ALR2d 860.

Page 385. Add a new paragraph following note 7: In the majority of the cases in which the question of the propriety of awarding attorneys' fees on appeal, pursuant to a contractual provision, has been considered, the petition for such fees has either been granted by the appellate court, or the allowance of such fees by the trial court has been approved on appeal.[7.5] Thus, pursuant to contractual provisions, attorneys' fees have been allowed on appeal where an appeal was necessary in order for the appellant to protect his contractual rights,[7.51] a judgment in favor of the appellee was affirmed on appeal,[7.52] and where, although judgment in favor of the appellee was reversed on a prior appeal (for which appeal attorneys' fees were being asked), the right of such appellee to judgment was later established.[7.53] In some of the cases the appellate court, in awarding attorneys' fees for both the trial and the appeal of an action, has designated the amount of the fee applicable to the trial and the amount applicable to the appeal, while in other cases the court has merely awarded a lump-sum fee for both the trial and the appeal.[7.54]

In the majority of the cases in which it has been held that attorneys' fees could not properly be awarded for an appeal, the reasoning of the courts has been that the contractual right to attorneys' fees was merged in the judgment and that the liability of the defendant as established by the judgment could not later be enlarged by the imposition of additional attorneys' fees.[7.56] In other cases the courts have been of the opinion that the allowance of attorneys' fees on appeal was not within the contemplation of the contract involved.[7.57] In still other cases the court has said that it had no jurisdiction to award attorneys' fees for an appeal,[7.58] or that it knew of no basis for making such an allowance.[7.59]

[7.5] Anno: 52 ALR2d 864 et seq.

[7.51] Anno: 52 ALR2d 866.

[7.52] Anno: 52 ALR2d 865.

[7.53] Cirimele v Shinazy, 134 Cal App2d 50, 285 P2d 311, 52 ALR2d 860 (plaintiff allowed to recover attorneys' fees for two appeals).

Anno: 52 ALR2d 867, 868.

[7.54] Anno: 52 ALR2d 868–871.

It has been held that, since $100 amounted to 40 per cent of the recovery over and above the sum the lessee conceded he owed, it could not be said that such amount was inadequate as a fee for the trial of the case. The court said, however, that a contractual provision for reasonable attorneys' fees for enforcing the provisions thereof applied as well to legal services on appeal as it did to legal services for the trial of the case, that the lessor was entitled to a reasonable attorney's fee for each of the two appeals, and that $75 was a reasonable fee for each of such appeals, a total of $150 for the two appeals. Cirimele v Shinazy, 134 Cal App2d 50, 285 P2d 311, 52 ALR2d 860.

[7.56] Anno: 52 ALR2d 871.

[7.57] Anno: 52 ALR2d 872–874.

[7.58] Anno: 52 ALR2d 874.

[7.59] Anno: 52 ALR2d 874.

§ 206. Right to Taxable Costs, Statutory Fees and Expenses.

Am Jur cited in Skeen v. Peterson, 113 Utah 483, 196 P2d 708.

p. 386, n. 18.

The right of an attorney to be reimbursed for expenses of litigation follows as a matter of law from his making the advances for the benefit of the litigation he was employed to conduct, even where his employment was under a contingent fee agreement, if such agreement was silent as to expenses. Manzo v. Dullea (C. C. A. 2d) 96 F. (2d) 135, 116 A.L.R. 1241.

The question of whether or not expenses incurred by the attorney should be paid by the client is not to be judged solely from whether or not they might be taxable as costs against an unsuccessful opponent. The attorney may not, however, recover for expenses necessarily incident to the maintenance of a properly equipped lawyer's office or which were incident to the work he had agreed to perform. Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 1249.

An attorney acting under a contingent fee contract is not entitled to reimbursement for traveling and hotel expenses. Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 1248.

Page 386. Add, following note 1: Following the rule that the expenses incurred in the conduct of suits shall be borne by the client and not by his attorney, the courts have held in effect that an attorney employed under a contingent fee contract is not liable for ordinary expenses incurred by him in the conduct of his client's suit.[1.1] Except where the contract specifically provides to the contrary, the courts generally take the view that, under an agreement providing for a contingent fee, an attorney is entitled to be reimbursed for expenses paid, in addition to his percentage of the recovery, that his percentage is to be computed upon the gross recovery, and that he is entitled to reimbursement from the share of his client for disbursements made by him.[1.2]

[1.1] Manzo v. Dullea (C. C. A. 2d) 96 F. (2d) 135, 116 A.L.R. 1241.
Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 1244.

[1.2] Manzo v. Dullea (C. C. A. 2d) 96 F. (2d) 135, 116 A.L.R. 1241.
Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 1245.

§ 207. Division of Compensation between Attorneys Contributing Services.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1910, 1:1911; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1231, 2:1233.

Am Jur quoted in Glover v Maddox, 98 Ga App 548, 106 SE2d 288.

McCann v Todd, 203 La 631, 14 So 2d 469.

p. 386, n. 2. Anno: 73 ALR2d 993.

p. 386, n. 3. Carson v McMahan, 215 Or 38, 332 P2d 84, 73 ALR2d 981.
Anno: 73 ALR2d 993.

p. 387, n. 4. Anno: 73 ALR2d 998, 1001.

Page 387. Add following note 4: It has been held that where an attorney, after doing considerable work for his client, found it necessary to bring action in another jurisdiction and so sent his client to an attorney in such jurisdiction, the attorneys should share equally in the fee,[4.5] but where an attorney sent a claim for collection by attorneys in another jurisdiction, evidence has been held admissible to show a custom for a different proportionate division of compensation under such circumstances.[4.51] An attorney who "volunteers" his services to attorneys handling a legal matter is not entitled to have the attorney fees divided so that he may have a portion of them.[4.52] The rule that co-operating attorneys should share equally in the division of fees or compensation received, where there is no contract to the contrary, has been applied, notwithstanding the services performed by the respective attorneys were not equal,[4.53] but the circumstances may be such that the fees to co-operating attorneys should be apportioned on a quantum meruit basis.[4.54] Whether the representative of a deceased attorney who had co-operated with another attorney in the conduct of legal matters before his death should share in the compensation on an equal basis with the surviving attorney depends upon the circumstances present.[4.55] It has been held, under the circumstances considered, that where, after an attorney had assisted in the preparation of a case for trial, he was disbarred before trial, he forfeited all right to share in the fees received.[4.56]

[4.5] Anno: 73 ALR2d 992, 996.

[4.51] Anno: 73 ALR2d 996.

[4.52] Anno: 73 ALR2d 997.

[4.53] Anno: 73 ALR2d 998.

[4.54] Anno: 73 ALR2d 998.

[4.55] Anno: 73 ALR2d 1000.
It has been held that where, after recovery in a case in which the plaintiff's attorneys had co-operated in the trial, one of the attorneys died and the others obtained an affirmance on appeal, the attorneys were joint adventurers, and that the fee should be divided equally between the surviving attorneys and the estate of the decedent. Senneff v Healy, 155 Iowa 82, 135 NW 27, 39 LRA NS 219.

[4.56] Davenport v Waggoner, 49 SD 592, 207 NW 972, 45 ALR 1126.
Anno: 73 ALR2d 1000.

p. 387, n. 5. Anno: 55 ALR2d 1404; 78 ALR2d 289.

A law partnership agreement providing that upon the retirement of a partner or upon his death (the others continuing the business), the retiring partner, of his estate in case of his death, should, in addition to his percentage of net profits of the firm received by it in cash up to the date of such death or retirement, also receive the same percentage of net profits of the firm received by it in cash until the expiration of the 18 calendar months next after such retirement or death, has been recognized as enforceable. McClennen v Commissioner (CA1st) 131 F2d 165, 144 ALR 1127.

As to division of fees in bankruptcy cases, see 6 Am Jur 1514, BANKRUPTCY, § 1694.

A withdrawing law partner has been held entitled to an accounting of his share of net profits, notwithstanding a clause of the partnership agreement for an estimate of such net profits by a designated member of the partnership, where the firm has declined to comply with such clause. Jackson v Hunt, Hill & Betts, 7 NY2d 180, 196 NYS2d 647, 164 NE2d 681, 78 ALR2d 272.

That fees which have been earned by a law partnership at the time of the withdrawal of a member thereof have not been paid to the partnership at that time has been held not to preclude the withdrawing partner's right of participation therein under a partnership agreement which provides for payment to a withdrawing partner of his share of the "net profits," where such construction is in accord with the language and structure of the partnership agreement as a whole. Jackson v Hunt, Hill & Betts 7 NY2d 180, 196 NYS2d 647, 164 NE2d 681, 78 ALR2d 272.

p. 387, n. 6. Anno: 78 ALR2d 290.

Page 387. Add following note 7: In a few cases in which a partner withdrew from a law firm, it has been held that the remaining partners were entitled to recover compensation for services rendered in finishing the business on hand at the time of withdrawal.[7.5]

[7.5] Anno: 78 ALR2d 292.

Page 387. Add a new paragraph at end of section: As to attorneys who are "associated in practice," that is, those who share a suite of offices, or adjoining offices, and who, ordinarily, share in such expenses as office rent, the cost of a stenographer, the cost of a library, etc., without being formal partners, in instances in which the evidence established that a fiduciary or trust relationship existed between persons associated in the practice of law, or that the parties were engaged in a joint venture, an accounting has been allowed or has been recognized as proper.[9.5] An accounting between persons associated in the practice of law has been denied where the evidence failed to establish a special partnership creating a fiduciary relationship and the plaintiff was found to have an adequate remedy at law.[9.51]

9.5 Anno: 81 ALR2d 1420.

Record in action by an attorney against another attorney with whom he had been associated in the practice of law without a formal partnership, has been held to establish a confidential or fiduciary relationship between the parties and a right to an accounting, in view of the defendant's possession of the books of account, of undisputed evidence of a working agreement between the parties as to some phases of their law practice, and of the defendant's admission of some liability on his part. Whittle v Ellis (Fla App) 122 So 237, 81 ALR 2d 1415.

9.52 Willis v Crawford, 38 Or 522, 63 P 985, 64 P 866, 53 LRA 904.

Anno: 81 ALR2d 1423.

§ 208. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1292.

Am Jur cited in Akers v. Akers, 233 Minn 133, 46 NW2d 87.

Re Washington Square Slum Clearance, 5 NY2d 300, 184 NYS2d 585, 157 NE2d 587.

Crawford v Crane, 204 Or 60. 282 P2d 348.

Purman's Estate. 358 Pa 187. 56 A2d 86. 175 ALR 1129.

p. 387, n. 10. Smyth v. Fidelity & D. Co. 326 Pa. 391. 192 A. 640. 111 A.L.R. 481.

Page 388. Add new paragraph at end of section: Obviously, whether a statute relating to attorneys' liens supplants and abolishes the common law or equitable liens previously enjoyed by attorneys, or supplements and extends them, or affords a cumulative remedy depends upon the intent of the legislature and the terms in which they have expressed that intent. Generally where the statute purports to cover the entire field of attorneys' liens it is regarded as governing the whole matter to the exclusion of common law or equitable liens.[16.5] However, statutes which relate only to the charging lien do not affect the common-law retaining lien.[16.6]

16.5 Anno: 120 ALR 1245.

16.6 Anno: 120 ALR 1247.

§ 209. Generally.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1912; 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1287, 2:1289–1:1290.

Am Jur quoted in Morse v. Eighth Judicial District Ct. 65 Nev 275. 195 P2d 199. 3 ALR2d 136.

Am Jur cited in Bolling v. Bowen (CCA 4th) 118 F(2d) 59.

Davidson v Collier, 104 Ga App 546, 122 SE 2d 465.

Orr v. Mutual Ben. Health & Acci. Asso. 240 Mo App 236. 207 SW2d 511.

Morse v. Eighth Judicial District Ct. 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136

Crawford v Crane, 204 Or 60, 282 P2d 348.

King v Beale. 198 Va 802. 96 SE2d 765

Capehart v. Church. 136 W Va 929. 69 SE2d 127

RCL cited in Edwards County v Simmons. 159 Kan 41. 151 P2d 960

p. 388, n. 18. King v Beale, 198 Va 802, 96 SE2d 765. 63 ALR2d 746.

Page 388. Add, following note 18: It is distinct from the attorney's common-law general retaining lien.[18.5] 18.5 Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 95 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

p. 388, n. 19.

An attorney's general or retaining lien has its roots in the common law, is founded on general principles of justice, does not depend upon an express agreement, and is effectuated through the exercise of the inherent power of courts over the relation between attorneys and their clients. Norreil v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230. 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238.

p 388, n 20. Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

Smyth v. Fidelity & D. Co. 326 Pa 391. 192 A 640. 111 ALR 481.

Page 388. Add new paragraph at end of section: But the rule that protects the retaining lien of an attorney against a requirement to produce the papers on subpoena duces tecum does not apply where the subpoena is issued in an action brought by him to recover fees for his services, so as to entitle him to refuse to produce records and papers which reflect the nature of the services rendered and the amount of time expended.[3.4]

An attorney having a lien on papers of a former client, which were in his possession has been held not to be bound to produce them on a subpoena duces tecum issued on behalf of a former client.[3.5]

Application for a summary order has been recognized as a proper method of procedure for a client endeavoring to secure the delivery of papers or documents in the possession of his attorney, or former attorney, and upon which the attorney has a retaining lien.[3.51]

3.4 Ross v Wells, 6 Ill App 2d 304. 127 NE2d 519.

3.5 Anno: 3 ALR2d 154.

3.51 Re Niagara, L. & O. Power Co., 203 NY 493, 97 NE 33, 38 LRA NS 207, Ann Cas 1913B 234 (in which it was held that one not employing an attorney could not secure a summary order for delivery by the attorney of papers upon which the attorney had a lien for services, by offering to pay what was due the attorney under an employment by another litigant).

Anno: 3 ALR2d 154.

On summary motion in pending litigation for substitution of attorneys for cause and for release of the attorneys' claims for liens and an order for the return of papers, documents, and records in their possession, the court may refuse to hear and determine issues concerning the attorneys right to fees for past services rendered. for which they have instituted independent suit. Morse v Eighth Judicial Dist. Court. 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199. 3 ALR2d 136

§ 210. Property to Which Lien Attaches.

Am Jur cited in Akers v. Akers, 233 Minn 133. 46 NW2d 87

Hayes v. Parker, 177 Va 70, 12 SE2d 750.

p. 388, n. 4. Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court. 65 Nev 275. 195 P2d 199. 3 ALR2d 136.

Smyth v. Fidelity & D. Co. 326 Pa 391. 192 A 640. 111 ALR 481.

An attorney's general or retaining lien, unless excluded by special contract or inconsistent with the particular service, attaches to all papers, books, documents, securities, moneys, and property of the client coming into the possession of the attorney in the course of and with reference to his professional employment, and confers the right to retain possession thereof until the general balance due him for legal services as well as costs and disbursements shall have been paid. Norrell v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230, 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238.

An attorney's general or retaining lien is not limited to the moneys due in the particular cause out of which possession of the property came, but embraces all such indebtedness arising out of other matters in which the professional relation existed between his client and himself. Norrell v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238.

§ 211. — Money Collected by Attorney.

Page 389. Add, following note 17: And one attorney collecting moneys for a client must honor the retaining lien of his co-counsel in the matter when he has notice that co-counsel deems such a lien to exist.[17.5]

[17.5] Jones v. Miller (CA3d Pa) 203 F2d 131 (holding that an attorney who is informed by his cocounsel in a matter that the cocounsel has a retaining lien on funds coming into the attorney's hands, the lien representing his fee, and the attorney nevertheless turns over the entire amount collected to the client, he is liable to cocounsel to the extent that he held funds that could have been applied on the lien).

§ 212. — Property Not Affected.

Am Jur cited in Akers v. Akers, 233 Minn 133, 46 NW2d 87.

Severns v. Boylan, 75 Ohio App 15, 60 NE2d 521.

p. 390, n. 7.

In a few American cases there is authority to the effect that a client or his succeeding attorney has the right to the production or inspection of papers or documents on which his former attorney has a retaining lien, under certain circumstances, even though security is not required. Anno: 3 ALR2d 152.

In a number of English cases the view has been taken that during such retention the client or his succeeding attorney might require the production of the papers thus retained, provided only a particular suit was in progress and the papers pertained to that suit. Anno: 3 ALR2d 152.

Where the client needed the papers in his defense to a charge of murder, a capital offense, it has been held that the client was entitled to the production of the papers, notwithstanding the existence of a retaining lien. Anno: 3 ALR 2d 153.

§ 213. Services and Compensation Covered by Lien.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1290.

Am Jur cited in Re Dungeness Timber Co. (DC) 50 F Supp 370.

Greek Catholic Union v. Russin, 340 Pa 295, 17 A2d 402.

p 390, notes 10, 11. Morse v. Eight Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

§ 214. Notice of Lien.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1913–1:1916.

§ 216. Waiver or Loss of Lien.

Forms: 1 Am Jur Legal Forms 1:1917, 1:1918.

Page 391. Add, following note 18: Since the ultimate purpose of an attorney's retaining lien being to assist the attorney in procuring the amount due from his client, the client may of course require delivery of the papers or documents on which the attorney has a retaining lien, by payment of his indebtedness to the attorney.[18.5]

[18.5] McPherson v. Cox, 96 US 404, 24 L ed 746.

Anno 3 ALR2d 159.

p 391 n 19. Anno: 3 ALR2d 159.

p 391, n 20. Anno: 3 ALR2d 159.

Page 391. Add new paragraph at end of section: Where an attorney and his client were at issue as to whether anything was due the attorney for services, it has been said that if the attorney failed to bring suit for his services within a time to be limited, or if then should fail to prosecute it diligently, he would be ordered to give up his asserted lien on the papers in his hands.[6.5]

[6.5] Anno: 3 ALR2d 154.

§ 217. — Loss of Possession.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1289.

p. 391, n. 7. Norrell v Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238

King v Beale, 198 Va 802, 96 SE2d 765, 63 ALR2d 746.

Page 391. Add new paragraph following note 10: The majority of the cases in which the question has arisen have taken the view that a client may require the delivery of papers or documents held by his attorney under a retaining lien upon the furnishing of adequate bond or other security.[10.5]

[10.5] Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

Re Niagara, L. & O. Power Co. 203 NY 493, 97 NE 33, 38 LRA NS 207, Ann Cas 1913B 234.

Anno: 3 ALR2d 155.

It has been pointed out in some instances that the purpose of the lien is to secure payment, and that, though the lien is surrendered, payment is nevertheless insured, or, even further, that the attorney is benefited by the substitution of the security for the lien, since the lien itself is only passive, and so not enforceable, while the security is enforceable. Anno: 3 ALR2d 155.

p 391, n 11. Anno: 3 ALR2d 156.

But see Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136, in which it is said that the advantage of an attorney's general retaining lien is the possibility of forcing the client to settle because of embarrassment and inconvenience caused by the attorney's retention of the papers.

§ 218. Enforcement of Lien.

Am Jur cited in Morse v. Eighth Judicial District Ct. 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

Crawford v Crane, 204 Or 60, 282 P2d 348.

p. 392, n. 13. Hoxsey v. Hoffpauir (CA5th Tex) 180 F2d 84, cert den 339 US 953, 94 L ed 1366, 70 S Ct 841.

Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

Smyth v. Fidelity & D. Co. 326 Pa 391, 192 A 640, 111 ALR 481.

Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 487.

Page 392. Add, following note 13: Applying the rule that an attorney's retaining lien cannot be actively enforced, courts have held that such a lien does not include the power to sell the subject thereof[13.1] and have refused the attorney any right of action on the debt represented by the papers which he holds.[13.11]

[13.1] Smyth v. Fidelity & D. Co. 326 Pa. 391, 192 A. 640, 111 A.L.R. 481 (holding that a general statute permitting lienors to sell the subjects of their liens did not extend to attorneys' retaining liens.

Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 488.

[13.11] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 488.

Page 392. Add, following note 14: Generally, the only advantage which the attorney gains from his retaining lien is the possibility of forcing his client to settle because of the embarrassment, inconvenience, or worry which is caused the client by the attorney's asserting the lien.[14.1] Recognizing this advantage, courts usually refuse to relieve a client by compelling the attorney to permit inspection of, or to produce, the subject of the lien without settlement of the amount due him.[14.11]

[14.1] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 487.

[14.11] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 489.

When served with a subpœna duces tecum, an attorney who fails, at the instance of his former client, to produce in court papers in his possession under a retaining lien is not guilty of contempt of court. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 489.

Page 392. Add, following note 15: A statutory lien which supersedes the common-law retaining lien is similar in its nature, and it has been held that such a lien is not actively enforceable in the absence of express provision in that regard.[15.1]

[15.1] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 491.
p. 392, n. 16. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 492.

§ 219. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1241.

Am Jur cited in Chancey v. Bauer (C. C. A. 5th) 97 F. (2d) 293, rehearing denied in (C. C. A. 5th) 97 F. (2d) 994 (notes 17, 18).

United States v Jacobs (DC Md) 187 F Supp 630, affd (CA4) 298 F2d 469.

Billingham v Thiele (Fla App) 107 So 2d 238, cert discharged (Fla) 109 So 2d 763.

Spethman v. Holeldt. 141 Neb 83, 2 NW(2d) 620.

Crawford v Crane, 204 Or 60, 282 P2d 348.

Capehart v. Church. 136 W Va 929, 69 SE2d 127.

Liberty v. Liberty, 226 Wis 136, 276 NW 121 (notes 17–2).

RCL cited in Knabb v. Mabry, 137 Fla 530, 188 So 586.

p. 392, n 17. Norrell v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230, 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238; Smyth v. Fidelity & D. Co. 326 Pa 391, 192 A 640, 111 ALR 481

p. 392, n. 18. Smyth v. Fidelity & D. Co. 326 Pa. 391, 192 A. 640, 111 A.L.R. 481.

An attorney's special or charging lien is one which arises in favor of the attorney for his bill of costs and compensation for his services for procuring the judgment, decree, or award to which it attaches. Norrell v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238.

p. 392, n. 19. Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

p. 392, n. 1. Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

Page 393. Add, following note 4: A statute giving an attorney a lien upon the client's cause of action or counterclaim which attaches to a verdict, report, decision, or judgment has reference and applies entirely to a special charging lien, in no way affecting the attorney's common-law retaining lien.[4.5]

[4.5] Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court. 65 Nev 275. 195 P2d 199. 3 ALR2d 136.

§ 220. Purpose and Basis of Lien

Am Jur cited in Hanna Paint Mfg. Co. v Rodey, Dickason, Sloan, Akin & Robb (CA10 NM) 298 F2d 371.

p. 393, n. 5.

It may be observed that in England at common law a solicitor has two rights which are termed liens—the first being the right to retain property already in his possession until he shall have been paid costs due to him in his professional capacity and the second being a right to ask the court to direct that personal property recovered under a judgment obtained by his exertions stand as security for his costs of such recovery—and that in addition he has by statute a right to apply to the court for a charging order on real or personal property recovered or preserved through his instrumentality in respect of his taxed costs of the suit, matter, or proceeding prosecuted or defended by him. Anno: 120 ALR 1244.

p. 393. n. 6 Anno: 120 ALR 1244

p. 393, n. 7. Unger v Checker Taxi Co. 30 Ill App 2d 238, 174 NE2d 219, 85 ALR2d 856.
Anno: 120 ALR 1244.

Page 393. Add, following note 8: Such a statute being remedial in character, is to be liberally construed.[8.5]

[8.5] Slayton v. Russ. 205 Ark 474, 169 SW(2d) 571, 146 ALR 64.

Page 393. Add, following note 10: Statutory provisions which prescribe the conditions under which, or the mode by which, an attorney may secure a charging lien, whether contained in statutes which purport to cover the entire field of attorneys' liens or which relate only to charging liens, are generally held to prevent the attaching of liens of this class except where the statutory conditions exist and the statutory mode is pursued.[10.1] [10.1] Unger v Checker Taxi Co. 30 Ill App 2d 238, 174 NE2d 219, 85 ALR2d 856.

Annot 120 ALR 1248.

p. 393, n. 11.

An attorney has no lien on real property which was conveyed to him and the opposing counsel, not for the benefit of counsel but in trust for their respective clients, with the understanding that the two attorneys would reconvey the property to one of the clients as soon as a certain agreement could be carried out. Ashman v Shecter, 196 Md 168, 76 A2d 139

p. 394, n. 12. Unger v Checker Taxi Co. 30 Ill App 2d 238, 174 NE2d 219, 85 ALR2d 856.

Myers v Miller, 134 Neb 824, 279 NW 778, 117 ALR 977.

Norrell v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230, 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238.

The object of a special or charging lien is to protect the claim of an attorney by equitable interference of the court and to secure to him payment of just charges out of the fruits of his own labor. Myers v. Miller. 134 Neb. 824. 279 N. W. 778, 117 A.L.R. 977.

p. 394, n. 13. Purman's Estate. 358 Pa 187 56 A2d 86. 175 ALR 1129.

§ 221. Agreement Creating Lien.

Am Jur cited in Camp v Park. 226 Ark 1026. 295 SW2d 613.

Neighbors & Danielson v West Nebraska Methodist Hospital. — Neb —, 77 NW2d 667.

Tuttle v Wyman 149 Neb 769. 32 NW2d 742.

p. 394, n. 17. Fifield Manor (Corp.) v Finston, 54 Cal 2d 632. 7 Cal Rptr 377, 354 P2d 1073, 78 ALR2d 813.

Page 394. Add, following note 17: The question whether an attorney's contingent-fee contract will give rise to an equitable lien in his favor on the fund recovered through his efforts is one of construction of the particular contract.[17.5]

[17.5] Anno: 143 ALR 206.

The basic question in such cases is whether, in the absence of an express provision for a lien, an intent that the fund recovered shall stand as security for payment of the fee sufficiently appears by implication. Anno: 143 ALR 206.

Page 394. Add, following note 19: Even where the agreement is merely that the attorney shall receive for his services a specified per cent of the amount recovered for the client the effect may be to give the attorney an equitable assignment or lien if in view of all the circumstances of the case, including the conduct of the parties and any declarations made by them in construction of their agreement, it is to be concluded that their understanding was that the attorney should have an interest in or charge on the fund recovered.[19.51]

[19.51] Anno: 143 ALR 207.
See Button v. Anderson, 112 Vt 531. 28 A (2d) 404, 143 ALR 195.

Page 395. Add, following note 3: It has repeatedly been held that if the client's cause of action is nonassignable, the attorney's contingent-fee contract can give him no lien on the cause of action.[3.51] However, the ordinary contingent-fee contract seems to contemplate, at most, a lien on the fund recovered when it comes into existence, and is not to be construed as intended to give an interest in or lien on the cause of action itself.[3.52] Attorney's contingent-fee contracts are frequently construed as creating equitable liens on funds recovered by settlement or otherwise.[3.53] However, there seems to be no reason why an attorney's contingent-fee contract may not result in an equitable lien on the client's cause of action if the cause of action is assignable in character and it sufficiently appears from the contract that such a lien was contemplated.[3.55] The cases are not in complete agreement as to what language of a lawyer's contingent-fee contract will, under particular circumstances, create in his favor an equitable lien upon the fund recovered for his client. Some of the older cases, especially, have strongly emphasized the idea that the lien does not arise except where the intent to give it distinctly appears. However, most of the cases hold, or recognize, that the contract will give the attorney an equitable lien on the fund recovered where from the terms thereof construed in the light of the attending circumstances, it is in any manner to be implied that the fund shall be charged with payment of the fee.[3.56] Some courts have stressed the idea that an equitable lien arises in favor of the attorney where the terms of his contract, through necessary implication or otherwise, show a distinct appropriation of the prospective fund to the payment of the fee. Conversely, the view has been taken that the contingent-fee contract does not create an equitable lien on the fund recovered where the terms of the contract do not show a distinct appropriation of the fund to the payment of the fee. It is, however, difficult to say that the use of certain contractual phrases or forms of expression, or the omission to use them, is alone determinative of the right to a lien, since the contract as a whole and all the circumstances of the case are to be looked to for the purpose of determining its proper construction.[3.57] It may be stated, generally, that a "mere" contingent-fee contract, that is, one which while providing for a fixed or proportional contingent fee contains no other provision or language indicating, either alone or in the light of the particular circumstances, an intent that the fund recovered shall constitute security for payment of the fee, is not sufficient to create an equitable lien.[3.58] Ordinarily, at least, an agreement which, in substance, is one to pay to the attorney a part of the very fund recovered creates an equitable lien in his favor.[3.59] But words to the effect that the client agrees to pay a part of the fund recovered to the attorney do not create an equitable lien where from the contract as a whole and the accompanying circumstances it does not appear that the fund was to stand as security for the fee.[3.6] The majority of the cases dealing with the effect of an agreement "to pay" a lawyer's contingent fee "from," or "out of," the proceeds of the litigation support the proposition that a stipulation in that form is at least some indication of an intent which will give rise to an equitable lien, if not to an equitable assignment.[3.61] But some cases have taken the view that a mere promise to pay a contingent fee out of the amount recovered does not afford a basis for an equitable lien.[3.62] Ordinarily, where the language is, in substance, that the client will pay "an amount equal to" a specified percentage or fraction of the recovery, no lien is created.[3.63] Usually, an agreement that the attorney shall "have," or "receive," or "retain" for his contingent fee a part of the very fund recovered, or other agreement of like substance, leaves little doubt that, at the least, an equitable lien is created in his favor.[3.64] An agreement that the attorney shall "have" or "receive" a contingent fee "from" or "out of" the fund recovered usually creates an equitable lien thereon.[3.65] But there is reason to suppose that an agreement specifying that an attorney shall receive for his compensation a certain fraction or percentage of "the amount" of the claim recovered, or words of like import, will in many cases be regarded as, on its face, a mere agreement fixing the amount of the compensation and conditioning liability for its payment.[3.66]

In a number of cases the provisions of contingent fee contracts between attorneys and persons claiming a share in a decedent's estate, as well as the surrounding circumstances, have been such as to cause the courts to conclude that an equitable lien was created to protect the attorney's right to his compensation.[3.67] However, the contingent fee contracts in other cases involving a share in a decedent's estate have been held not to create an equitable lien in favor of the attorneys.[3.68]

[3.51] Anno: 143 ALR 207.

The importance of this point often appears where, without the concurrence of plaintiff's attorney, the parties to the action settle it before judgment. Anno: 143 ALR 207.

[3.52] Anno: 143 ALR 207.

On principle, there seems to be no difficulty in allowing the intended lien on the recovered fund, notwithstanding the cause of action (as in case of a personal tort) was not assignable. Anno: 143 ALR 207.

In Button v. Anderson, 112 Vt 531, 28 A(2d) 404, 143 ALR 195, it was held that the provision of the Federal statute invalidating transfers or assignments of claims against the United States did not prevent an attorneys' contingent-fee contract from giving rise to an equitable lien in their favor upon money which had been paid out by the United States.

[3.53] Anno: 143 ALR 208.

The assumption of the cases generally seems to be that a lien on the client's cause of action itself is not ordinarily to be implied. Anno: 143 ALR 208.

[3.55] Anno: 143 ALR 209.

Apparently the true point of most of the cases is that an implied stipulation for a lien on the fund recovered does not touch the cause of action. Anno: 143 ALR 209.

[3.56] Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 US 335, 53 L ed 208, 29 S Ct 92 (where there is a distinct appropriation of the fund, or the terms of the agreement show that it was intended that the fund should stand as security for the fee); Nutt v. Knut, 200 US 12, 50 L ed 348, 26 S Ct 216; Porter v. White, 127 US 235, 32 L ed 112, 8 S Ct 1217; Peugh v. Porter, 112 US 737 28 L ed 859, 5 S Ct 361 (holding, however that there is no lien on the fund recovered where there was no agreement that the attorney should be paid out of it); Wright v. Ellison, 1 Wall. (US) 16, 17 L ed 555 (conceding that an equitable lien arises where the attorney's employment contract shows a distinct appropriation of the fund to be recovered); Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How (US) 415, 14 L ed 753; Nichols v. Orr, 63 Colo 333, 166 P 561, 2 ALR 449 (where it is agreed that attorney shall receive specified percentage of the amount recovered); De Winter v. Thomas, 34 App DC 80, 27 LRA (NS) 634 (writ of certiorari denied in 215 US 609, 54 L ed 347, 30 S Ct 411) (where agreement shows intent that fund should stand as security for the fee); Costigan v. Stewart, 76 Kan 353, 91 P 83, 11 LRA(NS) 630 (where it is agreed that the attorney shall be paid a specified fraction of the amount recovered); Fairbanks v. Sargent, 117 NY 320, 22 NE 1039, 6 LRA 475 (an equitable assignment results pro tanto where it was agreed that the attorney should have a specified fraction of whatever amount should be recovered): Fairbanks v. Sargent, 104 NY 108, 9 NE 870, 58 Am Rep 490 (where it was agreed that the attorney should have a specified fraction of whatever amount should be recovered); Coughlin v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 71 NY 443, 27 Am Rep 75 (intimating that a lien attaches to the fund when it comes into existence if it was agreed that the attorney should receive his compensation from the fund); High Point Casket Co. v. Wheeler, 182 NC 459, 109 SE 378, 19 ALR 391 (agreement that attorney should have specified fraction of any recovery amounted to an assignment pro tanto of the judgment recovered). Button v. Anderson, 112 Vt 531, 28 A(2d) 404, 143 ALR 195.

Anno: 143 ALR 209.

3.57 Anno: 143 ALR 212.

3.58 Anno: 143 ALR 214.

An equitable lien in favor of attorneys on the amount recovered for and collected by the state is created by an agreement whereby the attorneys, in consideration of a fee equal to 25 per cent of whatever sum of money or evidence of debt shall be awarded to the state, agreed to prosecute a claim of the state against the Federal Government, the inference that the attorneys look to the fund for payment rather than the mere contractual obligation of the state, dependent for its fulfilment upon legislative action, being a natural inference from their assumed knowledge that the governor can make no general promise of payment which can be fulfilled without an appropriation. Button v. Anderson, 112 Vt 531, 28 A(2d) 404, 143 ALR 195.

3.59 Anno: 143 ALR 216.

3.6 Anno: 143 ALR 217.

3.61 Anno: 143 ALR 218.

3.62 Anno: 143 ALR 219.

3.63 Anno: 143 ALR 220.

But see Button v. Anderson, 112 Vt 531, 28 A(2d) 404, 143 ALR 195.

3.64 Barnes v. Alexander, 232 US 117, 68 L ed 530, 34 S Ct 276; Nichols v. Orr, 63 Colo 333, 166 P 561, 2 ALR 449 (equitable assignment pro tanto); Chattanooga Sewer Pipe Works v. Dumler, 153 Miss 276, 120 So 450, 62 ALR 999; High Point Casket Co. v. Wheeler, 182 NC 459, 109 SE 378, 19 ALR 391 (an agreement that the attorney should "have" specified fraction of "any recovery" held to create an equitable assignment pro tanto).

Anno: 143 ALR 220.

3.65 Anno: 143 ALR 224.

3.66 Anno: 143 ALR 225.

3.67 Anno: 175 ALR 1142.

Under a contract by certain of the next of kin employing an attorney to contest a will, fixing the fee at a stated amount to be paid in case the will was defeated, but providing that as to the contracting heir there was to be no personal obligation in the event the suit was unsuccessful and that in no event should such heir be "obligated except to pay such fee out of the funds secured from the estate," an equitable lien against the respective shares to which the heirs became entitled by reason of the successful outcome of the will contest attaches in favor of the attorney, to the extent of the fee stipulated. Ingersoll v Coram, 211 US 335, 53 L ed 208, 29 S Ct 92.

An equitable lien was held to arise in a Florida case, even though there was no contingent fee contract for the payment of a percentage of the recovery as the attorney's fee. Thus, where an attorney was employed by a widow for the purpose of and was successful in procuring for her a child's part in the estate of her husband, under an agreement with her that the attorney would of necessity have to be paid out of and from any and all property obtained by her for his services in securing such part, it was held in Scott v. Kirtley, 113 Fla 637, 152 So 721, 93 ALR 661, that the attorney was entitled to an equitable lien on the property recovered for reasonable compensation for his services, even though there was no agreement as to the amount of the compensation that should be paid, nor any express agreement as to any lien that the attorney should have to secure the same.

3.68 Anno: 175 ALR 1144.

In De Winter v. Thomas, 34 App DC 80, 27 LRA NS 634, cert den 215 US 609, 54 L ed 347, 30 S Ct 411, where it appeared that a legatee agreed to pay to her attorney, contingent upon success, "15 per centum of the sum of money, and a sum equal to 15 per centum of the market value of any other property received by her under the distribution or compromise," it was held that no equitable lien in favor of the attorney arose with respect to the fund distributed to the legatee under the will.

§ 222. Extent of Lien; Taxable Costs.

Am Jur cited in Spethman v. Hofeldt, 141 Neb 83, 2 NW(2d) 620.

p. 395, n. 6. The basis of recovery by an attorney availing himself of the statutory remedy by motion to have a reasonable fee fixed where the parties have settled the action without his consent is the quantum meruit for the services actually rendered. Slayton v. Russ, 205 Ark 474, 169 SW(2d) 571, 146 ALR 64.

§ 223. Limitation of Lien to Services in Suit Wherein Judgment Is Had.

Am. Jur. cited in Chancey v. Bauer (C. C. A. 5th) 97 F. (2d) 293, rehearing denied in (C. C. A. 5th) 97 F. (2d) 994 (notes 10, 13).

Billingham v Thiele (Fla App) 107 So 2d 238, cert discharged (Fla) 109 So 2d 763.

p. 395, n. 10. Morse v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 65 Nev 275, 195 P2d 199, 3 ALR2d 136.

p. 396, n. 14. An attorney who has perfected a lien under the Illinois Attorney's Lien Act, but who is refused the right by the client to participate in the prosecution of the claim, has been held not to be deprived of his right or interest because he is not the attorney of record in the suit brought to recover on the client's claim. Peresipka v Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. (CA7 Ind) 231 F2d 268, 59 ALR2d 554.

§ 224. Lien for Successful Defense of Suit or Right.

Am Jur cited in St. John the Baptist G. C. Church v. Gengor (NJ Eq) 195 A 817 (n. 18); St. John the Baptist Greek Catholic Church v. Gengor, 124 NJ Eq 449, 2 A(2d) 337 (n. 18).

RCL cited in Wessinger v. Sturkie (CCA 4th) 77 F(2d) 751.

p. 396, n. 18.

An attorney performing services in the management of real property, and attorneys who successfully conduct litigation to set aside a will under which the property would have gone into other hands, are without standing to claim equitable liens on the property for their services, relying on oral agreements with the owners, who were hopelessly insolvent, that they should have such liens, where, at the time of the agreements, part payment had already been made for the services, and the claims are only for balances owing thereon. Watson v. Hobson 401 Ill 191, 81 NE2d 885, 7 ALR2d 1156.

Oral agreements that a person performing services in the management of real property, and attorneys who have successfully contested a will under which the property would have gone into other hands, shall have liens on the property for the balances due them for their services, are invalid under the statute of frauds. Watson v. Hobson, 401 Ill 191, 81 NE2d 885, 7 ALR2d 1156.

An attorney hired to assist in maintaining a suit to quiet title to certain lands in the possession of complainants, does not have a lien on the subject matter of the suit, and the fact that the respondents file a cross bill seeking to sell the land for division among alleged joint owners does not operate to create such lien, since the Alabama statute does not give a lien to attorneys defending an action. Ex parte Clanahan, 261 Ala 87, 72 So2d 833, 50 ALR2d 134.

§ 225. Notice of Lien.

Am Jur cited in Todd v Mutual Factors, Inc. 3 App Div2d 537, 161 NYS2d 738, affd 4 NY2d 759, 172 NYS2d 169, 149 NE2d 94.

p. 397, n. 7. Anno: 85 ALR2d 860.

p. 397, n. 10. Anno: 85 ALR2d 860.

§ 226. — Sufficiency of Notice.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1241.

p. 397, n. 11. Anno: 85 ALR2d 861–872.

A number of statutes expressly require that the notice of lien be in writing, and where no such provision appears, a question of statutory construction arises as to whether oral or other actual notice of claim of lien is sufficient, and it has been both affirmed and denied that such statutes contemplate notice in writing. Anno: 85 ALR2d 861.

p. 398, n. 13. Anno: 85 ALR2d 867.

p. 398, n. 15. Anno: 85 ALR2d 865.

An entry reading "notice of 50 percent ownership in the within judgment by virtue of oral assignment," made by an attorney who had secured the judgment has been held not sufficient to create a valid attorney's lien. Lundy v O'Connor, 246 Iowa 1231, 71 NW2d 589, 52 ALR2d 1380.

Page 398. Add following note 15: Filing by the attorney of a petition of intervention in the client's suit has been held sufficient notice.[15.5]

[15.5] Anno: 85 ALR2d 869.

p. 398, n. 16. Anno: 85 ALR2d 861–872.

It has been held that, under a statute requiring written notice of an attorney's lien on his client's claim against a third person to be served on the third person "by registered or certified mail," such lien may not be enforced against a third person to whom the notice is sent by ordinary mail, at least in the absence of an acknowledgment of the receipt of the notice. Unger v Checker Taxi Co. 30 Ill App 2d 238, 174 NE2d 219, 85 ALR2d 856.

§ 227. Priorities.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1241.

Am Jur cited in Hanna Paint Mfg. Co. v Rodey, Dickason, Sloan, Akin & Robb (CA10 NM) 298 F2d 371.

Todd v Mutual Factors, Inc. 3 App Div 2d 537, 161 NYS2d 738, affd 4 NY2d 759, 172 NYS 2d 169, 149 NE2d 94; Lexow v Tremaine, 252 App Div 307, 299 NYS2d 412, affd 277 NY 657, 14 NE2d 207 (n. 7) (dissent op).

Page 398. Add, as the first sentence in the section: The lien of an attorney upon a judgment, to the extent of his reasonable fee and disbursements, is paramount to any right of the parties to the suit.[18.1]

[18.1] Myers v. Miller, 134 Neb. 824, 279 N. W. 778, 117 A.L.R. 977.

Page 398. Add, following note 7: Where an attorney for a property owner intervenes in a mechanic's lien action and files a notice of attorney's lien against his client's interest in real property involved therein, the attorney's lien attaches from the time of its filing and not from the commencement of the mechanic's lien action as against a mortgagee of the property joined in such action, who without notice has recorded his mortgage subsequent to the commencement of the mechanic's lien action but prior to the filing of the notice of the attorney's lien.[7.5]

[7.5] Axel Newman Heating & Plumbing Co. v. Sauers, 234 Minn 140, 47 NW2d 769

§ 228. — As between Lien and Set-off.

Am Jur cited in Block v. Gates (Mun Ct App Dist Col) 68 A2d 898.

p. 399, n. 11. Sheffield v. Preacher, 175 Ga 719, 165 SE 742, 84 ALR 1159.

p. 399, n. 13. La Fleur v. Schiff, 239 Minn 206, 58 NW2d 320.

§ 230. Waiver or Loss of Lien.

Am Jur cited in Todd v Mutual Factors, Inc. 3 App2d 537, 161 NYS2d 738, affd 4 NY2d 759, 172 NYS2d 169, 149 NE2d 94.

Page 400. Add at end of section: The discharge of an attorney by the client without good cause does not defeat a lien for attorneys' fees.[10.5]

[10.5] Peresipka v Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. (CA7 Ind) 231 F2d 268, 59 ALR2d 554.

§ 232. — Compromise or Settlement by Client.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1243, 2:1254.

RCL quoted in Franklin v. Local Finance Co. 234 Mo App 973, 136 SW(2d) 112.

Page 401. Add new paragraph at end of section: Some statutes expressly provide, and others are so construed, that the lien of the attorney cannot be affected by any settlement between the parties without the consent of the attorney, whether before or after the recovery of a judgment.[1.5]

[1.5] Anno: 122 ALR 974.

The constitutionality of such statutes has been sometimes attacked on the ground that they deprive the parties of their right to contract and to settle their controversies out of court. But their validity is generally sustained on the theory that they do not have the effect of prohibiting the parties from effecting a peaceful settlement, but merely require them to have in view the attorney's lien, and satisfy the same from the proceeds of the settlement. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. Hurst, 198 Ark 546, 129 SW(2d) 970, 122 ALR 965 Anno: 122 ALR 975.

But the New York statute providing that "if, in an action commenced to recover damages for a personal injury or for death as the result of a personal injury, an attorney having or claiming to have a lien for services performed or to be performed who shall have appeared for the person or persons having or claiming to have a right of action for such injury or death, no settlement or adjustment of such action shall be valid, unless consented to in writing by such attorney and by the person or persons for whom he shall have appeared, or approved by an order of the court in which such action is brought," has been declared beyond the legislative power. Anno: 122 ALR 976.

§ 234. Cause of Action.

p. 402, n. 8.

At common law, apart from statute, an attorney's charging lien attaches to the judgment only, and does not embrace the cause of action itself. Norrell v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230, 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238.

§ 236. Judgments, Decrees, or Awards.

p. 403, n. 4. Peresipka v Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. (CA7 Ind) 231 F2d 268, 59 ALR2d 554.

p. 404, n. 8. Peresipka v Elgin, J. & E. R Co. (CA7 Ind) 231 F2d 268, 59 ALR2d 554.

§ 238. Property Recovered in Litigation.

Am Jur cited in Chancey v. Bauer (CCA 5th) 97 F(2d) 293, rehearing denied in (CCA 5th) 97 F2d 994.

Billingham v Thiele (Fla App) 107 So 2d 238, cert discharged (Fla) 109 So 2d 763.

Hagearty v. Ryan, 123 Conn 372, 195 A 730 (n. 13).

RCL quoted in Crutchfield v. Foster, 214 NC 551, 200 SE 395.

§ 239. Money and Funds.

Am Jur cited in Brotherton v. Stone, 197 Ga 74, 28 SE2d 467.

p. 406, n. 14. An attorney who was hired by the mother of an illegitimate child to prosecute a claim against father for support money for child, may make legitimate charge against fund recovered. State v Cosby (Okla) 285 P2d 210

§ 240. — Public Funds.

Am Jur cited in Com. v. Gerlach, 347 Pa 385, 32 A(2d) 410

p. 406, n. 10. Peresipka v Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. (CA7 Ind) 231 F2d 268, 59 ALR2d 554.

p. 407, n. 18.

Where an overpayment of social security taxes was refunded to a client with the agreement that he would immediately return the check to the government for application against an income tax claim, the client's attorney had no lien on the refund. Lyman v. Campbell, 87 App DC 44, 182 F2d 700.

§ 240.5. (New text) Share or Interest in Decedent's Estate, or in Trust.

The right of an attorney to a nonstatutory lien on his client's share in a decedent's estate usually must be determined under the individual facts or contractual provisions involved.[1] So where a testator bequeathed his entire estate to a daughter and son, and expressly excluded his widow under the will, and, after the widow elected to take against the will, the daughter orally employed one attorney to represent her interests, and employed an additional attorney under a written agreement that he should receive a stated percentage "of all that is received or recovered by suit or settlement" after payment of fees to the first attorney, it has been held that neither attorney had a charging lien to protect them after the widow and daughter entered into a private settlement of their differences without notice to the daughter's attorneys and in disregard of her written and oral obligations to them, where, although the attorneys represented her interest and co-operated with the fiduciary in collecting assets and resisting improper claims against the estate, there was no proof that the attorneys either created a fund for distribution or successfully defended the claims.[2] But where an action was brought in behalf of certain heirs, including married women and minors, for the purpose of setting aside certain deeds purporting to have been executed by the deceased conveying his entire estate, which deeds, it was alleged, were procured to be executed by the fraud and undue influence of a son who was the administrator of the estate, and, after protracted litigation, the conveyances made by the deceased during his last days were set aside, it has been held that such attorneys were entitled to a lien on a final recovery in favor of the heirs who were their clients, notwithstanding the fact that other intricate questions remained to be settled.[3]

In some cases the question of an attorney's right to a lien against his client's share in a decedent's estate has been complicated by the fact that the attorney was also employed by the personal representative or that the attorney represented an administrator in both his individual and fiduciary capacities.[4] Thus, in a case which involved the question whether services of attorneys retained by heirs to defend a suit by one claiming the entire estate of a decedent were performed in behalf of such heirs or in behalf of the administrators, by whom the attorneys were also retained, the court, in apparently assuming the right of the attorneys to a lien in the absence of employment by the administrators, has held that the attorneys were entitled to a lien for their services under a contingent fee contract with the heirs for a percentage of the amount received by them, which contract recognized the fact of the attorneys' employment by the administrators, and where the claim of the alleged sole heir was defeated and a partial settlement of the estate was decreed in favor of the attorneys' clients.[5] And where it appeared that the widow of a decedent had been appointed temporary administratrix of his estate and had received, in such capacity, the proceeds of an insurance policy upon the life of her deceased husband, but when other relatives of the decedent claimed the right to administer the estate upon the grounds that she had not been the lawful wife of the decedent, the widow retained attorneys to represent her in the litigation and contracted to pay them a percentage of the total amount of the insurance paid over to her, and in such proceedings the rights of the widow were upheld and she was appointed permanent administratrix, it has been held that the attorneys were entitled to intervene, for the purpose of fixing their lien, in the subsequent action brought by the widow to repudiate a contract of settlement made by her with the other heirs, the court saying that the attorneys had a lien upon at least a part of the funds impounded by the court in the equitable proceeding, since, while a temporary administratrix cannot bind the estate to pay fees to resist setting up a will upon issues devisavit vel non, and a permanent administrator may not ratify such a contract made by the temporary administrator, under the circumstances appearing in the present case, the attorneys would nevertheless be entitled to a lien upon the part of the fund secured for her, not merely as temporary administratrix, but as an individual.[6]

Where an attorney advanced money to a client who was the proponent of a will, under an agreement that whatever costs, fees, or charges of the court in such action that might be required, or advanced, should be paid by the client "out of said estate," in the event of recovery by the client, it has been held that the attorney has to lien upon the costs judgment entered against the contestants upon the upholding of the will.[7] And it has been held that where an attorney, while acting as counsel for a legatee, advanced for him various sum of money in the payment of costs and expenses accruing in the proceedings, no legal lien, either by statute or common law, accrued upon any fund due the legatee as security for the sums advanced, where the attorney never secured actual possession of his client's distributive share of the estate.[8]

Prior to the New York statute declaring surrogate's courts to be courts of record, the view was taken that an attorney had no lien upon a decree procured in such courts directing an executor to pay money to the attorney's client in the proceedings before the surrogate, upon the theory that the surrogate's court was not a court of record, and that in such courts there are no "attorneys," in the sense in which that term is used in courts of record, and that it is only in respect to the party's character as attorney or solicitor that the claim to a lien exists.[9] But after the enactment of a statute establishing such courts as courts of record, and particularly in view of the express provision given the parties therein to appear by attorney, it has been held that, assuming that there is no distinction with respect to a lien arising in proceedings requiring an accounting and distribution by executors, between the claim of an attorney for professional services in the surrogate's court and that for services in any other court, attorneys representing the heirs and next of kin have a lien for their reasonable compensation upon a decree entered by the surrogate, and that the surrogate has power to protect it by vacating the satisfaction of such a decree made in discharge of their rights, independently of the provisions of the Attorneys' Lien Act.[10]

The right of an attorney to a statutory lien on his client's share in a decedent's estate or in a trust is dependent largely upon the provisions of the particular statute involved, but in general the right of an attorney to a lien upon his client's share in a decedent's estate has been allowed under the various lien acts.[11] In particular, such liens have been allowed with respect to proceedings to contest or procure the probate of a will,[12] to proceedings for or against an accounting by the representative,[13] and to proceedings in behalf of trust beneficiaries.[14] The lien has also been allowed in other proceedings of a varying nature instituted or conducted in behalf of a legatee, devisee, or distributee.[15] Under some statutes, however, the lien has not been allowed in connection with these varying proceedings.[16]

Aside from the question whether the proceeding in which an attorney has performed services in behalf of a client interested in a decedent's estate is one in which the statutory lien will attach, the question has arisen in some cases whether the money or property distributed to, or eventually to come into the hands of, the client, is of such character, or is obtained in such manner, as to permit the lien to arise and attach thereto. Determination of this question, of course, rests upon the individual facts. The typical attorney's lien statute provides that the lien shall attach "to a verdict, report, decision or judgment in his client's favor, and the proceeds thereof in whosoever hands they may come." In some cases, the results of the litigation were such as to lead the courts to hold that there were no "proceeds" to which the lien could attach.[17] Under the circumstances existing in other cases, it has been held that the money or property coming to the client was the "proceeds" of the litigation instituted by the attorney, giving him a right to the statutory lien under the provision above noted.[18] Under other forms of attorneys' lien acts, the question has also arisen as to whether the result of the litigation was a "recovery" which would serve as the basis of the attorney's lien, the answer, under the circumstances involved, being in the affirmative.[19]

[1] Anno: 175 ALR 1134.

[2] Purman's Estate, 358 Pa 187, 56 A2d 86, 175 ALR 1129.

Anno: 175 ALR 1134.

[3] Anno: 175 ALR 1134.

The court in this instance said that even if the services of such attorneys had terminated before the decree in favor of the heirs, or if for any reason they had found it necessary to retire from the case, or from their representation of the heirs, and a decree had been finally rendered in the case, such attorneys, with other counsel representing the heirs at the time of the final recovery, should have been allowed a fee and the whole declared a lien upon the recovery in favor of all the counsel, with the original attorneys participating according to the value of their services rendered up to the time of their discharge or retirement. Anno: 175 ALR 1135.

[4] Anno: 175 ALR 1135.

[5] Anno: 175 ALR 1135.

The court in this instance pointed out that the contract entered into by the parties recognized no inconsistency in the dual employment of the attorneys, and that the administrators were primarily concerned with charges against the estate, and the proper collection of assets, and that while they were also interested in the proper distribution thereof for their own protection in the administration of the trust, as between contesting claimants to an estate, the contestants were the ones primarily interested, and that there was therefore no inconsistency in the dual employment. Anno: 175 ALR 1135.

[6–10] Anno: 175 ALR 1136.

[11] Anno: 175 ALR 1145.

[12] Anno: 175 ALR 1148.

Under the Tennessee statute apparently providing that attorneys who bring suit in a court of record shall have a lien on the plaintiff's cause of action from the date of the filing of the suit or subsequent employment of the attorney, it was held in Roberts v. Vaughn, 142 Tenn 361, 219 SW 1034, 9 ALR 1528, that an attorney employed by an infant's next friend to contest the will of the infant's father, which disinherited him, was entitled to a lien for his services on the share of the estate secured to the infant by a compromise judgment.

[13] Anno: 175 ALR 1150.

Under the New York statute providing for the attachment of an attorney's lien from the commencement of a "special proceeding" as well as from the commencement of an action or counterclaim, it has been held or recognized that an attorney's lien arises in a successful proceeding brought by an attorney in behalf of legatees, devisees, or other distributees to compel an accounting, settlement, or distribution by the personal representative. Anno: 175 ALR 1150

[14] But see Keaton v. Stephenson, 206 Okla 32 240 P2d 1088, wherein an attempted assignment of twenty-five per cent of the income from a spendthrift trust to attorneys who were employed to protect the beneficiary's interest was held not to create an interest in the fund under a statute permitting property in the hands of trustees to be reached for "necessary services."

Anno: 175 ALR 1151.

[15] Anno: 175 ALR 1146.

[16] Anno: 175 ALR 1146–1151.

[17] Anno: 175 ALR 1153.

[18] Anno: 175 ALR 1154.

[19] Anno: 175 ALR 1156.

§ 242. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1242, 2:1243, 2:1245–2:1250, 2:1252, 2:1253; 13 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 13:713.

Am Jur cited in Neighbors & Danielson v West Nebraska Methodist Hospital, — Neb — 77 NW2d 667; Marshall v Casteel, 143 Neb 71, 11 NW2d 818.

Crawford v Crane, 204 Or 60, 282 P2d 348.

Turtle Creek Bank & T. Co. v. Murdock, 150 Pa Super Ct 277, 28 A(2d) 320.

Page 407. Add, following the word "process" in the third line of the section: The proper procedure, where a charging lien has attached to a judgment or where the money has been paid into court, is for the attorney to file an intervening petition and have the amount and extent of his lien judicially determined.[20.1] [20.1] Myers v. Miller, 134 Neb. 824, 279 N. W. 778, 117 A.L.R. 977.

Annotation: 117 A.L.R. 983.
p. 407, n. 4. Anno: 59 ALR2d 573.

§ 244. Equitable Remedy.

Am Jur quoted in Neighbors & Danielson v West Nebraska Methodist Hospital, — Neb —, 77 NW2d 667.
Am Jur cited in Crawford v Crane, 204 Or 60. 282 P2d 348.
p. 408, n. 8. Norrell v. Chasan, 125 NJ Eq 230, 4 A(2d) 88, 120 ALR 1238.

§ 245. Independent Action at Law.

Am Jur cited in Nichols v. Kroelinger (Fla) 46 So2d 722.

§ 246. Liability of Adverse Party for Destroying Lien.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1244.
Am. Jur. cited in Heinisch v. Travelers Mut. Casualty Co. 135 Neb 13, 280 NW 234 (notes 15, 16); Spethman v. Hofeldt, 141 Neb 83, 2 NW(2d) 620.

Page 408. Add, following note 16: The judgment debtor may, however, pay the amount of the judgment into court; and if he notifies the attorney who claims the lien of the fact of such payment, he is not liable therefor though the judge of the court, upon application of the attorney, refuses to recognize the lien and orders the amount paid to the client.[16.1]

[16.1] Myers v. Miller, 134 Neb. 824, 279 N. W. 778, 117 A.L.R. 977.
Annotation: 117 A.L.R. 983.

Page 408. Add following note 17: Depending in any particular case upon the terms of the statute involved and the construction given it by the courts.[17.5]

[17.5] Anno: 146 ALR 67.
In some jurisdictions and under some circumstances an attorney who is allowed to prosecute the original action to final judgment even though his client has, without his consent, compromised or settled his cause of action before judgment. Where this remedy is pursued it seems obvious that any recovery by the attorney must be based upon the establishment of the merits of the cause of action of his client. Anno: 146 ALR 71.
p. 409, n. 18. Slayton v. Russ, 205 Ark 474. 169 SW(2d) 571. 146 ALR 64.
Anno: 146 ALR 75.
Under a statute providing that if a pending suit is settled without the consent of plaintiff's attorney, the Court shall, upon the attorney's motion, enter judgment for a reasonable fee, lack of merit in plaintiff's original cause of action is no defense to the attorney's motion to have his fee fixed. Slayton v Russ, 205 Ark 474, 169 SW(2d) 571, 146 ALR 64.
p. 409, n. 19. Anno: 146 ALR 69.
The nature of the contract between the attorney and his client as to whether he is employed for a definite fee or on a contingent fee basis, or without any definite agreement as to the amount of his compensation, may also be a factor in determining whether and in what way the merit of the client's cause affects the right of an attorney to recover his fee from an adverse party with whom his client has compromised such cause. Where an attorney has a choice of remedies for enforcing his claim against the adverse party, the effect of the merit or want of merit of the client's cause upon the attorney's rights may depend in some degree upon which remedy he chooses. Anno: 146 ALR 67.

Even though proof of the merits of his client's cause may not be essential to the establishment of a prima facie case entitling an attorney to recover compensation from an adverse party who, without his knowledge or consent, has compromised with his client, under some statutes and under some circumstances, it may be necessary, or at least desirable, to give such proof for the purpose of determining the amount recoverable. Anno: 146 ALR 78.

§ 247. Vacation of Settlement, Dismissal, or Satisfaction.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1244.

§ 248. Enforcement against Judgment.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1250, 2:1251.
Am Jur cited in Billingham v Thiele (Fla App) 107 So 2d 238, cert discharged (Fla) 109 So 2d 763.
p. 410, n. 8.
The charging lien arising under the New York statute is considered a proceeding in rem, enforceable only against the proceeds of a judgment secured in the particular case. Hoxsey v. Hoffpauir (CA5th Tex) 180 F2d 84, cert den 339 US 953. 94 L ed 1366. 70 S Ct 841.

§ 249. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700.
Re Canzoneri (Mo) 334 SW2d 30.
Re Frankel, 20 NJ 588. 120 A2d 603.
Am Jur cited in Re Stone, 77 Ariz 115, 267 P2d 892.
Re Florida State Bar Asso. 134 Fla 851. 186 So 280 (notes 19–4).
Re Filipiak, 232 Ind 414, 113 NE2d 282.
Re Sympson (Mo) 322 SW2d 808; State Bar Committee v Stumbaugh (Mo) 123 SW2d 51.
Re Beakley, 6 Wash(2d) 410, 107 P(2d) 1097.
RCL cited in Re Sparks, 267 Ky 93. 101 SW (2d) 194.
Re Sparrow, 338 Mo 203, 90 SW(2d) 401.
Re Lane, 176 Okla 60, 54 P(2d) 339.
p. 410, n. 11. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671; Re Mayberry, 295 Mass 155. 3 NE(2d) 248. 105 ALR 976.
p. 411, n. 14. Re Isserman, 345 US 286, 97 L ed 1013, 73 S Ct 676.
Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala 113, 152 So 229. 107 ALR 671, 684.
Re Rothrock, 16 Cal(2d) 449. 106 P(2d) 907. 131 ALR 226.
Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.
Toft v Ketchum, 18 NJ 280, 113 A2d 671. 52 ALR2d 1208, adhered to 18 NJ 611, 114 A2d 863, 52 ALR2d 1217, cert den 350 US 887. 110 L ed 782, 76 S Ct 141.
p. 411 n. 15.
A judgment of disbarment is not to be considered in the nature of punishment, though it may have that practical effect, but rather its purpose is to exclude from the office of attorney, for the preservation of the purity of the courts and the protection of the public, one who has demonstrated that he is not a proper person to hold such office. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166. 37 NE(2d) 516. 137 ALR 766

Page 411. Add new paragraph at end of section: It is well understood, of course, that an attorney at law is free to retire from the practice of his profession at any time, subject to existing engagements or commitments. He may also resign his membership in the bar and have his name stricken from the roll of attorneys, although he may not do so as of right, unless it is otherwise provided by statute or rule of court, for the reason that it would be possible for him thereby to prevent the exercise of the court's power, by disciplinary action in a proper case, to enforce the observance of established standards of conduct in the practice of the profession.[16.5] Ordinarily, therefore, the resignation, to be effective, must be accepted or consented to by the court having jurisdiction for such purpose, and such acceptance or consent may be withheld or refused where it would enable the attorney to evade or forestall disbarment or disciplinary action.[16.51] A rule applied in some early English cases was that the name of an attorney would not be stricken from the rolls at his own request, without an affidavit that he did not apply therefor under an apprehension that charges would be preferred against him.[16.52] It has been stated that the basis of this rule was that at the time of its adoption the English courts had the power to punish professional misconduct by imprisonment as well as by reprimand, suspension, or disbarment.[16.53] It is recognized, however, that under some circumstances the purposes of a disbarment or suspension may be fully satisfied, and the ends of justice as well or better served by permitting the attorney to resign, and the decisions in this country are generally to the effect that the pendency or anticipation of disbarment or disciplinary proceedings against an attorney do not necessarily require the rejection of his application for permission to resign or to be stricken from the roll,[16.54] and that the question of acceptance or rejection rests in the judicial discretion of the court.[16.55] It has been stressed, however, that to warrant the acceptance of a resignation where charges against the attorney are pending or apprehended, it should appear that neither the public interest nor the purity of the courts would be adversely affected and that the administration of justice would not be hindered thereby.[16.56]

A resignation does not necessarily connote misconduct.[16.57]

Matters pertaining to the resignation of an attorney are governed in some jurisdictions by statutory provision or rules of court.[16.58] A common practice is to refer the question to some administrative officer or authority, or to a commission or commissioner, for investigation and report or recommendation.[16.59] In some jurisdictions, where the integrated bar system has been adopted, the resignation is submitted to the bar and the question of its acceptance or rejection determined primarily by its governing body or a special committee, subject to final action by the court.[16.6] The finding, determination, or recommendation of such body, officer, committee, or other authority, although not binding on the court, is usually accorded much weight.[16.61]

A resignation filed pursuant to a provision permitting an attorney at any time to file such resignation in the office of the clerk of the county in which he resides has been held effective to relinquish the rights conferred by his admission to the bar and to relieve him of the disabilities incident thereto, but not to effect the removal of his name from the roll of attorneys without the consent or approval of the court.[16.62]

The resignation of an attorney from membership in the state bar has been held not to be within the operation of a statute prohibiting a disbarred or suspended attorney from prosecuting an action in his own behalf in certain cases.[16.63]

[16.5] Ex parte Thompson, 32 Or 499. 52 P 570, 40 LRA 194.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 1280.

[16.51] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1280.

[16.52] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1280.

[16.53] See Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700, 54 ALR2d 1272.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 1280.

[16.54] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1280.

[16.55] Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700. 54 ALR2d 1272.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

[16.56] Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700. 54 ALR2d 1272.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

[16.57] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

[16.58] Ex parte Thompson, 32 Or 499. 52 P 570. 40 LRA 194.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

[16.59] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

[16.6] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

It has been held that the findings and recommendations of committees and officers of a state bar association in disciplinary proceedings against an attorney should be considered as those of an intermediate agency of the Supreme Court of the state, being an arm of that court in the exercise of such functions; they are entitled to receive due consideration and are of persuasive force, although power to render ultimate judgment is vested in the court. Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700. 54 ALR 2d 1272.

[16.61] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

[16.62] Ex parte Thompson. 32 Or 499. 52 P 570, 40 LRA 194.

Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

[16.63] Anno: 54 ALR2d 1281.

§ 250. Preliminary Inquest.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1317, 2:1323.

Am Jur quoted in Ex parte Chattanooga Bar Asso. 206 Tenn 7, 330 SW2d 337.

p. 411, n. 17. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala 113. 152 So 229. 107 A.L.R. 671

Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

It has been held that, although any investigation designed to improve the standing of the legal profession should be encouraged, it ought to be carried on by disinterested commissioners of the court and should proceed without financial or other support from any interested party. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

§ 251. Power of Courts to Suspend or Disbar.

Am Jur cited in Mullen v. Canfield. 10 App DC 168, 105 F2d 47.

Re Filipiak, 232 Ind 414, 113 NE2d 282; Beamer v Waddell, 221 Ind 232, 45 NE2d 1020.

p. 411, n. 19. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala 113. 152 So 229. 107 ALR 671.

Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22; People ex rel. Chicago Bar Association v Goodman. 366 Ill 346, 8 NE2d 941, 111 ALR 1.

Re Watson, 71 Nev 227, 286 P2d 254, 53 ALR 2d 301.

Ramstead v Morgan, 219 Or 383, 347 P2d 594, 77 ALR2d 481.

Control of membership in the bar of a state and of removal therefrom. is exclusively in the judicial department. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE2d 516, 137 ALR 766.

Although the legislature may make reasonable regulations governing the disbarment of attorneys, the ultimate power in such matters is in the courts. Ruckenbrod v. Mullins, 102 Utah 548. 133 P(2d) 325. 144 ALR 839.

English and American courts have for centuries possessed disciplinary powers over members of the bar, incident to their broader responsibility for keeping the administration of justice and the standards of professional conduct unsullied. Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

p. 412, n. 1. Re Watson, 71 Nev 227, 286 P2d 254, 53 ALR2d 301.

p. 412, n. 4. Ramstead v Morgan, 219 Or 383, 347 P2d 594, 77 ALR2d 481.

It has been held that the several county ethics and grievance committees are established as arms of the Supreme Court to receive and investigate complaints and present their report to the court, which, although giving due weight to the findings and conclusions of the committee, has the sole responsibility of deciding whether the attorney should be disciplined. Toft v Kechum, 18 NJ 280, 113 A2d 671, 52 ALR2d 1208, adhered to 18 NJ 611, 114 A2d 863, 52 ALR2d 1217, cert den 350 US 887, 100 L ed 782, 76 S Ct 141.

Page 412. Add, following note 4: If judicial power constitutionally may be vested in some body other than the courts, such body may rightfully exercise the power to suspend or disbar attorneys and determine whether the charges against any attorney warrant discipline of a particular nature.[4.1] The jurisdiction of the judicial department of a state with respect to membership of a particular person in the bar of the state is not exhausted by a final judgment, favorable or adverse to such person, in a proceeding for his disbarment.[4.5]

[4.1] Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

The Alabama statute creating the board of commissioners of the state bar and conferring upon them, inter alia, the power to suspend or disbar attorneys subject to the court's power of review is within the constitutional powers of the legislature, especially in view of the affirmative provision of the Constitution that powers of a judicial nature may be invested in such persons as the legislature may designate. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

[4.5] Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

p. 412, n. 5. Anno: 94 L ed 131; 3 L ed 2d 1965.

Disbarment by a state does not automatically disbar members of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, but that court will, in the absence of some grave reason to the contrary, follow the finding of the state that the character requisite for membership in the bar is lacking. Re Crow, 359 US 1007, 3 L ed 2d 1025, 79 S Ct 1152; Anno: 3 L ed 2d 1965: Re Isserman, 345 US 286, 97 L ed 1013, 73 S Ct 676.

An order disbarring an attorney under former Rule 2, paragraph 5, of the Rules of the Supreme Court of the United States, under which disbarment in a state was ground for disbarment from practice in the Supreme Court unless the attorney showed good cause to the contrary, will be set aside upon rehearing, where, after the entry of the order of disbarment, the Supreme Court has adopted new Rules, which, in Rule 8, adds the provision that "no order of disbarment will be entered except with the concurrence of a majority of the justices participating," and a majority of the justices participating on rehearing find no ground for disbarment. Re Isserman, 348 US 1, 99 L ed 3, 75 S Ct 6.

§ 252. Liability of Attorney to Disbarment or Suspension.

Am Jur quoted in State ex rel. Foster v. Washington State Bar Asso. 23 Wash2d 800, 162 P2d 261, 160 ALR 1366.

p. 412, n. 6.

A license to practice law constitutes no defense in a suit to enjoin the prosecution of actions by an attorney whose employment was procured by solicitation through a family partnership employing "chasers" for him. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Andrews, 338 Ill App 552, 88 NE2d 364, 14 ALR2d 728.

p. 413, n. 10. It has been held that an appointment to the bar is for life, subject to discipline, and is not lost by taking judicial office. Re Watson, 71 Nev 227, 286 P2d 254, 53 ALR2d 301.

Page 413. Add, following note 12: The fact that an attorney remaining a member of the bar no longer engages in active practice does not relieve him of the responsibility of adhering to the Canons of Professional Ethics.[12.5]

[12.5] Re Rothman, 12 NJ 528, 97 A2d 621, 39 ALR2d 1032.

p. 413, n. 13. Anno: 54 ALR2d 1285.

§ 253. Discretion of Court in Suspension or Disbarring.

Am Jur quoted in Re Williams, 233 Mo App 1174, 128 SW(2d) 1098.

Re Frankel, 20 NJ 588, 120 A2d 603.

Ingle v. Kivett, 30 Tenn App 1, 201 SW2d 545; Schoolfield v. Bean, 26 Tenn App 30, 167 SW(2d) 359.

Am Jur cited in Re Mason (Mo App) 203 SW 2d 750.

p. 413, n. 14. Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

The loss of status to the individual disbarred cannot deter the court from its duty to strike from its rolls an attorney who has engaged in conduct inconsistent with the standard expected of officers of the court. Re Isserman, 345 US 286, 97 L ed 1013, 73 S Ct 676.

§ 254. Effect of Suspension or Disbarment.

p. 414, n. 1. See Re Stephenson, 243 Ala 342 10 So(2d) 1, 143 ALR 166.

Page 414. Add at end of section: A judgment in disciplinary proceeding against an attorney does not affect the rights of any injured person to maintain a civil action against the attorney, nor prevent the public authorities from the institution of criminal proceedings.[6.5]

[6.5] Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700, 54 ALR2d 1272.

§ 256. — Right to Practice in Another Jurisdiction.

Am Jur cited in Re Clay (Ky) 261 SW2d 301.

p. 415, n. 15. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1216.

Page 415. Add, following "in another state" in the eighth line in the section:[15.5] However, the few cases which have considered the matter ordinarily hold that a judgment of disbarment or suspension rendered in one state, should, as a matter of comity, and in order to promote the maintenance of the proper decency and dignity in the legal profession, be recognized, and should be entitled to full faith and credit in a sister state, or states, in which the accused attorney was licensed to practice.[15.51]

[15.5] Anno: 173 ALR 298.

[15.51] Copren v. State Bar, 64 Nev 364, 183 P2d 833, 173 ALR 284.

Anno: 173 ALR 298.

A court which in the exercise of comity recognizes the suspension of an attorney from practice by the courts of another state because of acts done in such other state, should suspend him from practice locally merely for the remainder of the term fixed by the judgment of suspension in the other state. Copren v. State Bar, 64 Nev 364, 183 P2d 833, 173 ALR 284.

p. 415 n. 16. Anno: 94 L ed 131; 98 L ed 796.

Page 415. Add following note 16: The United States Supreme Court has said that while a lawyer is admitted into a federal court by way of a state court, he is not automatically sent out of the federal court by the same route; the federal and state judicial systems of courts have autonomous control over their officers, among whom lawyers are included;[16.5] while it is not for the United States Supreme Court, except within the narrow limits for review open to it, to sit in judgment on disbarments in state courts,[16.51] disbarment being the very serious business that it is, the federal courts must afford ample opportunity to show cause why an accused practitioner should not be disbarred;[16.52] and has held that when, in disbarment proceedings in a federal court, the accusation rests on disbarment by a state court, the state court's determination is entitled to high respect, but is not conclusively binding on the federal court; in this situation, the federal court should not order disbarment where there exists a grave reason which convinces the federal court that to allow the natural consequences of disbarment by the state court to have their effect would conflict with the federal court's duty not to disbar except upon the conviction that, under principles of right and justice, it is constrained to do so.[16.53]

[16.5-16.53] Theard v United States, 354 US 278, 1 L ed2d 1342, 77 S Ct 1274.
Anno: 3 L ed 2d 1964.

Page 415. Add, following note 17: And the fact that attorneys were indefinitely suspended from practice in the court of appeals of another circuit, on the ground that they filed a scandalous and insulting brief, has been held not sufficient to justify disbarment in the Federal district court, the court pointing out that, while the attorneys' professional delinquency was aggravated, it fell short of criminal conduct.[17.5]

[17.5] Anno: 94 L ed 131.

§ 257. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1311-2:1315.

R. C. L. quoted in Re Brown, 64 S. D. 87, 264 NW 521.

p. 416, n. 18. It has been held that even in the exercise of a privilege, a lawyer should so conduct himself that the work of the courts and the administration of justice will not suffer by reason of his continuing to hold a license to practice law. Re Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR2d 1355.

Page 416. Add following note 2: An attorney may be disbarred for his deliberate refusal to co-operate with the court in its efforts to expose unethical practices.[2.5]

[2.5] See Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954, infra, § 296 (Supp).
p. 416, n. 3. Anno: 163 ALR 910.

Page 416. Add, following note 3: A statute providing for the revocation or suspension of a legal professional license will be held to violate due process if it appears that the conduct specified in the statute as ground for revocation or suspension is not such that its proscription is reasonably related to the purpose for which the statute itself was enacted.[3.5]

[3.5] Anno: 98 L ed 852-855.
p. 416, n. 6. Baker v Miller, 236 Ind 20, 138 NE2d 145, 59 ALR2d 1393.

There is nothing inconsistent or incongruous in following the mechanics and mode of procedure provided for by the statute for the initiation, and conduct of proceedings for the reprimand, suspension or removal of attorneys at the same time enlarging the statutory grounds for such action by the exercise of the inherent powers possessed by the courts in these matters. Re McBride, 164 Ohio St 419 58 Ohio Ops 242, 132 NE2d 113, cert den 351 US 965, 100 L ed 1485, 76 S Ct 1030.

Page 416. Add new paragraph at end of section: The grounds of disbarment from practice in Federal courts are not governed by state statutes, but by Federal law.[9.5]

Whether an attorney will be held subject to disciplinary action because of his conduct in connection with a political campaign depends, of course, upon the actual acts or omissions of which he was guilty, in the light of the applicable statutes or court rules relating to the grounds on which an attorney may be disbarred, suspended, etc. Consequently, each case is dependent upon its own facts.[9.52]

[9.5] Anno: 94 L ed 131
[9.52] Re Crum, 55 ND 876, 215 NW 682, 55 ALR 220 (suspended).
Re Snyder's Case, 301 Pa 276, 152 A 33, 76 ALR 666 (suspended).
Anno: 57 ALR2d 1363 et seq.

It has been held that financial contributions by lawyers to the campaign of a candidate for judicial office are not improper where in their opinion the candidate merits such support and the expense of the campaign, reasonably conducted, exceeds that which the candidate should reasonably bear himself. Re Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR2d 1355

It has been held that a lawyer may engage in political activity and speak as freely as any other citizen, but in a contest between lawyers for a judicial office, a lawyer under his oath and the duties imposed upon him by law has an added responsibility and should seek to maintain a higher standard of conduct than can be expected of one who is not a member of a privileged and a responsible profession. Re Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR2d 1355.

The misconduct of an attorney campaigning for judicial office, in charging his opponent and lawyers supporting his opponent with improper conduct and motives, has been held sufficient to subject him to reprimand, but not to demonstrate an unfitness to practice law after having exercised that privilege for more than 20 years, particularly in view of the defendant's recognition in retrospect that his conduct did not measure up to the standards required of a licensed attorney, and of his promise not to so conduct himself in the future. Re Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR 2d 1355.

§ 258. Misconduct before Admission.

p. 416, n. 10. Anno: 165 ALR 1140.
p. 416, n. 11. Anno: 165 ALR 1140.

Page 416. Add, following note 11: In a number of cases it has been held that misconduct prior to admission to the bar, unconnected with his admission, is not ground for his disbarment.[11.5]

[11.5] Anno: 165 ALR 1139.

§ 259. Fraud in Procuring Admission.

Am Jur cited in Re Lane (Ky) 291 SW2d 19.
p. 417, n. 12. Anno: 165 ALR 1141 et seq.
p. 417, n. 13. Anno: 165 ALR 1144.
p. 417, n. 14. Anno: 165 ALR 1149.
p. 417, n. 15. Anno: 165 ALR 1147; 173 ALR 301.

Page 417. Add, following note 15: or that he had been charged, with or indicted for, an alleged crime,[15.5] or who falsely denies, in his application for admission, that he had ever been a party to any action or proceeding other than those referred to in his questionnaire,[15.51]

[15.5, 15.51] Anno: 165 ALR 1151.

§ 260. Moral Turpitude; Want or Loss of Moral Character.

Am Jur cited in Re Williams, 233 Mo App 1174 128 SW(2d) 1098

p. 417, n. 1. It has been held that although a court does not have the function or right to regulate the morals, habits, or private lives of lawyers, who like other citizens are free to act and to be responsible for their acts, a duty to suspend or revoke the privilege to practice law may exist where the morals, habits, or conduct of a lawyer demonstrate unfitness to practice law or adversely affect the proper administration of justice. Re Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR2d 1355.

p. 417, n. 4. Re Burrus, 364 Mo 22, 258 SW2d 625.

p. 417, n. 18. Anno: 64 ALR2d 304.

§ 261. Professional Misconduct Generally.

Am Jur cited in Re Wilson, 76 Ariz 49, 258 P 2d 433.

Re Mason (Mo App) 203 SW2d 750.

Re O'Doherty, 14 App Div 2d 4, 217 NYS2d 961, app & rearg den 14 App Div 2d 848, 218 NYS2d 528, app dismd in part 11 NY2d 767, 227 NYS2d 16, 181 NE2d 761.

Re Damron, 131 W Va 66, 45 SE2d 741.

p. 417, n. 5. Anno: 98 L ed 796.

p. 418, n. 10.

In disciplinary proceedings against an attorney which involve only questions of professional propriety and in which there is no suggestion of fraud or dishonesty, the court will not pass upon practices or methods which have been abandoned. Re Thibodeau, 295 Mass 374, 3 NE(2d) 749, 106 ALR 542.

§ 261.5. (New text) — Heir-hunting.

Participation by an attorney at law, either through so-called "probate research" organizations or acting alone, in the solicitation of heirs, in consideration of an assignment of a portion of their interest in the proceeds of an estate, to engage such organization and attorney to establish such heir's interest in the estate, has been held to be unprofessional conduct and ground for suspension or disbarment.[1]

[1] Anno: 171 ALR 352.

§ 262. Perverting or Obstructing Justice.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1311.

Am Jur cited in Re Taylor, 300 Ky 448, 189 SW2d 403.

Re Wright, 69 Nev 259, 248 P2d 1080.

RCL cited in Re Disbarment Proceedings, 321 Pa 81, 184 A 59.

p. 418, n. 15. Anno: 94 L ed 141 (Federal courts); 3 L ed 2d 1963 (federal courts).

An order of the Commissioner of Patents, disbarring an attorney on the ground of gross misconduct, has been held supported by findings that the attorney, in support of a client's patent application, presented to the patent office an article published in a trade journal and naming as author an apparently disinterested labor leader, in the preparation of which the attorney had participated, and that he concealed from the patent office the fact that the article was prepared, and its publication under the labor leader's name was procured, by and on behalf of his client; and this was held, even though the statements made in the article were true, and the application had been filed nineteen years before commencement of the disbarment proceedings. Kingsland v. Dorsey, 338 US 318, 94 L ed 123, 70 S Ct 123, reh den 338 US 939, 94 L ed 579, 70 S Ct 341.

p. 418, notes 16, 17. Anno: 94 L ed 142 (Federal courts).

p. 418, n. 18. The mere bringing of an ordinary action without consent and even against the directions of a client is not in all cases ground for disciplinary action against an attorney. However, where the nature of the action of the parties defendant is such as to result in widespread publicity and to subject the client to substantial embarrassment, and the action goes far beyond the scope of the client's claim, the attorney then has not only violated his duty to his client but has tended to bring the entire profession into disrepute. Re Edge (Ky) 282 SW2d 830.

Page 419. Add new paragraph at end of section: It has been held that an attorney who attempts by personal influence to control a judge or jury in their decision in a pending case, or who merely holds himself out as able to do so, whether or not he actually makes the attempt, and whether or not he succeeds or fails in the attempt, is subject to disbarment.[7.5]

Disbarment of a state district attorney admitted to practice in the Federal district court has been held justified, where the evidence showed that there were widespread, flagrant, open, and notorious violations of the gambling laws in the judicial district over a long number of years and the attorney had made no more than a token effort to discharge his duties and enforce them.[7.51]

[7.5] Anno: 94 L ed 142 (Federal courts).

A charge, if proven, that an attorney incited and encouraged his clients to influence improperly the judicial action of the court in pending litigation, by newspaper publications and printed circulars, disparaging the judicial conduct of the court, with intent to intimidate the judges in their action, has been held to support disbarment. Anno: 94 L ed 143 (Federal court).

In the absence of any attempt to debauch jurors, the mere fact that an attorney employed another person to find out whether in a prosecution then on trial in which he was counsel the jurors were qualified as to residence and citizenship and otherwise, the agent interviewing the wife of one juror, and the brother of another, with approval of the attorney, has been held not to justify disbarment, althougth justifying some punishment. Anno: 94 L ed 143 (Federal court).

[7.51] Anno: 94 L ed 134 (Federal courts).

§ 263. — Fabricating or Suppressing Papers or Evidence and Tampering with Witnesses.

Am Jur cited in Re Taylor, 300 Ky 448, 189 SW2d 403.

Re Wright, 69 Nev 259, 248 P2d 1080.

p. 419, n. 12. Anno: 94 L ed 143 (Federal courts).

Page 419. Add, as new paragraph at end of section: It has been held that an attorney may assert any inferences from the facts of the case that seem to him arguable, but he cannot present his inferences from the facts as if they were the very facts themselves; counsel is responsible under the canons of professional ethics for making known to the court any decisions in the state adverse to his cause in the event his opponent fails to cite them, and he may not cite authorities which cannot conceivably be taken to stand for the proposition for which he cites them, alrepresent the meaning of such cases.[16.7]

[16.7] Re Greenberg, 15 NJ 132, 104 A2d 46.

§ 264. Misconduct toward Court or Judge.

Am Jur cited in Re Damron, 131 W Va 66, 45 SE2d 741.

p. 419, n. 17. Sacher v. New York Bar Asso. 347 US 388, 98 L ed 790, 74 S Ct 569.

Anno: 98 L ed 796; 3 L ed 2d 1961 (federal courts).

Contempt of court is not an absolute ground for disbarment; on the other hand, the absence of a conspiracy to commit contempt is not decisive against disbarment for recurring acts of contempt. Re Isserman, 345 US 286, 97 L ed 1013, 73 S Ct 676.

p. 420, n. 19. Anno: 94 L ed 138 (Federal courts); 98 L ed 797; 3 L ed 2d 1961 (federal courts).

§ 265. — Abusive Conduct.

p. 420, n. 1. Anno: 94 L ed 139 (Federal courts); 3 L ed 2d 1961.

p. 420, n. 7. Anno: 57 ALR2d 1364.

It has been held that a citizen does not, because he is a lawyer, forfeit his right to criticize a candidate for legal or judicial office. Re

Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR2d 1355.

§ 266. — Criticism of Judicial Acts.

Am Jur quoted in State Law Examiners v. Spriggs, 61 Wyo 70, 155 P2d 285

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. Florida Bar v Calhoon (Fla) 102 So 2d 604.

p. 421, n. 10. A finding, in support of suspension of an attorney from the practice of law, that a public speach made by the attorney during the pendency of a trial under the Smith Act (18 USC § 2385), in which trial she was defense counsel, impugned the judge's impartiality and fairness in conducting the trial is not supported by evidence that there were references in the speech to "horrible and shocking" things at the trial, the impossibility of a fair trial, and necessity, if the government's case were to be proved, of scrapping the rules of evidence, and the creation of new crimes unless the trial were stopped at once. Re Sawyer, 360 US 622, 3 L ed 2d 1473, 79 S Ct 1376; see annotation 3 L ed 2d 1962.

p. 421, n. 11. See Re Sawyer, 360 US 622, 3 L ed 2d 1473, 79 S Ct 1376; annotation 3 L ed 2d 1962.

p. 421, n. 14. Anno: 57 ALR2d 1364.

p. 421, n. 15. Anno: 57 ALR2d 1364.

It has been held that although a right exists to criticize a candidate for judicial office, or to criticize a judge for his past actions in office, or to comment on completed judicial proceedings, responsibility exists for an abuse of the right and, in the case of a lawyer, an abuse of the right of free speech may be some index of his character or fitness to be a lawyer. Re Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR2d 1355.

§ 268. Breach of Duties Owing to Client or Former Client.

Am Jur cited in Clark v. State Bar, 39 Cal2d 161, 246 P2d 1.

p. 422, n. 19. Anno: 94 L ed 134 et seq. (Federal courts).

p. 422, n. 20. Gair v Peck, 6 NY2d 97, 188 NYS2d 491, 160 NE2d 43, 77 ALR2d 390, motion gr 6 NY2d 983, 191 NYS2d 951, 161 NE2d 736, app dismd and cert den 361 US 374, 4 L ed 380, 80 S Ct 401.

Anno: 70 ALR2d 965–977.

That an attorney's charge is excessive or unreasonable has been held not to render it a violation of professional ethics; for such conclusion, it must be excessive to a degree which compels a finding that the attorney intended to overreach. Re Quinn, 25 NJ 284, 135 A2d 869, 70 ALR2d 956.

p. 422, n. 1. Anno: 70 ALR2d 965–977.

Page 422. Add following note 1: However, in a number of cases where fees charged by attorneys were perhaps unreasonable under the circumstances but not clearly exorbitant, disciplinary proceedings have been dismissed.[1.5] While in a few instances the fact that an attorney had made restitution, or had forgiven a portion, of an excessive fee has been considered as a mitigating circumstance in a disciplinary proceeding,[1.51] it has been held in a number of other instances that restitution would not preclude an inquiry into the initial conduct of an attorney in fixing an exorbitant fee,[1.52] and it has even been held that an attorney's forgiveness of a portion of an exorbitant fee demonstrated that the attorney himself felt that the fee was excessive.[1.53] In some cases where the reasonableness of an attorney's fee has not been free from doubt, it has been held that the attorney should not be disciplined until he had had an opportunity to refund the excessive amount or to have his liability therefor determined in a civil action.[1.54] An attorney's threat to resort to legal process to collect what he believes to be a bona fide fee does not constitute ground for disciplinary proceedings against him.[1.55]

[1.5] Anno: 70 ALR2d 977.

It has been held that an attorney will not be held to have acted in bad faith, so as to be subject to discipline, in charging $5,000 under an agreement with his client for a fee of one third of the value of the property recovered for the client where the grievance committee experts valued the property at $18,000 to $19,000, and the attorney's experts reached the sum of $30,000, and $7,000 was paid to the opposing party for his interest, since even upon accepting the figures of the committee experts as the true value, knowledge of the expert's ultimate valuation could not be attributed to the attorney at the time he charged and collected the $5,000 fee. Re Quinn, 25 NJ 284, 135 A2d 869, 70 ALR2d 956.

[1.51] Anno: 70 ALR2d 982.

[1.52] Re Quinn, 25 NJ 284, 135 A2d 869, 70 ALR2d 956.

Anno: 70 ALR2d 981.

[1.53] Anno: 70 ALR2d 983.

[1.54] Anno: 70 ALR2d 983.

[1.55] Re Quinn, 25 NJ 284, 135 A2d 869, 70 ALR2d 956.

p. 422, n. 2. Anno: 94 L ed 136 et seq. (Federal courts).

Where a corporation was formed to get around the usury laws and where the attorney was aware of that fact and also the fact that the borrower had little education or knowledge of business matters and was wholly unrepresented in the transaction, the attorney should have dealt with the borrower frankly and fairly or at least should have advised the borrower to have independent legal advice. Re Greenburg, 21 NJ 213, 121 A2d 520.

p. 422, n. 3. Anno: 194 L ed 138 (Federal courts).

p. 422, n. 4. Re Themelis, 117 Vt 19, 83 A2d 507.

Anno: 52 ALR2d 1276–1279.

A reprimand has been viewed as a sufficient discipline of an attorney who had represented an interest adverse to that of a former client where it appeared that the attorney, after representing his client and appearing for him in litigation, thereafter accepted employment from the client's former adversary and appeared for and represented such adversary in the trial of an action instituted against the former client upon the same controversies as were involved in the former litigation. Anno: 52 ALR2d 1279.

p. 423, n. 9. The mere bringing of an ordinary action without consent and even against the directions of a client is not in all cases ground for disciplinary action against an attorney. However, where the nature of the action of the parties defendant is such as to result in widespread publicity and to subject the client to substantial embarrassment, and the action goes far beyond the scope of the client's claim, the attorney then has not only violated his duty to his client but has tended to bring the entire profession into disrepute. Re Edge (Ky) 282 SW2d 830.

§ 269. Conversion or Misappropriation of Client's Property.

Am Jur cited in Re Conner, 357 Mo 270, 207 SW2d 492; State Bar Committee v Stumbaugh (Mo) 123 SW2d 51 (n 14)

Re O'Doherty, 14 App Div 2d 4, 217 NYS2d 961, app & rearg den 14 App Div 2d 848, 218 NYS2d 528, app dismd in part 11 NY2d 767, 227 NYS2d 16, 181 NE2d 761.

§ 270. — When Done by One Member of Law Firm.

Am Jur cited in Re Rosenberg, 413 Ill 567 110 NE2d 186.

§ 271. — Matters in Defense or Mitigation.

Am Jur cited in State Bar Committee v Stumbaugh (Mo) 123 SW(2d) 51 (notes 4–5)

Re O'Doherty, 14 App Div 2d 4, 217 NYS2d 961, app & rearg den 14 App Div 2d 848, 218 NYS2d 528, app dismd in part 11 NY2d 767, 227 NYS2d 16, 181 NE2d 761.

Page 424. Add, following note 8: It has recently been held that insanity at the time the attorney received funds from clients which he converted to his own use or which he received for services which he did not perform is not a defense in disbarment proceedings.[8.1] The disbarment is proper notwithstanding the attorney is sane at the time of the hearing, where he has failed to return or promise to return the money or to express regret for his acts.[8.2] The result in such decisions is based upon the necessity of protection of the public, which in disbarment proceedings is of more importance than the matter of punishment of the offender.[8.3]

[8.1] Re Patlak, 368 Ill. 547, 15 N. E. (2d) 309, 116 A.L.R. 627.
Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 632.

[8.2] Re Patlak, 368 Ill. 547, 15 N. E. (2d) 309, 116 A.L.R. 627.
Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 632.

[8.3] Re Patlak, 368 Ill. 547, 15 N. E. (2d) 309, 116 A.L.R. 627.
Annotation: 116 A.L.R. 632.

§ 272. Contracts Contrary to Public Policy.

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Asso. v Dunker, 160 Neb 779, 71 NW2d 502.

§ 273. Unethical Conduct.

Am Jur cited in Louisville Bar Asso. v. Mazin, 282 Ky 743, 139 SW(2d) 771.
Re Durham, 190 Okla 588, 126 P(2d) 69.

p. 425, n. 10. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

p. 425, notes 12–14. Anno: 94 L ed 141 (Federal courts).

Page 425. Add, following note 17: And a former attorney of record for judgment debtors, who made an agreement for a settlement with the judgment creditors in the absence and without the consent of the latters' counsel, may be suspended.[17.5]

[17.5] Turner v. State Bar, 36 Cal2d 155, 222 P2d 857.

p. 425, n. 18. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

p. 425, n. 19. It has been held that an attorney does not violate the ethics of his profession by acting as local counsel for an attorney of another state whose reputation, although under suspicion, is not definitely shown by the evidence to be objectionable. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

Page 425. Add, following note 19: And it has been held that it is not sufficient to justify the disbarment of a lawyer that the evidence shows a state of facts discreditable to him, so long as it does not show dishonorable or criminal conduct; that to justify disciplinary action against or disbarment of a lawyer, the case must be clear and free from doubt as to the motive as well as to the act charged.[19.5]

[19.5] Re Brown, 389 Ill 516, 59 NE2d 855, 157 ALR 607.

§ 274. — Solicitation of Business.

Am Jur cited in Louisville Bar Asso. v. Mazin, 282 Ky 743, 139 SW(2d) 771.
Re Randolph (Mo) 347 SW2d 91, cert den 368 US 916, 7 L ed 2d 132, 82 S Ct 196.
Re McCullough, 97 Utah 533, 95 P(2d) 13.

p. 425, n. 1. Re Thibodeau, 295 Mass 374, 3 N E. (2d) 749, 106 A.L.R. 542.
Anno: 94 L ed 132 (Federal courts); 67 ALR 2d 878 (personally), 882–917 (through others).
For a discussion of a number of cases involving the suspension or disbarment, or attempted disbarment of an attorney in the Federal courts for voluntarily defending one accused of a crime, see annotation in 94 L ed 133.

It is not beyond the realm of permissible state concerns to conclude that too much attention to the business of getting clients may be incompatible with a lawyer's sufficient devotion to duties owed to the court, or that the payment of awards to persons bringing in legal business is inconsistent with the personally disinterested position a lawyer should maintain. Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

p. 425, n. 2. Anno: 67 ALR2d 859.

p. 426, n. 3. Hightower v. Detroit Edison Co 262 Mich 1 247 N W 97, 86 A.L.R. 509
Anno: 67 ALR2d 871, 872.

p. 426, n. 4. Anno: 67 ALR2d 866.

Page 426. Add following note 4: Persons engaged in the practice of "ambulance chasing" or similar solicitation of personal injury litigation use many methods and techniques.[4.5] They have various ways of learning about the happening of an accident which results in personal injury or death,[4.51] and usually try to contact the injured party or his relatives as soon as possible in order to solicit possible litigation for an attorney.[4.52] Various devices are used by the solicitor to convince the prospective client that a particular attorney could best handle his case, including such things as newspaper clippings about successful action handled by the attorney, or canceled checks or photostatic copies of checks representing the recoveries in cases recently handled.[4.53] And once the injured party or his relative has been persuaded to hire the attorney, the solicitor usually produces for signature a blank contract of retainer.[4.54] In a few cases it has appeared that an attorney entered into an arrangement with a person known as a "flopper" whose function it is to simulate injuries in order to make a claim.[4.55]

While a finding that an attorney was guilty of "ambulance chasing" or the like necessitates some disciplinary action against an attorney, there are frequently circumstances which justify the court in mitigating the punishment. These circumstances are various and include such considerations as the youth and inexperience of the attorney, the amount of solicitation in the area, the lack of other misconduct on the part of the attorney, and the like.[4.56] Another factor affecting the extent of discipline on the side of reducing the punishment, is the fact that the proceedings against the attorney were instigated, investigated, and financed, by combinations of companies or business interests against whom the particular attorney had many claims, and who were thus antagonistic to him. The courts have carefully examined testimony coming from such sources and have held that its credibility was insufficient to support disciplinary action in some instances.[4.57]

But there are other factors which go to increase the punishment.[4.58] Thus, the fact that the attorney was guilty of misconduct in addition to "ambulance chasing" has been held to warrant increased punishment.[4.59] The same tendency obtains where the attorney either failed to keep, or has destroyed, his financial records, so that it is impossible to determine what his conduct actually was,[4.6] as well as where he wilfully continued to solicit after being warned to cease such activity,[4.61] and where he sought by various means to thwart or impede the investigation into his conduct.[4.62]

4.5 Anno: 67 ALR2d 863, 917.
4.51 Anno: 67 ALR2d 917.
4.52 Anno: 67 ALR2d 919.
4.53 Anno: 67 ALR2d 919.
4.54 Anno: 67 ALR2d 920.
4.55 Anno: 67 ALR2d 921.
4.56 Anno: 67 ALR2d 872.

It has been held that the motive of the solicitation should be considered in determining its propriety. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

4.57 Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.
Anno: 67 ALR2d 930.
4.58 Anno: 67 ALR2d 921.
4.59 Anno: 67 ALR2d 921.
4.6 Anno: 67 ALR2d 924.
See Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954, infra, § 296 (Supp).
4.61 Anno: 67 ALR2d 926.
4.62 Anno: 67 ALR2d 927.
p. 426, n. 5. Anno: 67 ALR2d 875.

An attorney who conducts an automobile association which in addition to other services to its subscribers pays the fees of lawyers employed by them to defend them in suits for property damage or against charges of violating automobile laws and regulations, but who does not receive, directly or indirectly, any financial benefit from the employment of such attorneys is not guilty of unprofessional conduct in advertising and employing salesmen to procure subscribers to the association. Re Thibodeau, 295 Mass 374, 3 NE2d 749, 106 A.L.R. 542. Annotation 106 A.L.R. 548.

Page 426. Add paragraph at end of section: In some instances the courts have enjoined lawyers from prosecuting actions brought to them by runners or "chasers" employed by them[5.1] and such a restraining order is not invalid as constituting a disbarment judgment which only the supreme court of the state can enter where the retainer as attorney was procured by "chasers" as a part of a champertous conspiracy.[5.2]

The reason that injunction has been resorted to so rarely against lawyers is not that the court lacks power to enjoin them, but because it has more expeditious and summary methods of control over the bar.[5.3]

5.1 Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Andrews, 338 Ill App 552, 88 NE2d 364, 14 ALR2d 728 (finding the evidence sufficient to show that a family partnership created by an attorney was his agent for the solicitation of business, so as to make him responsible for its acts, where, although he was not a member of the partnership, his brother and wife were, the partnership occupied his offices, the "chasers" employed by it were generally regarded as his representatives, and its only funds, except for an original deposit by the wife, came from him).
Anno: 14 ALR2d 740.
5.2 Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Andrews, 338 Ill App 552, 88 NE2d 364, 14 ALR2d 728.

The novelty of the relief sought is no defense to a suit for an injunction against the prosecution of actions by an attorney who procured his retainer by solicitation through "chasers" as part of an extensive conspiracy to induce injured railroad employees, no matter where located, to employ him as their attorney. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Andrews, 338 Ill App 552, 88 NE2d 364, 14 ALR2d 728.
5.3 Anno: 14 ALR2d 741.

§ 275. — Advertising.

p. 426, n. 6. Re Thibodeau, 295 Mass 374, 3 N. E. (2d) 749, 106 A.L.R. 542.
Anno: 39 ALR2d 1057 et seq.

Two attorneys owning and controlling a mortgage corporation have been held not immune from discipline for unethical conduct in connection with its operations because of the advice of counsel, or because other lawyers are guilty of the same offense, or because other financial institutions and attorneys bear a similar relationship. Re Rothman, 12 NJ 528, 97 A2d 621, 39 ALR2d 1032.

Such matters as cessation of improper advertising methods, age, expressions of willingness to conform to accepted standards, good reputation, ignorance of the impropriety of the advertisement, and the lack of precedents in some instances, while not, strictly speaking, defenses, have been held in some cases to be mitigating circumstances justifying a lightening of the punishment to mere temporary suspension or severe reprimand. Anno: 39 ALR2d 1059.
p. 426, n. 7. Anno: 39 ALR2d 1062 et seq.
p. 426, n. 8. Anno: 39 ALR2d 1058.

Page 426. Add, at end of section: While it is not necessarily improper for an attorney to engage in a business other than the practice of law, the lawyer must conduct such separate business with due observance of the standards of conduct required of him as a member of the bar, and the violation of such standards by means of improper advertising will constitute ground for disciplinary action.[8.5] The practice of offering free advice or information in an advertisement is improper because it encourages resort to litigation and constitutes grounds for disbarment, suspension, or severe reprimand.[8.51] The practice of furnishing or inspiring publication of newspaper comments, photographs, or articles of a laudatory nature, has been held to constitute grounds for disciplinary action against the offending attorney.[8.52] The practice of publishing and circulating summaries of the law on particular subjects has been held to constitute improper advertising warranting disciplinary action by the court, in that they are often inaccurate or misleading, their purpose being to arouse thought and encourage litigation.[8.53] The use of cards and letterheads containing more than a simple statement of the attorney's name, address, and specialty, if he has one which is not prohibited by law, constitutes unethical conduct warranting disciplinary action.[8.54] An attorney's acceptance of the benefit of the advertising of his services by another constitutes a violation of professional ethics punishable by disbarment, suspension, or censure.[8.55]

8.5 Re Rothman, 12 NJ 528, 97 A2d 621, 39 ALR2d 1032 (advertising complete and speedy mortgage service made possible by combination of law and mortgage businesses; severe reprimand).
Anno: 39 ALR2d 1065.
8.51 Anno: 39 ALR2d 1066.
8.52 Re Rothman, 12 NJ 528, 97 A2d 621, 39 ALR2d 1032.
Re Donovan, 43 SD 98, 178 NW 143, 9 ALR 1497.
Anno: 39 ALR2d 1067.
8.53 Re Schnitzer, 33 Nev 581, 112 P 848, 33 LRA NS 941.
Re Donovan, 43 SD 98, 178 NW 143, 9 ALR 1497.
Anno: 39 ALR2d 1068.
8.54 Anno: 39 ALR2d 1069.
8.55 Anno: 39 ALR2d 1071.

§ 276. Misconduct outside Scope of Professional Relation.

Am Jur quoted in Ex parte Montgomery, 244 Ala 91, 12 So(2d) 314.

Am Jur cited in Ex parte Grace, 244 Ala 267, 13 So(2d) 178, appeal dismissed in 320 US 78, 88 L ed 415, 64 S Ct 78.
Thomas v. State, 87 Ga App 765, 75 SE2d 193
Re Lynch (Ky) 238 SW2d 118.
Re McLendon (Mo) 337 SW2d 56. Re Williams, 233 Mo App 1174, 128 SW2d 1098.

State v. Rogers, 226 Wis 39, 275 NW 910 (n. 12).

p. 427, n. 11.

Anno: 59 ALR2d 1401 (income tax conviction).

Misconduct involving moral turpitude on the part of an attorney, even though the derelictions were committed in his personal capacity by his failure to file federal income tax returns, and his professional conduct had always been above reproach, is nevertheless ground for suspension. Re Burrus, 364 Mo 22, 258 SW2d 625.

p. 427, n. 13.

Where an attorney, acting as a guardian, is guilty of gross negligence in the handling of his ward's funds, he may be suspended from the practice of law. Clark v. State Bar, 39 Cal 2d 161 246 P2d 1

p. 427, n. 16. Anno: 59 ALR2d 1398 (federal income tax conviction); 57 ALR2d 1366 et seq.

§ 277. — Personal Vices Not Affecting Integrity.

Am Jur quoted in Re Williams, 233 Mo App 1174, 128 SW(2d) 1098.

§ 278. — Misconduct in Official Capacity.

Am Jur quoted in Gordon v Clinkscales, 215 Ga 843, 114 SE2d 15.

Am Jur cited in Re Titus, 359 Mo 1070, 225 SW2d 715.

State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Asso. v Butterfield, 169 Neb 119, 98 NW2d 714.

p. 428, n. 6. Anno: 53 ALR2d 306, 308-312.

p. 428, n. 7. It should be noted, however, that in Re Watson, 71 Nev 227, 286 P2d 254, 53 ALR2d 301, the court, holding that it had no authority to discipline a member of the bar who was serving as district judge, for acts committed while he was so serving, since the latter's responsibility for official acts is to the public by whom he is elected rather than to the court, disapproved any implication to the contrary in Re Breen, 30 Nev 164, 93 P 997, 17 LRA NS 572.

Anno: 53 ALR2d 311.

p. 428, n. 8. Anno: 53 ALR2d 308-312.

p. 428, n. 10. Anno: 53 ALR2d 309.

p. 428, n. 15. Anno: 57 ALR2d 1371.

Page 428. Add at end of section: The view has been taken in some cases that misconduct of a lawyer-judge in his official capacity could not be the basis for disbarment or other disciplinary proceedings against an attorney,[15.5] theorizing that to allow such proceedings would be to give improper authorities the right to control, supervise, or remove judges.[15.51]

[15.5] Anno: 53 ALR2d 307.

It has been held that any disciplinary authority over members of its bar retained by the Supreme Court with respect to one in judicial office would be limited to action outside his official duties. Re Watson, 71 Nev 227, 286 P2d 254, 53 ALR2d 301.

It has been held that disciplinary proceedings against an attorney holding judicial office may not be converted into a review of the manner in which he is conducting his official duties. Re Watson, 71 Nev 227, 286 P2d 254, 53 ALR2d 301.

It has been held that a judge in executing and filing an affidavit of the absence of any matters before him remaining undecided for more than 90 days, as required by statute as a prerequisite to receiving his monthly salary, is performing an official act required of him as a judge, and a false statement therein cannot form the basis for disciplinary action against him as an attorney. Re Watson, 71 Nev 227, 286 P2d 254, 53 ALR2d 301.

[15.51] Anno: 53 ALR2d 307.

§ 279. Commission or Conviction of Crime.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1312.

Am Jur quoted in Gordon v Clinkscales, 215 Ga 843, 114 SE2d 15.

p. 429, n. 16. Re Rothrock, 16 Cal(2d) 449, 106 P(2d) 907, 131 ALR 226

Baker v Miller, 236 Ind 20, 138 NE2d 145, 59 ALR2d 1393.

Page 429. Add, following the word "profession," in the fourth line from the top:[16.5]

[16.5] Re Rothrock, 16 Cal2d 449, 106 P2d 907, 131 ALR 226; Re Hallinan, 43 Cal2d 243, 272 P2d 768.

Baker v Miller, 236 Ind 20, 138 NE2d 145, 59 ALR2d 1393.

p. 429, n. 18.

The commission of lesser offenses by an attorney in the heat of anger or as the result of physical or mental infirmities will not ordinarily be deemed to involve "moral turpitude" justifying disbarment. Re Rothrock, 16 Cal (2d) 449, 106 P(2d) 907, 131 ALR 226.

Page 429. Add, following note 18: Where it cannot be determined from the nature of an offense, from the record of conviction, or from the statute defining the offense, whether commission of the offense by an attorney would cast discredit upon his moral fitness to practice law, an investigation into the circumstances under which the particular offense was committed will be permitted in disbarment proceedings.[18.5]

[18.5] Re Rothrock, 16 Cal(2d) 449, 106 P(2d) 907, 131 ALR 226.

p. 429, n. 1.

A court rule which, in prescribing standards of conduct for members of the bar, provides that a lawyer shall not by any misconduct commit any offenses against the laws of the state or the United States which amount to a crime involving acts done by him "contrary to justice, honesty, modesty, or good morals,' makes offenses involving moral turpitude a basis for disbarment. Neibling v. Terry, 352 Mo 396, 177 SW(2d) 502, 152 ALR 249.

Page 429. Add, following note 1: Under statutes directing the disbarment of an attorney upon conviction or making a conviction grounds for disbarment, it is usually held that conviction must be obtained in a court of record.[1.1] A conviction before a justice of the peace,[1.2] or for violation of a city ordinance, or one rendered in a prosecution in the name of a city has been held not to be within the contemplation of such statutes.[1.3] Nor do admissions, made by an attorney in an answer to a rule to show cause why he should not be attached for contempt for failing to pay into court money wrongfully withheld, satisfy the statutory requirements of a conviction.[1.4] Restraining by injunction from illegally trafficking in intoxicating liquors is not a conviction within the meaning of such statutes.[1.5] The term "conviction" is not restricted to one entered upon a particular plea; conviction upon a plea of nolo contendere renders the attorney subject to disbarment under the statute.[1.6]

[1.1] Annotation: 113 A.L.R. 1180.

A conviction may not be an absolute requirement. An attorney who has been indicted for a felony and who breaks jail and escapes has been held to be subject to disbarment under a statute empowering disbarment upon conviction. Anno: 113 ALR 1180.

[1.2–1.6] Anno: 113 ALR 1179, 1180.

p. 429, n. 2.

The question whether an offense involves "moral turpitude," within the meaning of a statute making such an offense ground for disbarment, is to be determined by a consideration of the nature of the offense as it bears upon the attorney's moral fitness to continue in the practice of the law. Re Rothrock, 16 Cal(2d) 449, 106 P2d 907, 131 ALR 226.

Page 429. Add following note 2: A conviction of an attorney in a federal court for evasion of his own personal income taxes has been viewed most often as one not necessarily involving moral turpitude. For this reason courts have required some further or independent showing, beyond the bare fact of conviction for income tax evasion, that the particular conduct in question was infected with moral turpitude before they would impose discipline appropriate to misconduct of that degree, or they have recognized that the respondent might show himself to have been free of moral turpitude despite his conviction.[2.3] Where the wilfulness of the attorney was apparent in his evasion of income taxes, and there were no substantial mitigating circumstances, the crime has been considered to be one of moral turpitude warranting temporary suspension from the practice of law.[2.31] Where an attorney s general professional reputation and behavior have been good, and he has shown a repentant and co-operative attitude, courts have considered that no moral turpitude accompanied the commission of the offense. This has resulted in the dismissal of disbarment proceedings.[2.32] It has been considered that no moral turpitude existed where no proof of it was offered beyond the fact of conviction for income tax evasion. Only relatively mild professional punishment was found appropriate in such instances.[2.33] Courts have not always concerned themselves with making a characterization as to moral turpitude with regard to the conduct of an attorney convicted of evasion of federal income taxes. They have sometimes approached the problem as being one of whether there had been conduct below the level of behavior required of attorneys, and, if so, to what extent, for the purpose of determining the gravity of the punishment.[2.34] But, conceding that conviction for income tax evasion imported conduct warranting professional punishment of an attorney, courts have emphasized various exculpatory aspects of the attorney's behavior serving to lessen the severity of the punishment that might otherwise have been appropriate.[2.35]

It has been held that the commission of an assault, or conviction thereof, even of assault with intent to commit murder, does not justify disbarment, if the assault was not committed under such circumstances as would indicate the attorney to be unfit for the trust and confidence reposed in him as an attorney.[2.5] On the other hand, the circumstances surrounding the act of violence on the part of the attorney may be such as to indicate clearly his lack of respect for, and his disregard of, law and order, thereby justifying reprimand or disbarment.[2.6]

[2.3] Re Hallinan, 43 Cal2d 243, 272 P2d 768, holding that moral turpitude must be inherent in the commission of the crime itself to warrant summary disbarment under the statute.

The taint of moral turpitude is not implied as a necessary ingredient of a conviction of wilfully attempting to evade and defeat income taxes. People v Fischer, 132 Colo 131, 287 P2d 973.

Anno: 59 ALR2d 1401.

It has been held that, although the wilful evasion of federal income taxes is made a felony by § 145(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, it is not an offense involving fraud or moral turpitude, and conviction therefor does not necessarily call for complete disbarment, as distinguished from suspension, of an attorney. Baker v Miller, 236 Ind 20, 138 NE2d 145, 59 ALR2d 1393.

[2.31] Anno: 59 ALR2d 1401.

[2.32] Anno: 59 ALR2d 1404.

[2.33] Anno: 59 ALR2d 1404, 1405.

Suspension from practice for nine months has been held to be a proper disciplinary measure where an attorney is convicted of a wilful evasion of federal income taxes. Baker v Miller, 236 Ind 20, 138 NE2d 145, 59 ALR2d 1393.

[2.34] Anno: 59 ALR2d 1405.

[2.35] Anno: 59 ALR2d 1406.

[2.5] Re Rothrock, 16 Cal(2d) 449. 106 P(2d) 907, 131 ALR 226.

Anno: 131 ALR 232.

The crime of assault with a deadly weapon does not involve "moral turpitude," so as to require the disbarment as a matter of course of an attorney convicted of such crime, where the statute provides that conviction of a crime "involving moral turpitude" shall constitute cause for disbarment. Re Rothrock, 16 Cal(2d) 449, 106 P(2d) 907, 131 ALR 226, in which a record of conviction of assault with a deadly weapon was considered, and held not to involve "moral turpitude" justifying disbarment, especially in view of light sentence imposed.

[2.6] Anno: 131 ALR 233.

p. 429, n. 6. Vilter Mfg. Co. v. Industrial Commission (Vilter Mfg. Co. v. Jahncke) 192 Wis 362, 212 NW 641, 57 ALR 627.

Page 429. Add, following note 6: use of the mails to defraud,[6.5]

[6.5] Neibling v. Terry, 352 Mo 396, 177 SW 2d 502, 152 ALR 249.

Page 429. Add new paragraph at end of section: It appears to be a generally accepted view that an attorney's refusal, in good faith, to waive immunity from criminal prosecution is no ground for disbarment or other disciplinary action against him.[11.5] Thus, it has been held that where an attorney refuses, in good faith, to sign a waiver of immunity from criminal prosecution, when called upon to testify in an inquiry into certain alleged unlawful and unethical practices of law impairing the administration of justice, but expresses in open court his willingness to answer all questions at the direction of the court, and to furnish his office records and "everything that the court desires," the attorney's failure to sign such a waiver of immunity and to relinquish in advance his constitutional privilege against self-incrimination does not warrant disciplinary or disbarment proceedings.[11.6] And under a statute providing: "A competent witness shall not be excused from answering a relevant question on the ground only that the answer may tend to establish the fact that he owes a debt or is otherwise subject to a civil suit. But this provision does not require a witness to give an answer which will tend to accuse himself of a crime or misdemeanor or to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture,"[11.7] that a defendant, an attorney, upon being sworn as a witness in a trial for conspiracy against another attorney for whom the defendant worked as a clerk, had the right to refrain from answering any questions which might form the basis of, or lead to, a prosecution of him for the forfeiture of his office of attorney; and that the availing himself of such privilege, and the refusal to waive immunity did not amount to a confession of guilt upon which a forfeiture could be adjudged.[11.8] On the other hand, where an attorney refuses to testify, upon the ground that his testimony will tend to incriminate him, and this is done in bad faith, such refusal may constitute ground for disciplinary action.[11.9]

11.5 Anno: 127 ALR 1280.

11.6 Re Grae, 282 NY 428, 26 NE(2d) 963, 127 ALR 1276.

Anno: 127 ALR 1280.

11.7 New York Code of Civil Procedure, § 837.

11.8 Anno: 127 ALR 1281.

Cardozo, J., speaking with reference to this situation said that there was no occasion to determine whether the attorney's refusal to testify was proper because it tended to expose him to a forfeiture of office; that the attorney had placed his refusal on the ground of a tendency to incriminate him, and that of itself was sufficient to sustain him. Anno: 127 ALR 1282.

11.9 Anno: 127 ALR 1282.

§ 281. — Necessity of Prior Conviction or Prosecution.

p. 430, n. 1.

It may be noted that in Re Patlak, 368 Ill 547, 15 NE(2d) 309, 116 ALR 627, it was said that the rule is that a judgment of conviction or acquittal upon the merits, upon a trial on an indictment, will ordinarily be treated by this court as conclusive of the guilt or innocence of an attorney at law upon a subsequent trial upon information for disbarment for the same offense.

Page 431. Add, following note 4: It has been held that one is convicted of crime within the meaning of a statute making a conviction ground for disbarment, notwithstanding the judgment of conviction was entered upon a plea of nolo contendere.[4.5]

4.5 Neibling v. Terry, 352 Mo 396, 177 SW2d 502, 152 ALR 249.

§ 282. — Effect of Pending Prosecution.

Am Jur cited in Parker v. State Highway Dept. 224 SC 263, 78 SE2d 382.

p. 431, n. 11. Annotation: 113 A.L.R. 1183.

p. 431, n. 12. Annotation: 113 A.L.R. 1183.

Page 431. Add, following note 12: There is authority, however, to the effect that statutes making a record of conviction conclusive evidence in disbarment proceedings contemplate a judgment that has become final, so that pendency of appeal precludes disbarment.[12.1]

12.1 Annotation: 113 A.L.R. 1181.

Page 431. Add new paragraph at end of section: It has been held that a State Bar may carry on its own independent investigation of the fitness of any one of its members to practice law, without regard to criminal prosecutions which may be pending.[12.5]

12.5 Re Phillips, 17 Cal(2d) 55, 109 P(2d) 344, 132 ALR 644.

§ 283. — Effect of Failure to Indict, Nol. Pros., or Acquittal.

Am Jur cited in Re Pennica, 36 NJ 401, 177 A2d 721.

p. 432, n. 14.

It is the general rule that the entry of a nolle prosequi, dismissal, discontinuance, or abandonment of criminal proceedings against an attorney at law does not preclude the institution of disbarment proceedings based upon the same conduct involved in the criminal proceedings. Anno: 123 ALR 783.

p. 432, n. 15.

It is a general rule that the acquittal of an attorney in a prosecution for criminal acts constitutes no bar to the institution of or an adjudication in disbarment proceedings based upon the same acts or the conduct involved therein. Anno: 123 ALR 780.

But see Re Patlak, 368 Ill 547, 15 NE(2d) 309, 116 ALR 627, supra, § 281 (Supp.), in which, it may also be noted, it was held that the reversal of a conviction of an attorney on a charge of larceny of money of clients is not res judicata of a disbarment proceeding based upon similar charges but based upon different transactions occurring at other times.

§ 283.1. (New text) — Effect of Suspension of Sentence.

Although statutory provisions, where applicable, are controlling, the cases in general support the view that the fact that the execution of the sentence of an attorney who has been convicted of a crime has been suspended has no effect upon the question whether the attorney should be suspended or disbarred from the practice of law because of his conviction of a crime.[16.50] Some of the courts in taking this view have distinguished the suspension of the execution of a sentence from the suspension of the imposition of a sentence,[16.51] and from the granting of a pardon to the convicted attorney.[16.52]

16.50 Re Phillips, 17 Cal(2d) 55, 109 P(2d) 344, 132 ALR 644.

Anno: 132 ALR 659.

The California cases have involved the interpretation of a statute authorizing the disbarment of an attorney when a judgment of conviction against him for a crime involving moral turpitude becomes "final." Re Phillips, 17 Cal (2d) 55, 109 P(2d) 344, 132 ALR 644, a judgment of conviction against an attorney was held to be "final" within the meaning of this statute, although the execution of the attorney's sentence had been suspended, and although following compliance with the terms of the order of probation, pursuant to statutory authority, the verdict of guilty had been set aside and the accusation against him dismissed.

16.51 Re Phillips, 17 Cal(2d) 55, 109 P(2d) 344, 132 ALR 644.

Anno: 132 ALR 662.

16.52 Anno: 132 ALR 660.

§ 284. — Effect of Pardon.

Am Jur cited in State v Rogers, 226 Wis 39, 275 NW 910.

p. 432, n. 17. Anno: 143 ALR 172.

This difference in opinion is due not so much to different views as to the nature and effect of a pardon as it is to different views as to the nature of the right to practice law and as to the purpose of and ground for disbarment. Anno: 143 ALR 173.

Page 432. Add following "are based" in the fifth line of the section: The great majority of the cases hold that the granting of a pardon by the executive to an attorney who has committed, or been convicted of, a crime does not prevent the court having jurisdiction from disbarring him because of such conviction or because of the acts upon which the conviction was based.[17.5] In a few cases, however a pardon has been regarded as a sufficient defense against disbarment.[17.6]

17.5 Anno: 143 ALR 173.

The cases which take the position that disbarment on account of the commission of crime is neither prevented nor nullified by a pardon regard the right to practice as an attorney, not as a mere civil right, but rather as an acquired right or privilege extended only to those who have shown themselves mentally and morally qualified to receive and exercise it, and consider disbarment, not as a part of the punishment for the crime committed, but merely as a means of preserving the high character of the bar, by revoking the membership of one who has demonstrated his moral unfitness to possess it; and therefore they reach the conclusion that since a pardon, although effective to prevent further punishment and to restore civil rights to the one pardoned, cannot change the fact that he committed the crime or erase the consequent stain from his character, it cannot restore his moral qualifications for continuance in or restoration to membership in the bar. In some cases it has also been pointed out that attorneys are officers of the courts and that the courts must therefore be the judges of their qualifications to practice and cannot be controlled in this respect by a pardon from the executive. Anno: 143 ALR 173.

17.6 Anno: 143 ALR 177.

The cases which have held that a pardon was effective to prevent or nullify disbarment have regarded disbarment as a part of the punishment for the crime or as a direct consequence of the conviction rather than of the moral defect disclosed by the criminal act. Anno: 143 ALR 173.

Page 432. Add, following note 20: A mere suspension of sentence or a release on parole has been held not to prevent disbarment on the ground of conviction of a felony.[20.5]

20.5 Anno: 143 ALR 179.

p. 432, n. 3. Anno: 113 ALR 1183.

p. 433, n. 4. Anno: 113 ALR 1184; 70 ALR2d 331.

Page 433. Add, following note 5: By the great weight of authority, a pardon for a crime for which an attorney has been disbarred neither nullifies the disbarment nor compels the court to nullify it.[5.51] On the other hand, in a few cases a pardon has been held to reinstate, or to require the court to reinstate, an attorney who had been disbarred because of the commission of the act to which the pardon related.[5.53] Although, as has been indicated, a pardon is not generally treated as nullifying disbarment imposed as a consequence of the commission or conviction of the crime pardoned, it may, by reason of a rule or statute or otherwise, authorize the courts to entertain an application for reinstatement and to allow or deny it, depending upon whether on the hearing it appears that the applicant has re-established such a character as makes his reinstatement proper.[5.55]

5.51 Re Stephenson, 243 Ala 342, 10 So(2d) 1, 143 ALR 166 (in which it was held that a full pardon with restoration of civil and political rights granted to an attorney who had been disbarred upon conviction of forgery did not restore him to the office of an attorney).

Anno: 143 ALR 179

5.53 Ex parte Garland (US) 4 Wall 333, 18 L ed 366.

Anno: 143 ALR 182; 70 ALR2d 334.

5.55 Anno: 143 ALR 183; 70 ALR2d 333.

See Re Stephenson, 243 Ala 342, 10 So(2d) 1, 143 ALR 166.

§ 285. Acts or Convictions in Other Jurisdictions.

Am. Jur. cited in Geibel v. State Bar, 11 Cal. (2d) 412, 79 P. (2d) 1073 (n. 7).

Re Porep, 60 Nev 393, 111 P(2d) 533.

R. C. L. quoted in Depew v. Wichita Asso. C. M. 142 Kan. 403, 49 P. (2d) 1041.

R. C. L. cited in Richmond Asso. of Credit Men v Bar Asso 167 Va 327 189 S E 153

p. 433, n. 9. See Baker v Miller, 236 Ind 20, 138 NE2d 145, 59 ALR2d 1393.

Anno: 59 ALR2d 1407 (income tax conviction).

Page 433. Add, following note 9: In the construction of statutes or court rules providing for the disbarment of an attorney at law upon his conviction of crime, the position has been taken in many cases that the determination of whether a conviction in a Federal court or the courts of another state was for an offense of the grade or character necessary to disqualify must be made under the laws of the disqualifving state.[9.5] On the other hand, it has frequently been held or recognized that, in determining whether a conviction in a foreign jurisdiction was for an offense of the grade or character necessary to disbar an attorney under an applicable statute or court rule providing for such disbarment upon conviction of crime, the governing law is that of the convicting jurisdiction.[9.51]

9.5 See Re Kirby, 10 SD 322, 414, 73 NW 92, 907, 39 LRA 856.

Anno: 175 ALR 798.

9.51 Re Hallinan, 43 Cal2d 243, 272 P2d 768, holding that in determining whether an intent to defraud the United States is an essential element of the crime of filing a false and fraudulent income tax return as proscribed by the Internal Revenue Code, and thus whether moral turpitude is involved in the commission of such offense, the interpretation given such statute by the United States courts must be accepted.

Re Kerl, 32 Idaho 737, 188 P 40, 8 ALR 1259; Re Minner, 133 Kan 789, 3 P2d 473, 79 ALR 35; see Margolis's Case, 269 Pa 206, 112 A 478, 12 ALR 1186.

Anno: 175 ALR 801.

The taint of moral turpitude is not implied as a necessary ingredient of a conviction of wilfully attempting to evade and defeat income taxes. People v Fischer, 132 Colo 131, 287 P2d 973.

§ 285.1. (New text) Misconduct of Law Partner.

While it is true that a law firm is responsible to a client for the negligent or fraudulent acts of its individual members when acting within the scope of their authority, and each member of the firm, irrespective of his personal participation in the transaction, as well as the law firm itself, is liable to a client for money collected in the course of the firm's business and misappropriated by a member of the firm,[1] it has been held or recognized in a number of cases that one member of a law firm is not subject to disbarment or discipline because of the misconduct of his partner which occurred without his knowledge, consent, or participation.[2] In other cases wherein a member of a law firm has sought to avoid discipline upon the ground that the acts complained of were committed by his partner, the courts, under the facts involved, have held that the respondent was involved in the misconduct of the partner to such an extent as to justify disbarment or discipline.[3]

It has been held that the question whether a lawyer may be subjected to disciplinary action because of his partner's misconduct cannot be determined by application of the principle that a partner is liable for the wrongful acts of a copartner committed in the course of the copartnership business, for the reason that disciplinary action involves the motive with which an act was committed.[4]

[1] See supra, § 134.

[2] Anno: 157 ALR 613.

A contrary view has been taken in at least one case. Anno: 157 ALR 615.

[3] Re Brown, 389 Ill 516, 59 NE2d 855, 157 ALR 607 (holding that a lawyer who knew that his partner was rendering bills in the firm name against a public utility company for legal services which were never rendered, and who turned over his share of such fees to his partner, with knowledge that the bills were a device to cover up expenditures in lobbying and bribing public officials in the interest of the utility company, may be subjected to disciplinary action by the court, although he was motivated by his desire to aid his partner in the collection of money advanced by the partner for the above purposes).

Anno: 157 ALR 616.

4 Re Brown, 389 Ill 516, 59 NE2d 855, 157 ALR 607.

§ 286. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1311–2:1318, 2:1320, 2:1321, 2:1324–2:1326, 2:1331–2:1333.

Am Jur cited in Re Conner, 357 Mo 270, 207 SW2d 492.

p. 433, n. 11. As to the propriety of the writ of prohibition to prevent the bar authorities from suspending an attorney from the practice of law, see PROHIBITION.

p. 433, n. 14. It has been held that a commissioner, in a disbarment proceeding against an attorney specializing in railroad negligence cases, who is a member of a law firm representing railroads belonging to the railroad association that financed and directed the investigations leading to the disbarment proceedings, should disqualify himself when requested to do so by the attorney's counsel. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

§ 287. Nature of Proceeding.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1318, 2:1320, 2:1321.

Am Jur cited in Re Stice, 184 Kan 589, 339 P2d 29.

Re Edge (Ky) 282 SW2d 830.

Nelson v Hammett (Mo) 189 SW2d 238.

R. C. L. cited in Re West, 212 N. C. 189, 193 S. E. 134.

p. 434, n. 17. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

It has been held that disciplinary proceedings of a state bar association are a function of the state supreme court, and although the board of governors of the association and its local committees technically are not judicial tribunals, their findings are considered to be those of an intermediate agency. Velkov v. Superior Court, 40 Cal2d 289, 253 P2d 25, 35 ALR2d 1348.

It has been held that the object of a disciplinary proceeding against an attorney is not in the nature of punishment for a crime, but rather the preservation of the purity of the courts and the protection of the public from unworthy attorneys. Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700, 54 ALR2d 1272.

It has been held that disciplinary proceedings against attorneys are instituted in the public interest and to preserve the purity of the courts; no private rights except those of the accused are involved. Application of Harper (Fla) 84 So2d 700, 54 ALR2d 1272.

It has been held that a disciplinary proceeding against an attorney is judicial in nature, although it is initiated by filing a complaint with an ethics and grievance committee. Toft v Ketchum, 18 NJ 280, 113 A2d 671, 52 ALR2d 1208, adhered to 18 NJ 611, 114 A2d 863, 52 ALR2d 1217, cert den 350 US 887, 100 L ed 782, 76 S Ct 141.

It has been held that the suspension or disbarment of an attorney is, like his admission, a judicial act based upon due inquiry into his fitness for the office. Toft v Ketchum, 18 NJ 280, 113 A2d 671, 52 ALR2d 1208, adhered to 18 NJ 611, 114 A2d 863, 52 ALR2d 1217, cert den 350 US 887, 110 L ed 782, 76 S Ct 141.

It has been said that whether denominated judicial or quasi-judicial, disciplinary proceedings against attorneys are carried on as one of the processes of the court. Ramstead v Morgan, 219 Or 383, 347 P2d 594, 77 ALR2d 481.

p. 434, n. 18. State v. Ventola, 122 Conn. 635, 191 A. 726, 110 A.L.R. 578; Re Mayberry, 295 Mass 155, 3 NE(2d) 248, 105 ALR 976.

Annotation: 102 A.L.R. 399.

A disbarment proceeding instituted by the grievance committee of the local bar association is a civil proceeding within the purview of a statute making it an offense to give or offer anything to a person who may be used as a witness "in any civil or criminal proceeding" with intent to influence his testimony. State v. Ventola, 122 Conn. 635, 191 A. 726, 110 A.L.R. 578.

p. 434, n. 19. State v. Ventola, 122 Conn. 635, 191 A. 726, 110 A.L.R. 578 (applying rule as to influencing witness in civil proceeding).

Annotation: 102 A.L.R. 399 (applying rules as to change of venue in civil proceedings).

A disbarment proceeding is one at law and not in equity. Re Mayberry, 295 Mass 155, 3 NE2d 248, 105 ALR 976.

p. 434, n. 1. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So 229, 107 ALR 671.

State v Ventola, 122 Conn 635, 191 A 726, 110 ALR 578 (see same case, supra, this section).

Re Santosuosso, 318 Mass 489, 62 NE2d 105, 161 ALR 892.

Toft v Ketchum, 18 NJ 280, 113 A2d 671, 52 ALR2d 1208, adhered to 18 NJ 611, 114 A2d 863, 52 ALR2d 1217, cert den 350 US 887, 100 L ed 782, 76 S Ct 141.

Page 434. Add, following note 1: Investigations and hearings by the bar committee of a state bar are summary in character and are not adversary in any proper sense.[1.1]

[1.1] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 171.

§ 288. Time within Which Proceedings Must Be Instituted.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1318, 2:1320, 2:1321.

Am Jur quoted in State v. Haggerty, 241 Wis 486, 6 NW(2d) 203.

Am Jur cited in Ex parte Dozier, 262 Ala 197, 77 So2d 903.

§ 289. Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1318–2:1321, 2:1323–2:1327.

Am Jur quoted in Thompson v. State, 72 Ga App 852, 35 SE2d 306; Jacobs v. State 200 Ga 440, 37 SE2d 187, conformed to in 73 Ga App 550, 37 SE2d 438.

Re Metzenbaum, 22 Wash2d 75, 154 P2d 602.

Am Jur cited in Re Rivard, 300 Ky 208, 188 SW2d 325.

Re Rerat, 224 Minn 124, 28 NW2d 168.

p. 435, n. 11. Anno: 98 L ed 855–860.

A court may exercise jurisdiction to inquire into the conduct of members of the bar without compliance with the requirements of formal procedure which must be observed in ordinary litigation; and it is enough if in some proper way, the attorney is reasonably and definitely informed of the matter alleged against him and given an opportunity of being heard in answer. Re Mayberry, 295 Mass 155, 3 NE(2d) 248, 105 ALR 976.

An attorney whose alleged misconduct is under investigation by the court is entitled to a fair trial in the light of the character of the proceeding, and to that end an opportunity to know all that he must meet and the right to present such evidence as he may be able to produce to rebut the representations of alleged misconduct. Re Santosuosso, 318 Mass 489, 62 NE2d 105, 161 ALR 892.

§ 290. In Whose Name and by Whom Proceeding Instituted.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1311–2:1314, 2:1321.

Am Jur cited in Wilbur v. Howard (DC Ky) 70 F Supp 930

Re Lacy, 234 Mo App 71, 112 SW2d 594.

p. 436, n. 4. Re Phillips, 17 Cal(2d) 55, 109 P(2d) 344, 132 ALR 644

Anno: 105 ALR 1376; 67 ALR2d 867.

Page 436. Add, following note 5: Statutes authorizing the institution of disbarment proceedings by the board of governors of an integrated state bar are valid,[5.1] as well as a statute empowering a board of law examiners to initiate complaints.[5.2]

[5.1] See supra, § 2.1 (Supp.).

[5.2] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 172.

p. 437, n. 6. Anno: 67 ALR2d 867.

§ 291. Charges.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1311-2:1314, 2:1321.

Am Jur cited in State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Asso. v Fisher, 170 Neb 483, 103 NW2d 325.

Burns v Clayton, 237 SC 316, 117 SE2d 300.

p. 437, n. 14.

In Florida the verification of a complaint against, or a state's attorney's motion to disbar, an attorney is not required. Richardson v. State, 141 Fla 218, 192 So 876, overruling State ex rel. Wolfe v. Kirke, 12 Fla 278, 95 Am Dec 314.

p. 437, n. 15. See supra, n. 14.

p. 437, n. 17. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671, 675.

p. 437, n. 18. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

A complaint in a proceeding before the board of commissioners of the state bar sufficiently alleges a violation of a rule of the board to the effect that no attorney shall misappropriate the funds of his client by failing to pay over money collected by him for his client, provided the circumstances attending the transaction are such as to satisfy the commission that the attorney acted in bad faith or with fraudulent purpose where it avers the violation of that rule, which is referred to by number and section, in that a summary judgment was rendered against him in a specified action for money collected by him as attorney for the plaintiff therein, upon which an execution was issued and returned "No property." Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

Common-law rules of pleading, or rules observed in criminal cases, are not controlling in disbarment proceedings. Re Patlak, 368 Ill. 547, 15 N. E. (2d) 309, 116 A.L.R. 627.

p. 438, n. 20. Anno: 67 ALR2d 868.

p. 438, n. 1.

It has been held that an order of a United States District Court, made in proceedings for review of a referee's appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy, prohibiting an attorney who was a creditor of the bankrupt from practicing in that court until an apology was made to and accepted by the referee for charges made by the attorney in soliciting and securing powers of attorney from other creditors is unwarranted, where no formal charge had been placed against the attorney, who was not given a hearing or opportunity to defend himself or to inspect the referee's return upon which the order was based, particularly in view of the record giving considerable support to the charges made. Re Portage Wholesale Co. (CA 7th Wis) 183 F2d 959, 20 ALR2d 189.

§ 292. Demurrer or Answer and Subsequent Pleadings.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1321, 2:1322.

§ 293. Evidence—Presumptions.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1330.

Am Jur cited in Re Santosuosso, 318 Mass 489, 62 NE2d 105 161 ALR 892

Re Shufer, 12 App Div 2d 208, 209 NYS2d 545, motion den 9 NY2d 823, 215 NYS2d 769, 175 NE2d 346.

Committee on Legal Ethics v Pietranton, — W Va —, 99 SE2d 15.

Page 438. Add following note 6:

In a proceeding for the suspension or disbarment of an attorney, the burden is upon the complainant to establish misconduct on the part of the defendant proving him unfit to be entrusted with the duties and responsibilities belonging to the office of an attorney.[6.5]

[6.5] Re Gorsuch, 76 SD 191, 75 NW2d 644, 57 ALR2d 1355.

p. 438, n. 7. It has been held that the employment of an investigator by an attorney is not unethical, and it cannot be inferred from such employment that he is engaged in "ambulance chasing." Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

Page 438. Add new paragraph at end of section: Under the Rules of the Supreme Court of the United States, an attorney who has been disbarred from practice in a state has the burden of showing good cause why he should not be disbarred from practice in the Federal Supreme Court.[9.5] [9.5] Re Isserman, 345 US 286, 97 L ed 1013, 73 S Ct 676.

§ 294. — Admissibility of Evidence.

Am Jur cited in Thomas v State, 91 Ga App 804, 87 SE2d 239.

Re Santosuosso, 318 Mass 489, 62 NE2d 105, 161 ALR 892.

Re Shufer, 12 App Div 2d 208, 209 NYS2d 545, motion den 9 NY2d 823, 215 NYS2d 769, 175 NE2d 346.

p. 438, n. 11. Anno: 161 ALR 898.

But see, infra, n. 12.5 et seq. (Supp.).

In Re Santosuosso, 318 Mass 489, 62 NE2d 105, 161 ALR 892, it was said that the considerations of public welfare involved in an inquiry by the court into the alleged misconduct of a member of the bar cannot be defeated by the application to such inquiry of the strict rules of evidence governing the trial of adversary proceedings between parties.

Page 438. Add, following note 11: The admission of hearsay evidence is improper in disbarment proceedings before the board of governors of a state bar.[11.1]

[11.1] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 169.

Page 439. Add, following note 12: With respect to the general question of the admissibility of an entire record, as such, in a disbarment or disciplinary proceeding, there appears to be some conflict.[12.5] Thus, the view has been taken that where an attorney is sought to be disciplined because of acts disclosed in the record of a civil proceeding in which he was a party, such record is admissible in the disciplinary proceeding.[12.51] However, a contrary view has also been taken.[12.52] In some cases the "record" of a civil proceeding in which an attorney was a party or was interested has been held to be admissible for a particular reason or purpose.[12.53] As a general rule, in ordinary adversary proceedings, the mere fact that testimony has been given in the course of a former proceeding between the parties is no ground for its admission in evidence, for, if the witness is available, his testimony given at the former trial is mere hearsay. So, in order to prove such testimony which is pertinent or relevant to issues in a later trial, it must appear that the witness is for some reason unavailable at the second trial or hearing, that there is a substantial identity of parties and issues, and that the person against whom the evidence was offered had an opportunity to cross-examine the witness giving the former testimony.[12.54] Although recognizing the foregoing as a general rule of evidence, some courts have nevertheless concluded that the strict rules of evidence are inapplicable in a proceeding seeking the disbarment or discipline of an attorney, and have held as a general proposition that the evidence or testimony adduced at the trial of a civil or criminal proceeding in which an attorney was a party is admissible in a subsequent disciplinary proceeding against such attorney based upon his improper conduct as disclosed by such evidence, particularly where the attorney was afforded or exercised his right of cross-examination in the former trial.[12.55] Some courts have held that the testimony or evidence in a proceeding indicating the misconduct of an attorney is admissible, for a particular reason or purpose, in a subsequent disbarment or disciplinary proceeding against such attorney.[12.56] There appears to be a lack of agreement in the cases involving the question of the admissibility in a disciplinary proceeding of the findings of the court in a former action or proceeding which indicate or disclose improper conduct on the part of the attorney sought to be disciplined.[12.57] It may be observed that with respect to the effect upon a disbarment proceeding of a previous disbarment in another jurisdiction, the United States Supreme Court has regarded the findings of a state court in disbarment proceedings establishing the want of professional character as conclusive, unless, from an intrinsic consideration of the state records, it appears that the state procedure, from lack of notice or opportunity to be heard, was wanting in due process, that there was such an infirmity of proof as to facts as to give rise to a clear conviction that the conclusion of the state court cannot be accepted as final, or that some other grave reason exists leading to the conclusion that to follow the decision of the state court would conflict with the duty not to disbar unless necessary under the principles of right and justice.[12.58]

[12.5, 12.51] Anno: 161 ALR 899.

In New York it has been held that the "record" in the action against respondent which had been brought by his former law partner for the purpose of an accounting, and to set aside alleged fraudulent conveyances by respondent, was properly admitted in a disciplinary proceeding initiated upon the petition of a lawyers' association, as against the contention that the association was not a party to the former action, where the charges against respondent in such disciplinary action were based upon the conduct of respondent in the former action, in which he was a party and attorney of record, the court saying that such record was therefore competent proof as to his conduct therein. Anno: 161 ALR 899.

[12.52] People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Amos, 246 Ill 299, 92 NE 857, 138 Am St Rep 239 (in which it appeared that during the time respondent was handling a client's affairs, the latter executed a note and trust deed in favor of respondent's wife with respondent named as trustee, and that the client was subsequently adjudged insane and a conservator appointed, it was held that the transcript of the record of the action brought by the conservator against respondent and his wife to cancel the note and trust deed was inadmissible in the disbarment proceeding subsequently instituted against respondent charging him with unprofessional conduct with respect to the affairs of such client).

Anno: 161 ALR 899.

[12.53] Fairfield County Bar v. Taylor, 60 Conn 11, 22 A 441, 13 LRA 767 (in which it was held that the record in an action against an attorney to recover money allegedly obtained from plaintiff through fraud, including a copy of the complaint, pleadings, findings of fact, and judgment against the attorney, was admissible in a proceeding by members of the bar, based on the transaction out of which said action arose, to procure his disbarment for unprofessional conduct, where the existence of such record was averred by the complaint and denied in the answer, the court concluding that upon such an issue the members of the bar might offer the best possible evidence there could be of the truth of their allegations, even if the bar committee was to be regarded as a party, and the strict technical rules of evidence were applicable).

Anno: 161 ALR 901.

[12.54] See 20 Am Jur, EVIDENCE, p 578, § 686; p 582, § 689.

[12.55] Re Santosuosso, 318 Mass 489, 62 NE2d 105, 161 ALR 892 (holding that evidence contained in the record of a civil suit to which an attorney was a party defendant, at the hearing of which he was present and represented by counsel, testified, and had opportunity to present and examine witnesses and to cross-examine those called by the plaintiff, is admissible in an inquiry by the court into the attorney's alleged misconduct).

Anno: 161 ALR 901; 70 ALR2d 1188.

See Re Durant, 80 Conn 140, 67 A 497, 10 Ann Cas 539, in which it was held that where a deposition of a witness had been taken in an action by a wife for separate support, and disclosed improper conduct on the part of one who acted as counsel for the wife, and such witness subsequently died, the deposition was admissible in the disbarment proceeding thereafter brought against such attorney upon the basis of his action in the wife's case, where he was present at the deposition, anticipating that damaging testimony might be given against him, and exercised his right of cross-examination through another attorney, who was then representing the client. In answer to the contention that the issues and the parties were not the same in the two proceedings, the court said that the issues were substantially the same, that the topics which were the subjects of examination, in so far as the witness' testimony was concerned, were the same as those under examination in the disbarment proceeding, and that her evidence had the same bearing upon and important relation to the issues in the two cases.

[12.56] Anno: 161 ALR 903.

In Illinois it has been held that while the entire record of a civil action against an attorney is inadmissible in a disciplinary proceeding, the testimony given by an attorney in the trial of a public official for income tax evasion indicating that a portion of fees received from the attorney's client was given to such official as an election campaign contribution is admissible, as an admission against interest, in the disciplinary action against such attorney in which he is charged with bribing public officials and conducting himself in such a manner as would tend to defeat the administration of justice and bring the courts and the legal profession into disrepute. In one case, the court, in referring to its decision in People ex rel. Chicago Bar Asso. v. Amos, 246 Ill 299, 92 NE 857, 138 Am St Rep 239, supra, n. 12.52, said: "[In that case] we held that in a disbarment proceeding the entire record made in a previous civil action against the same attorney was inadmissible. The record in that case contained testimony of witnesses concerning the conduct of the attorney, . . . We held he was entitled to be confronted by those witnesses in the disbarment proceeding and the record of their testimony in the previous case was excluded. No such record is offered here. Only the admittedly correct and complete transcript of [the attorney's] testimony as a witness against [the public official] was introduced. Such testimony is competent; it is no more than an admission of the party against whom it is used." Anno: 161 ALR 903

See Re Durant, 80 Conn 140, 67 A 497, 10 Ann Cas 539, supra, n. 12.55.

[12.57] Anno: 161 ALR 905. See Re Santosuosso, 318 Mass 489, 62 NE2d 105, 161 ALR 892, holding that findings of material facts included in the record of a suit based upon the alleged corrupt conduct of a defendant attorney are not admissible in an inquiry by the court into his conduct.

And see Fairfield County Bar v. Taylor, 60 Conn 11, 22 A 441, 13 LRA 767, supra, n. 12.53.

[12.58] Selling v. Radford, 243 US 46, 61 L ed 585, 37 S Ct 377, Ann Cas 1917D, 569.

Anno: 161 ALR 906.

The application of the rule announced by the Supreme Court noted above, which has been followed in some jurisdictions, would seem to assume the admissibility of whatever portions of the record of the former disbarment proceedings are necessary to disclose the fact of disbarment in such other jurisdiction. However, in a Massachusetts disciplinary proceeding against an attorney based upon the fact of his disbarment by a Federal district court, the court, although adhering to the rule announced in Selling v. Radford (US) supra, as to the effect of an order of disbarment in another jurisdiction, held that since the petition (alleging the fact of the disbarment in the Federal court proceedings and attaching a copy of the findings of the judge and the decree entered therein) set forth cause for disbarment, the copy of the pleadings and findings of fact in the Federal court proceedings "rightly were received in evidence." Anno: 161 ALR 906.

p. 439, n. 13. Anno: 161 ALR 907.

Page 439. Add, following note 13: However, a former judgment or decree has been held admissible in a disbarment proceeding.[13.5] Where the disbarment of an attorney was sought upon the ground that he had paid large sums of money to persons employed by various corporations for information about personal injuries sustained by the employees of said corporations in order to enable him to approach them and solicit them to employ him to bring suits in their behalf, and it appeared that in an income tax proceeding such attorney's counsel was called upon to make a statement in his behalf, to the effect that respondent [attorney] secured his business "through information received usually from or through an employee of the company and he reciprocates or pays that employee, as a general thing, for receiving that information, in the form of a commission," such statement was held admissible testimony "made in the presence of respondent and strongly corroborating the charge that respondent had spent sums of money to obtain law business," and that it had great weight to show that respondent spent said moneys to obtain law business, and that respondent did have knowledge of the contents of the petition for appeal when he signed the affidavits to the petition declaring therein that he had read the petition and was familiar with its statements.[13.51] But the unsworn statement made by an attorney in a divorce action, in response to an inquiry of the trial judge, which indicated that he had brought the action on behalf of the wife without her authority, has been held to be inadmissible upon a rule to show cause why his name should not be stricken from the rolls on a charge of malpractice, since such statement amounted to nothing more than a voluntary declaration.[13.52] In a proceeding in in which the court concluded that an attorney could not be suspended or disbarred under the state statutes for the filing of any pleading or exhibit in the courts of the state, it has been nevertheless held that where an attorney filed a petition in his own behalf against certain defendants, including district, superior, and county judges, as well as the judges of the supreme court, the attorney general, and the governor of the state, and in such petition, as well as in an exhibit attached thereto, falsely and maliciously attacked the courts of the state and the judges thereof, such petition and exhibits were competent evidence to be considered along with other evidence in the case as affecting the defendant's mental and moral fitness to continue to practice law.[13.53]

In a disbarment proceedings in which the accused was charged with having, while a member of the state senate, solicited a bribe for promoting a pending bill, it has been held that it was not error to admit testimony of certain persons regarding conversations with the person solicited, made by the latter over the telephone upon and immediately subsequent to the occasion of a meeting with the accused at a hotel, and at his behest, such persons, including the one solicited, being interested in the promotion of the legislation, wherein the person solicited told of the solicitation, to prove the fact that the statements concerning the necessity of raising money for that purpose had been made under those circumstances and at that time.[13.54]

[13.5] Anno: 161 ALR 907.
See Re Ebbs, 150 NC 44, 63 SE 190, 19 LRA NS 892, 17 Ann Cas 592.

[13.51, 13.52] Anno: 161 ALR 908.

[13.53] State Bar Commission ex rel. Williams v. Sullivan, 35 Okla 745, 131 P 703, LRA1915D 1218.
Anno: 161 ALR 909.

[13.54] Anno: 13 ALR2d 1422.

§ 295. — Weight and Sufficiency.

p. 439, n. 14. Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 985.

In a considerable number of cases it has been held that a "preponderance" of the evidence, or a "fair preponderance" thereof, is all that is required to support disbarment charges of a noncriminal nature. Re Mayberry, 295 Mass 155, 3 NE(2d) 248, 105 ALR 976.
Annotation: 105 ALR 985.

Page 439. Add, following note 14: In one jurisdiction it has been held that a higher degree of proof should be required in a proceeding to suspend a member of the bar from the practice of law than is required to determine a question of fact in the ordinary civil action, where only a preponderance of evidence is necessary.[14.5]

[14.5] Copren v. State Bar, 64 Nev 364, 183 P2d 833, 173 ALR 284.

p. 439, n. 15. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.
Re Otterness, 181 Minn 254, 232 NW 318, 73 ALR 1319 (clear and convincing).
Anno: 105 ALR 986.

p. 439, n. 16. Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 986.

"Clear and convincing" proof, which seems to be an even stricter degree than "clear preponderance" and "clear and satisfactory," has been held required in a considerable number of other disbarment cases, even though in most of them the charges have not been of a criminal nature—some of the courts observing that the proceedings are at least quasi criminal. Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 987.

p. 439, n. 17. Re Mayberry, 295 Mass 155, 3 N. E. (2d) 248, 105 A.L.R. 976.
Annotation: 105 A.L.R. 984.

An attorney's disbarment is warranted by evidence that he had committed an act of larceny in removing merchandise, without the consent of the owner, from a store upon which a distress for rent had been levied, that he fraudulently altered the amount of a note made to him, that he had removed and concealed an automobile which he knew was under levy, for the purpose of preventing its sale by a duly authorized officer of the law, that he had suborned perjury, that he had sent an anonymous letter through the mails, containing vulgar, obscene, and scandalous matter, and that he had received money from a woman to rent a house for her to be used as a bawdyhouse. Stone v. Board of Governance, 312 Pa 576, 168 A 473, 90 ALR 1109

A charge as ground for the disbarment of an attorney, that he had obtained money from a client by forging a certificate of nolle prosequendi on a copy of a bill of information charging the client with the commission of a crime, is not established with sufficient certainty by evidence that a certified copy of the bill of information was delivered to him by a deputy clerk without the indorsement of the certificate of nolle prosequendi on it, that the language of the entry was in the customary legal form, indicating that it was made by someone familiar with the records, and by the circumstance that the attorney disappeared from the city about the time of the alleged forgery and has not been seen since, where the client's reputation for truth and veracity is shown to be such that his evidence standing alone is not entitled to weight, and the departure of the attorney may be explained by family troubles and by the fact that he had been humiliated and his professional career injuriously affected by imprisonment for contempt in failing to pay alimony, and he is shown to have entertained the intention of departure prior to the time of the transaction in question. Re Craven, 178 La 372, 151 So 625, 90 ALR 973.

p. 439, n. 18. Re Otterness, 181 Minn 254, 232 NW 318, 73 ALR 1319 (clear and convincing).

Anno: 113 ALR 1184.

Page 439. Add, following note 1: The testimony of the respondent, in a disbarment proceeding for obtaining loans from bootleggers while a judge of a court of record before which offenders against the liquor law were brought, that he did not know that persons from whom he obtained the loans were bootleggers, must be accepted as true, unless outweighed by other facts and circumstances presented by the evidence.[1.5] Evidence that a judge of a court of record having jurisdiction of violations of the liquor law, and who was a pronounced dry, obtained a loan from a bootlegger with whom he had no personal relations, but who had a long court record, by going to a section of the community notorious for its bootlegging activities, where none but bootleggers would be likely to have money to lend, sufficiently shows, in a proceeding for the disbarment of the judge in his capacity as attorney, that he knew the character of the person with whom he was dealing, and that he should have known the reasons which prompted the loan.[1.6]

Although evidence of good reputation in a disbarment proceeding will not overcome evidence establishing specific charges, particularly if they involve moral turpitude, nevertheless, where the evidence is conflicting and the charge does not import criminality or moral turpitude, the court should give weight to testimony of good reputation.[1.61]

[1.5] Re Stolen, 193 Wis 602, 214 NW 379, 216 NW 127, 55 ALR 1355.

[1.6] Re Stolen, 193 Wis 602, 214 NW 379, 216 NW 127, 55 ALR 1355

[1.61] Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

p. 440, n. 2. Anno: 94 L ed 131.

An attorney who has been disbarred in a state because of his conviction on six charges of contempt of court, committed while defending Communists in a Federal District Court, has failed to meet the burden of showing good cause why he should not be disbarred from practice in the United States Supreme Court, where he merely relies upon the fact that he had already been severely punished for his contempt, that he had not been found guilty of a conspiracy to commit contempt, and that, prior to his disbarment from state practice, the Federal District Court in which the contempt had been committed only suspended him for two years. Re Isserman, 345 US 286, 97 L ed 1013, 73 S Ct 676.

§ 296. Trial or Hearing.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1328, 2:1329.

Am Jur quoted in Re Williams, 180 Md 689, 23 A2d 7.

Page 440. Add, following note 3: It is immaterial whether or not the strict rules of procedure adopted by a state bar are followed in a disbarment hearing before the board of governors.[3.1] The only requirement going to the jurisdiction of the court in considering recommendations of the board of governors is that the attorney shall have ample opportunity to be heard.[3.2]

The fact that the hearing afforded one whose legal professional license it is sought to revoke or suspend is held before an administrative board among whose members are the persons who filed the charges upon which the proceedings against the licensee are based is not, it seems, such a badge of unfairness as to warrant a holding that there has been a denial of procedural due process.[3.5]

[3.1] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 170.

[3.2] Annotation: 114 A.L.R. 170.

[3.5] Anno: 98 L ed 864.

p. 440, n. 8. It has been held that an attorney's failure to take the stand to testify in a disbarment proceeding against him justifies the censure of the court, even though it may not be of sufficient weight to change the court's decision. Re Heirich, 10 Ill 2d 357, 140 NE2d 825, 67 ALR2d 827, cert den 355 US 805, 2 L ed 2d 49, 78 S Ct 22.

Page 440. Add following note 8: The United States Supreme Court has held that the Fifth Amendment's privilege against self-incrimination is not available to an attorney who is questioned by a state authority investigating alleged professional misconduct;[8.5] that the Fourteenth Amendment does not automatically preclude a state from exacting testimony of an attorney relating to alleged professional misconduct and from attaching consequences to his refusal to respond;[8.51] that the unavailability to an attorney of a state privilege against self-incrimination in judicial inquiries relating to alleged professional misconduct does not involve a distinction from criminal prosecutions so irrational as to suggest either a denial of due process or a purposeful discrimination in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment;[8.52] that the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is not violated by the disbarment of an attorney on the ground that by invoking, in good faith, his privilege against self-incrimination under the state constitution for the purpose of justifying his refusal to answer questions in an investigation relating to alleged professional misconduct, he refused to co-operate with the court in its efforts to expose unethical practices, where the unanswered questions were material to the investigation and the attorney was duly warned of the consequences of his refusal to answer; it is not necessary for the state to proceed against him only by way of independent evidence of wrongdoing on his part.[8.53]

[8.5] Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

[8.51] Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

The Fourteenth Amendment does not establish a federal constitutional right of a person not to be required to incriminate himself in a state proceeding; to make out a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment, something substantially more must be shown than that the state procedures involved have a tendency to discourage the withholding of self-incriminatory testimony. Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

[8.52, 8.53] Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

p. 440, n. 11.

The Supreme Court of Nevada should, in reviewing the findings and recommendations of the Board of Governors of the State Bar and of the Local Administrative Committee in a disciplinary proceeding against a member of the bar, consider and weigh the evidence and arrive at an independent conclusion, giving, however, due consideration and according persuasive force to such recommendations. Copren v. State Bar, 64 Nev 364, 183 P2d 833, 173 ALR 284.

Page 440. Add, following note 11: It is not error to refuse to dismiss a count seeking disbarment of an attorney for wilfully misleading the court where the evidence shows that in order to secure an extension of time to file a supersedeas bond, he made and filed his own affidavit to the effect that his client was quarantined in his home and could not attend to the business, which was in fact untrue.[11.1] [11.1] Re Vaughan, 189 Cal. 491, 209 P. 353, 24 A.L.R. 858.

§ 297. — Right to Jury Trial.

p. 441, n. 12. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

Anno: 107 ALR 692; 98 L ed 860.

If an accused attorney had the right to a jury trial, it would necessarily destroy the inherent power of the court over attorneys. The two rights cannot coexist. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

The conclusion as regards some of the states against the right to jury trial rests upon an inference from the fact that such proceedings seem to have been generally conducted in those states without a jury trial and that no objection appears to have been raised in that respect, rather than upon decisions expressly dealing with the point. Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 692.

The right to jury trial in disbarment proceedings did not receive constitutional sanction placing it beyond the power of the legislature by virtue of a right given by act of the territorial legislature in force at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala 113, 152 So 229, 107 ALR 671.

p. 441, n. 16. Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 692.

Page 441. Add, following note 17: Where such a statute was in force in a territory at the time it became a state and adopted a Constitution, the right to jury trial in disbarment proceedings did not thereby receive constitutional sanction so as to place it beyond the power of the legislature,[17.1] for because of the distinctive character of the proceeding and the fact that the right did not exist at common law the right to jury trial in disbarment proceedings is not guaranteed by the constitutional provision that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.[17.11]

[17.1] Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

[17.11] Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.
Annotation: 107 ALR 692.

This holding seems to be attributable to the view that the suspension or disbarment of attorneys, being an essential and inherent power of the court, is not hampered or restricted by the right to jury trial unless such right is affirmatively granted by statute. The right of the English courts to deal summarily with dishonest and unfit attorneys existed before Magna Charta and was not abrogated or lessened by the provisions of that instrument. Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671. Annotation: 107 A.L.R. 692.

§ 298. — Continuance.

Page 442. Add, following note 4: A stay in a disbarment proceeding in which the defense thereto has not been materially affected by reason of respondent's military service has been held properly denied under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act where it appeared that all of the facts were presented to the trial committee in the presence of respondent and prior to the time he was inducted into the military service.[4.5]

[4.5] Anno: 144 ALR 1512.

§ 299. Judgment and Enforcement Thereof.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1331-2:1333.

Am Jur cited in Re Page (Mo) 257 SW2d 679.

p. 442, n. 7. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

A final judgment of disbarment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction is binding upon all the courts of the state and constitutes an adjudication that, at the time it was rendered, the person so disbarred was not a proper person to hold the office of attorney. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

p. 442, n. 9.

The contention that a judgment of a state supreme court disbarring an attorney from practice in the "courts" of the state is too broad cannot be raised for the first time in a subsequent independent proceeding by the attorney for readmission to the bar. Re Keenan 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766

Page 442. Add, following note 9: No rule of the board of commissioners of the state bar or approval by the court of such rule is necessary to warrant a judgment of disbarment by a majority vote of a quorum present, in view of the provision of the act creating the board to the effect that a majority of the board shall constitute a quorum and the majority of those present (if a quorum be present) shall be empowered to act as and for the entire board.[9.1]

[9.1] Ex parte Thompson, 228 Ala. 113, 152 So. 229, 107 A.L.R. 671.

§ 300. Review.

Page 442. Add, following note 16: Even though a jury returns a verdict of not guilty, the supreme court may affirm the action of the court in granting a new trial without finding that there was no substantial evidence to support the jury's verdict.[16.1]

[16.1] State Law Examiners v. Phelan, 43 Wyo. 481, 5 P. (2d) 263, 78 A.L.R. 1317.

Page 443. Add new paragraph at end of section: Upon review of a state judgment disbarring an attorney on account of his invoking his state privilege against self-incrimination, the scope of review by the United States Supreme Court is limited to the question whether arbitrary or discriminatory state action can be found in the consequences the state has attached to the exercise of the privilege.[19.5]

[19.5] Cohen v Hurley, 366 US 117, 6 L ed 2d 156, 81 S Ct 954.

§ 301. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1334–2:1336.

Am Jur quoted in Application of Spriggs, 90 Ariz 387, 368 P2d 456.

Cantor v Grievance Committees, 189 Tenn 536, 226 SW2d 283.

Hankamer v. Templin, 143 Tex 572, 187 SW2d 549

Am Jur cited in Re Dawson (Fla) 131 So 2d 472.

Re Stump, 272 Ky 593, 114 SW2d 1094 (n. 20).

Burns v. State, 129 Tex 303, 103 SW2d 960 (notes 20–2).

RCL cited in Re Oliver, 97 Utah 1, 89 P2d 229

p. 443, n. 20. Anno: 70 ALR2d 276-280, 313.

An attorney disbarred by a final judgment of a state supreme court is not, by force of such judgment, even though unreversed, precluded from applying for readmission to the bar, where the offense for which he was disbarred is of such a kind that, after a lapse of time, he may be able to satisfy the court that he has become trustworthy. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

As to pardon for conviction of crime for which attorney was disbarred as authorizing courts to entertain application for reinstatement, see supra § 284 (Supp.)

It has been held that a disbarred attorney whose petition for reinstatement has been denied is not precluded from again applying for such reinstatement upon a showing of reformation and rehabilitation. Anno: 70 ALR2d 279.

p. 443, n. 1. See infra, notes 9.51 et seq. (Supp.).

Anno: 70 ALR2d 316.

p. 443, n. 2.

Anno: 70 ALR2d 320–324.

An application for reinstatement of an attorney after judgment of disbarment has become final must be treated as an application for admission to the practice and not as an application to vacate the order of disbarment. Re Stephenson, 243 Ala 342, 10 So(2d) 1, 143 ALR 166.

p. 443, n. 3. Re Application of Daniel (Okla) 315 P2d 789, 70 ALR2d 265.

Anno: 70 ALR2d 282.

p. 443, n. 4. Anno: 70 ALR2d 283.

p. 443, n 5. Re Stephenson, 243 Ala 342, 10 So(2d) 1, 143 ALR 166

Anno: 70 ALR2d 294–299.

It has been held that the proper method and manner of establishing the character and trustworthiness of one seeking reinstatement to the bar is by presentation of recommendations and statements of those who are in position to know and judge the petitioner. Re Application of Daniel (Okla) 315 P2d 789, 70 ALR2d 265.

p. 443, n. 6. See Re Stephenson, 243 Ala 342, 10 So(2d) 1, 143 ALR 166

Anno: 70 ALR2d 287-293.

Page 443. Add following note 6: An attorney's readmission to practice, following a period of suspension involving the charging of an exorbitant fee, has in some instances been conditioned upon his restitution of the excessive amount of the fee.[6.5]

[6.5] Anno: 70 ALR2d 983.

p. 443, n. 7. Anno: 70 ALR2d 325.

p. 443, n. 8. Anno: 70 ALR2d 330.

An order of disbarment cannot be vacated by legislative mandate. Re Phillips, 17 Cal(2d) 55, 109 P(2d) 344, 132 ALR 644

p. 443, n. 9. Anno: 70 ALR2d 331.

See supra § 284.

Page 443. Add new paragraph at end of section: In some cases it has been held that a petition for the reinstatement or readmission to practice of a disbarred attorney may not be presented to any court other than that which entered the original disbarment order.[9.51] But in other cases it has been held that an application for reinstatement or readmission to the bar need not be presented to the court which entered the disbarment order, such application not being a continuation of the original proceeding for disbarment.[9.53] And a number of cases have held that an application by a disbarred attorney for reinstatement or readmission to the bar should be treated as an original application for admission to the bar rather than as a further application in the original disbarment proceeding.[9.55]

Where an applicant for original admission to the bar must be a resident of the state, a nonresident is ineligible for reinstatement.[9.57] Reinstatement cannot be granted a petitioner whose original admission to practice was null and void because of his lack of citizenship or because of fraud in its procurement, or where his original license had been revoked after the filing of the application for reinstatement.[9.58]

Courts have consistently upheld their inherent power and authority in a proper case to reinstate an applicant previously subjected to disciplinary action.[9.59] It is the duty of the courts in such a case to act with justice to the profession and the public as well as to the applicant, and without regard to mere feelings of sympathy for him.[9.6]

An application for reinstatement is not ordinarily the proper place for an attack on the disbarment of the petitioner or the conviction of crime for which he was disbarred or threatened with disbarment.[9.61]

An application for reinstatement to the bar is, in many instances, under a statute or rule of court to that effect, made or referred to a referee or some committee of the bar for preliminary hearing and investigation.[9.62] An application for reinstatement to practice law may be peremptorily denied, may be granted either with reservations or unconditionally, and may be complete or partial.[9.63] An order in an ex parte proceeding by an attorney for reinstatement to the privilege of practicing has been held to be appealable.[9.64]

The effect of reinstating an attorney is to reinvest him with the right to practice as of the date of the reinstatement.[9.65]

[9.51] Anno: 137 ALR 781; 70 ALR2d 314, 316.

This result has been based on the ground that the power to reinstate is based on the continuing jurisdiction of the court over the subject matter and the parties, and that a petition for reinstatement may and must be presented to the court which rendered the judgment of disbarment. Anno: 137 ALR 781.

A statement approved in a number of jurisdictions is: "When a member of the bar of the state has been, upon proper proceedings, disbarred, and the judgment remains in full force and unreversed, the only remedy of the party is, at the proper time and on a proper showing, to apply to the court in which he was disbarred to be reinstated. The court rendering the judgment of disbarment retains a continuing jurisdiction over the subject, as in many similar cases, and may, upon a proper showing of reformation of the party, or other satisfactory reasons arising after the disbarment, reinstate him in the practice of his profession. Readmission as upon application and examination in the first instance is not the proper course." Anno: 137 ALR 781.

In an application to the Pennsylvania supreme court for readmission, filed by an attorney who had been disbarred by the court of common pleas, it was held that such petition asked the court to reconsider the facts upon which the decree was based and should be made to the court that found those facts and not to the appellate court, although it appeared that when the appellate court affirmed a disbarment order entered by a county court, as it had on the disbarment of the applicant in this case, the effect, under a rule of court, was to strike the name of the attorney from the roll of the supreme court. Anno: 137 ALR 781.

9.53 Anno: 70 ALR2d 315, 318.

Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE2d 516, 137 ALR 766, in which it was said that the proceeding for readmission was a new proceeding rather than a continuation of the original disbarment proceeding, and that it was not to be regarded as a continuation of the original disbarment proceeding on the ground that such second admission to the bar would be a modification of the punishment imposed by the jdugment of disbarment since a disbarment is not properly or technically to be considered a punishment although it may have that practical effect.

9.54 Anno: 137 ALR 782.

The fact that under a statute relating to admission to the bar, a petition for admission may be filed in either one of two courts of the state does not establish the inapplicability of the statute to the admission of attorneys previously disbarred, where, under the law of the state, a petition by a disbarred person under the statute is an entirely new and independent proceeding distinct from the proceeding for disbarment. Re Keenan, 310 Mass 166, 37 NE(2d) 516, 137 ALR 766.

9.55 Anno: 137 ALR 783; 70 ALR2d 314, 316.

A disbarment under a section of a statute providing that the name of an attorney who commits any infamous crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude shall be stricken from the roll of attorneys and be excluded from practicing as an attorney is permanent and places him in the same position as if he never had a license to practice so that he must seek readmission as any applicant seeking admission to the bar for first time and may not apply for reinstatement through the disbarring court. Cantor v. Grievance Committees, 189 Tenn 536, 226 SW2d 283.

9.57 Anno: 70 ALR2d 280.
9.58 Anno: 70 ALR2d 280.
9.59 Anno: 70 ALR2d 281.
9.6 Anno: 70 ALR2d 282.
9.61 Anno: 70 ALR2d 324.
9.62 Anno: 70 ALR2d 325.

It has been held that the recommendation of a referee or board, while entitled to weight and deference, is advisory only, the final determination resting with the court. Anno: 70 ALR2d 326.

9.63 Anno: 70 ALR2d 327.
9.64 Anno: 70 ALR2d 329.
9.65 Anno: 70 ALR2d 335.

AUCTIONS

§ 2. Definition of Terms, and Historical Summary.

Am Jur quoted in ABC Liquidators, Inc. v Kansas City (Mo) 322 SW2d 876.

In B. H. Steif Jewelry Co. v Walker, 36 Tenn App 427, 256 SW2d 392.

Am Jur cited in Hagerman v St. Louis, 365 Mo 403, 283 SW2d 623, 53 ALR2d 1423.

p. 447, n. 9. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee, 128 Fla. 424, 174 So. 854, 111 A.L.R. 463.

§ 3. Generally.

Am Jur cited in Hall of Distributors, Inc. v Bowers (DC Ohio) 139 F Supp 400.

Moore v Thompson (Fla) 126 So2d 543; State ex rel. James v Gerrell, 137 Fla 324, 188 So 812.

Steinberg-Baum & Co. v Countryman, — Iowa —, 77 NW2d 15.

Gilbert v Mathews, 186 Kan 672, 532 P2d 58.

Hagerman v St. Louis, 365 Mo 403, 283 SW2d 623, 53 ALR2d 1423.

Blauvelt v Beck, 162 Neb 576, 76 NW2d 738.

p. 447, n. 14. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 474.

While an auction sale tends to stimulate buying by the occasional spirit of competition which pervades the prospective purchasers present, it cannot be said that the auctioneer is guilty of dishonest methods by taking advantage of that normal condition and doing what he can to stimulate it. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee, 128 Fla 424, 174 So 854 111 ALR 463.

p. 447, n. 16. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 473.
p. 447, n. 17. Hagerman v St. Louis, 365 Mo 403, 283 SW2d 623, 53 ALR2d 1423.
p. 447, n. 18. Annotation: 111 ALR 473.

It has been held that Missouri statutes licensing and regulating auctioneers, contemplate auction sales by licensed auctioneers, for others and also at auction stores or rooms. Hagerman v St. Louis, 365 Mo 403, 283 SW2d 623, 53 ALR2d 1423.

p. 447, n. 19. Annotation: 111 ALR 474; 53 ALR2d 1437 (jewelry auctions).

Page 448. Add, following note 20: Authority delegated to a municipality to regulate auctions empowers it to act in respect of merchants regularly selling their own goods at auction as well as persons auctioning goods of others,[21] but it does not permit the city directly or indirectly to prohibit the business.[22] It is beyond the power of a city to regulate in any way sales at auction when a statute already completely covers the matter.[23]

An auctioneer's licensing statute may extend to corporations.[24]

[21] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 475.
[22] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 474.
[23] Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 475.
[24] Anno: 165 ALR 1100.

§ 4. Limitations upon Power to License and Regulate.

Am Jur cited in Steinberg-Baum & Co. v Countryman, — Iowa —, 77 NW2d 15.

Gilbert v Mathews, 186 Kan 672, 352 P2d 58.

Hagerman v St. Louis, 365 Mo 403, 283 SW2d 623, 53 ALR2d 1423.

p. 448, n. 2. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee, 128 Fla. 424, 174 So. 854, 111 A.L.R. 463

Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 473.

p. 448, n. 3. Anno: 111 ALR 473.
p. 448, n. 4. Anno: 111 ALR 479; 53 ALR2d 1438–1442 (jewelry auctions).
p. 448, notes 6, 7. Anno: 111 ALR 479.
p. 448, n. 8. Anno: 111 ALR 473.
p. 448, n. 9. Anno: 111 ALR 479; 53 ALR2d 1436 (jewelry auctions).
p. 448 notes 10, 11. Anno: 111 ALR 479.

§ 5. — Amount of License Fee.

p. 449, notes 14, 15. Anno: 111 ALR 480.
p. 449, n. 17. Anno: 111 ALR 480.
p. 449, n. 18. Anno: 11 ALR 480; 53 ALR 2d 1443 (jewelry auctions).
p. 449, n. 19. Anno: 111 ALR 480; 53 ALR 2d 1444.

§ 6. Effect of Failure to Obtain License.

Am Jur cited in Hagerman v St. Louis, 365 Mo 403, 283 SW2d 623, 53 ALR2d 1423.

p. 449, n. 2. Anno: 118 ALR 654.
p. 449, n. 3. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 479.

§ 7. Regulation Other than Requirement of License.

Am Jur cited in State v Gordon, 143 Conn 698, 125 A2d 477.

Steinberg-Baum & Co. v Countryman, — Iowa —, 77 NW2d 15.

Gilbert v Mathews, 186 Kan 672, 352 P2d 58.

p. 450, n. 7. Anno: 53 ALR2d 1438–1440 (jewelry auctions).
p. 450, n. 8. Anno: 53 ALR2d 1435, 1440–1442 (jewelry auctions).

The constitutional rights of owners of property are infringed by making the giving of notice a condition of the right to sell merchandise at auction and requiring adherence to the published terms and conditions of sale and the acceptance of a bid if at least two bids have been made. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee. 128 Fla. 424. 174 So. 854. 111 A.L.R. 463.

It has been held that an ordinance making unlawful a retail auction sale of jewelry unless the person whose stock is being offered shall have been in the retail jewelry business at the location of the sale for at least 1 year, and shall not have conducted an auction sale at any time within the said 1-year period at the said location or on the said premises, creates classifications which are not authorized by the police power, as affecting the public health, welfare, or safety of the citizens of the community, and which fail to include all who are similarly situated, thus rendering the ordinance a special law. Hagerman v St. Louis, — Mo —, 283 SW2d 623. 53 ALR2d 1423.

p. 450, n. 9. Anno: 111 ALR 477; 53 ALR2d 1442 (jewelry auctions).

p. 450, n. 10. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 475.

Auctioned sales in a store may be regulated as well as those on the street or in other public places. Annotation: 111 A.L.R. 475.

An ordinance forbidding auction sales in a BA Business District was held unreasonable, arbitrary, and void where the conducting of auction sales was not more obnoxious than many of the other businesses permitted in the district, where permissible areas were either unsuited for auction sales or had been pre-empted, and where the enforcement of the ordinance would in effect suppress and prohibit the conduct of such sales. Miami Beach v Perell (Fla) 52 So2d 906.

p. 450, n. 11. Anno: 111 ALR 476; 53 ALR 2d 1435 (jewelry).

The sale of jewelry by auction has been held not to be a pernicious business subject to prohibition by legislation. Hagerman v St. Louis, — Mo —, 283 SW2d 623, 53 ALR2d 1423.

p. 450, n. 12. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee, 128 Fla. 424. 174 So. 854, 111 A.L.R. 463.

Anno: 111 ALR 478; 53 ALR2d 1433 (jewelry).

p. 450, n. 13. Annotation: 55 A.L.R. 242–244; 111 ALR 477; 53 ALR2d 1442 (jewelry).

p. 450, n. 14. Perry Trading Co. v Tallahassee, 128 Fla 424, 174 So 854, 111 ALR 463.

Anno: 55 ALR 244, 111 ALR 477; 53 ALR2d 1442 (jewelry).

An ordinance requiring auctions to be held between the hours of 8 A. M. and 6 P. M. is void for discrimination where crowded assemblies in places of business after 6 P. M. are permitted without municipal interference and are not productive of either public inconvenience or breaches of the peace. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee, 128 Fla. 424. 174 So. 854. 111 A.L.R. 463

p. 450, n. 15. Annotation: 55 A.L.R. 242.

p. 450, n. 16. Annotation: 55 A.L.R. 242; 111 ALR 476, 477; 53 ALR2d 1436, 1442.

p. 451, n. 17. Anno: 11 ALR 479; 53 ALR2d 1441.

§ 8. Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:3–2:8

p. 451, n. 1. Palsey v Ropp (Mo App) 334 SW2d 254, 80 ALR2d 1231.

§ 9. Scope and Extent of Authority.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1352.

p. 452, n. 10. Supplemental annotation. 105 A.L.R. 724.

§ 10. — Power to Warrant.

Am Jur cited in Lasker v Patrovsky, 264 Wis 589, 60 NW2d 336.

p. 452, n. 16. Anno: 40 ALR2d 313.

p. 452, n. 1. Anno: 40 ALR2d 313.

§ 14. The Advertisement.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:9–2:13.

Am Jur quoted in Moore v Berry, — Tenn App —, 288 SW2d 465.

p. 454, n. 15. Anno: 158 ALR 1421.

p. 454, n. 16. Anno: 158 ALR 1421.

p. 454, n. 17. Anno: 158 ALR 1421.

§ 15. Terms and Conditions of Sale.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:14—2:16.

Am Jur quoted in Moore v Berry, — Tenn App —, 288 SW2d 465.

Am Jur cited in United States v. Blair (CA10th Colo) 193 F2d 557; Gould v. Hiram Walker & Sons (CCA7th) 142 F2d 544

Continental Can Co. v Commercial Waterway Dist. 56 Wash 2d 456, 347 P2d 887, 354 P2d 25.

§ 16. — Conflict between Printed and Oral Conditions.

p. 455, n. 13. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee, 128 Fla. 424, 174 So. 854, 111 A.L.R. 463.

p. 455, n. 14. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee, 128 Fla. 424, 174 So. 854, 111 A.L.R. 463.

Anno: 158 ALR 1421.

§ 17. The Bidding; Offer and Acceptance; Withdrawal of Property from Sale.

Am Jur quoted in Jones v. Hackensack Auto Wreckers, 124 NJL 289, 11 A(2d) 595.

Zuhak v. Rose, 264 Wis 286, 58 NW2d 693.

Am Jur cited in Jackson v. L. S. Brown Co. 86 Ga App 310, 71 SE2d 521.

p. 456, n. 19. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1052.

It has been stated that an advertisement or announcement of a sale at auction to the highest bidder is a mere declaration of intention to hold an auction at which bids will be received and that until a bid is accepted the property may be withdrawn from the sale. Anno: 37 ALR 2d 1052.

p. 456, n. 2.

It has been held that one who, prior to acts of the owner in stopping an auction advertised to be "without reserve" and discharging the auctioneer, had made the highest bid, does not withdraw such bid by making a higher offer to the owner for a private sale, which is refused. Zuhak v. Rose, 264 Wis 286. 58 NW2d 693, 37 ALR2d 1041.

p. 456, n. 4. Perry Trading Co. v. Tallahassee. 128 Fla 424, 174 So 854, 111 ALR 463.

Anno: 37 ALR2d 1049 et seq.

Page 456. Add, following note 4: Where the seller reserves the right to refuse to accept any bid made, a binding sale is not consummated between the seller and the bidder until the seller accepts the bid.[4.5] Where the advertisement contains notice of a "reserve price" below which the article will not be sold, the auctioneer may withdraw the property from the sale if there are no bids reaching such publicly announced reserve price.[4.51]

[4.5] Anno: 37 ALR2d 1053.

[4.51] Anno: 37 ALR2d 1053.

p. 456, n. 5. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1054, 1056.

p. 457, n. 5a. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1054–1056.

It has been held that the specification, in an advertisement of an auction sale "without reserve," of the period during which the real estate would be sold is waived by the continuation of the sale beyond such period, and, even if not so waived, does not give the owner the right to reject the highest bid made after the period. but merely the right to close further bidding. Zuhak v. Rose, 264 Wis 286. 58 NW2d 693, 37 ALR2d 1041.

A contract for the sale of real estate has been held made by an offer to sell the same to the highest bidder at auction "without reserve" together with the highest bona fide bid made therefor at the auction sale, even though the owner stops the auction and discharges the auctioneer before the latter can receive higher bids or accept the highest bid theretofore made. Zuhak v. Rose, 264 Wis 286. 58 NW2d 693. 37 ALR2d 1041.

It has been held that even where the sale is advertised to be "without reserve," the auctioneer may withdraw the property from auction sale before there has been any bidding. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1056.

p. 457 n. 6. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1051, 1054.

A provision of the Uniform Sales Acts, which in effect provides for the withdrawal of bids or property until such time as the sale is completed by the fall of the auctioneer's hammer "unless the sale is without reserve" has been construed to preclude a withdrawal of the property in a sale "without reserve" after a bid has been made, although not accepted. Zuhak

v. Rose. 264 Wis 286. 58 NW2d 693. 37 ALR2d 1041.

Page 457. Add, at end of section: The owner of property will be permitted to withdraw the property from sale and may legally refuse to comply with the terms of the sale when the auctioneer knocks the property down as a result of a mistake and refuses to resell the property when the mistake is called to his attention.[8.5]

[8.5] Anno: 37 ALR2d 1056.

§ 18. Mode of Making Bids.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:27

Am Jur cited in Matthews v Linn, 78 SD 203, 99 NW2d 885.

§ 20. Discretion of Auctioneer as to Acceptance of Bids.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1351.

p. 458. n. 7. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1057.

§ 21. Who May Bid.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1359.

Am Jur quoted in Combs v. Baker. 203 Ark 602. 158 SW2d 48.

RCL cited in Combs v. Baker. 203 Ark 602, 158 SW2d 48.

p. 459. n 16. UNIFORM SALES ACT, § 21 (3, 4)

§ 22. By-bidding or Puffing—In General.

Am Jur cited in Kenyon v Kenyon, 81 RI 223, 101 A2d 477.

§ 26. Stifling of Competition.

Am Jur cited in Preske v. Carroll, 178 Md 543, 16 A(2d) 291.

RCL cited in Schaefer v. Cousins (La App) 189 So 158, 621.

Detroit Trust Co. v. Agozzinio, 280 Mich 402, 273 NW 747.

§ 27. — Agreements Not to Bid.

Am Jur quoted in Jones v. Clary, 194 Va 804, 75 SE2d 504

Am Jur cited in Roberts v Salot, 166 Cal App 2d 294, 33 P2d 232.

§ 28. Generally.

Am Jur quoted in Brey v. Tvedt, 74 ND 192, 21 NW2d 49.

§ 30. Authority of Auctioneer to Make Memorandum—In General.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:28–2:34.

Am Jur quoted in Smith v. Joyce, 214 NC 602. 200 SE 431 (notes 6–7).

Moore v Berry, — Tenn App —, 288 SW2d 465.

p. 467, n. 8.

See Zuhak v. Rose, 264 Wis 286, 58 NW2d 693, 37 ALR2d 1041 (holding that one who offers realty for sale to the highest bidder at auction "without reserve" and, being dissatisfied with the bids, stops the auction and discharges the auctioneer may not, as against the highest bidder assert the claim that no memorandum of sale sufficient under the statute of frauds was given) § 31. — When Memorandum Must Be Made; Termination of Auctioneer's Authority to Sign.

Am Jur quoted in Smith v. Joyce, 24 NC 602, 200 SE 431 (n. 14).

Am Jur cited in Faultersack v. Clintonville Sales Corp. 253 Wis 432, 34 NW2d 682.

§ 33. — Necessity that Auctioneer Have Written Authority to Sign Contract.

Am Jur cited in Polka v May, 383 Pa 80, 118 A2d 154.

p. 469, n. 3. Doty v. Wilder, 15 Ill 407, 60 Am Dec 756; Dawson v. Miller, 20 Tex 171, 70 Am Dec 380.

Anno: 131 Am St Rep 482.

§ 35. Form and Contents of Memorandum.

Page 471. Add, following "property sold" in the sixth line of the section: [16.5]

[16.5] Shy v. Lewis, 321 Mo 688, 12 SW(2d) 719, citing RCL; Dunham v. Hartman, 153 Mo 625, 55 SW 233, 77 Am St Rep 741

Anno: Ann Cas 1912D 1076; 23 ALR2d 70, 71.

The designation "property sold this day at auction—Pawtucket Ave. East Prov.," as contained in a receipt captioned Providence, Rhode Island, September 5, 1918, has been held sufficient to satisfy the statute, since it was not contended that the vendor owned more than one parcel of property on Pawtucket Avenue, or owned on that avenue more than one parcel of property which was sold at public auction on September 5, 1918. Anno: 23 ALR2d 70.

Page 471. Add, following "terms of credit" in the seventh line of the section: [16.6]

[16.6] Norris v Blair, 39 Ind 90, 10 Am Rep 135; O'Donnell v. Leeman, 43 Me 158, 69 Am Dec 54; Mason Motors Spirit Distributing Co. v. Cosden, 105 Okla 244, 231 P 890, citing RCL.

p. 471, n 19.

A memorandum of sale of land which neither names nor describes the vendor, although naming certain persons as auctioneers, is insufficient under the Statute of Frauds. McGovern v. Hern, 153 Mass 308, 26 NE 861, 10 LRA 815, 25 Am St Rep 632.

For a detailed discussion of the sufficiency of a memorandum signed by agents, including auctioneers, of undisclosed principals, see 49 Am Jur 717–721, STATUTE OF FRAUDS, §§ 415–417.

p. 471, n. 20.

For a detailed discussion of the sufficiency of a memorandum signed by agents, including auctioneers, of undisclosed principals, see 49 Am Jur 717–721, STATUTE OF FRAUDS, §§ 415–417.

Page 471. Add at end of section: In some states the law is very explicit and in terms requires a subscription at the "end" or "close" of an instrument. Thus, under a statute providing that "when the law requires any writing to be signed by a party thereto, it shall not be deemed to be signed unless the signature be subscribed at the end or close of such writing,' an auctioneer's name printed upon a newspaper clipping which is pasted above the rest of a memorandum in which the price is stated and the purchaser's name signed is not a sufficient signature because not appended to the part of the paper which the purchaser signed, and not subscribed at the end.[4.5]

[4.5] Anno: 112 ALR 940.

§ 36. — Inclusion, by Reference of Terms in Separate Writings.

p. 472, n. 6.

A memorandum of an auction sale, signed by the purchaser and describing the property as "the real estate described in the printed advertisement hereto annexed," sufficiently describes the land sold to comply with the statute. Anno: 73 ALR 1387.

§ 38. Deposit or Earnest Money.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1356.

§ 40. Payment of Purchase Price; Vendor's Lien; Sale on Credit.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:35–2:38

§ 41. Passing of Title.

Am Jur quoted in State ex rel. Robins v Clinger, 72 Idaho 222, 238 P2d 1145.

Herbert's Estate, 356 Pa 107, 51 A2d 753

Am Jur cited in Stiles v Commonwealth (Ky) 348 SW2d 843.

Yellowstone Livestock Com. v Dupuis, 133 Mont 454, 325 P2d 691.

Page 475. Add, following note 17: One who has accepted a bid made for real property offered at auction cannot thereafter enter into a binding contract for its sale to another.[17.5]

[17.5] Atlantic Ref. Co. v. Wyoming Nat. Bank. 356 Pa 226. 51 A2d 719. 170 ALR 1060.

§ 42. Delivery.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:39. 2:40.

§ 43. Enforcing the Sale Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1357. 2:1358; 18 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 18:1162.

p. 476, n. 17. Edwards v. Downing, 314 Ky 78, 234 SW2d 305.

Page 477. Add, at end of section: Where the sale is "without reserve," and the right to withdraw the property does not exist after a bid has been made, it has been held that the highest bidder may specifically enforce the acceptance of his bid and a transfer of the property pursuant thereto, or may recover damages for breach of contract.[6.5] On the other hand, at least in the absence of a sale "without reserve," it has been held generally that where the property is withdrawn from auction sale before the acceptance of any bid, there is no contract between the parties, and, accordingly, the remedy of specific performance is inapplicable.[6.51]

[6.5] Anno: 37 ALR2d 1056.

The court affirmed the trial court's judgment ordering specific performance of a contract to convey realty arising out of an auction sale "without reserve" wherein the owner withdrew the property after plaintiff had bid on it, and retained jurisdiction so that if specific performance should be impossible for any reason, the court might abate the price conformably to what should be conveyed, or allow damages for breach of the contract. Zuhak v. Rose. 264 Wis 286. 58 NW2d 693. 37 ALR2d 1041.

[6.51] Tillman v. Dunman, 114 Ga 406. 40 SE 244, 57 LRA 784. 88 Am St Rep 28.

McPherson Bros. Co. v. Okanogan County. 45 Wash 285, 88 P 199, 9 LRA NS 748.

Anno: 37 ALR2d 1057.

§ 44. Suit by Auctioneer in Own Name.

p. 477, n. 7. It has been held that the operator of a public sales barn who pays to the seller of cattle placed in the barn for sale the purchase price, less commission, agreed upon between the seller and buyer of the cattle, is entitled to recover such purchase price from the buyer who, upon discovering that the cattle had been stolen and that he had no title thereto, refuses to pay. Pasley v Ropp (Mo App) 334 SW2d 254, 80 ALR2d 1231.

§ 45. Resale of Property on Default of Buyer.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:41–2:43; 2 Am Pur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1357. 2:1358.

§ 46. Warranties; Claims Based on Defects in Property Sold.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:44–2:49.

Am Jur cited in Gould v. Hiram Walker & Sons (CCA 7th) 142 F(2d) 544.

Page 479. Add, following note 7: There may of course be an express warranty or a warranty implied in fact from words or conduct.[7.5]

[7.5] Representations privately made in regard to property which has been advertised for sale at public auction may become the foundation of an action for breach of warranty in favor of one who, in reliance on them, bids in the property. Crossman v. Johnson. 63 Vt 333. 22 A 608. 13 LRA 678.

§ 50. Damages.

Page 482. Add, following note 6: Where the sale of land is public and the resale is also public, is fairly conducted after due notice both to the vendee and to the public, and is made upon substantially the same terms and conditions as the original sale, the amount received is, at least, evidence of the market value of the land at the time of the breach, and in some jurisdictions it is apparently regarded as conclusive; at least, the vendor is permitted to recover any deficiency as an element of his damages for the vendee's failure to perform.[6.5]

[6.5] Anno: 52 ALR 1518.

p. 482, n. 8. Anno: 52 ALR 1520.

p. 483 n. 14. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1057.

Damages in the amount of $676 have been allowed the purchaser of several pens of sheep which were knocked down to him as a unit in a sale "without reserve,' where the auctioneer thereafter resold them individually for $676 more than the unit bid. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1057.

§ 52. Right to Compensation.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1355, 2:1362.

p. 483. n. 1. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1057.

It has been held that an auctioneer may recover against an owner who withdraws property from the auction sale for his reasonable compensation or expenses, although he is not entitled to his commissions. Anno: 37 ALR2d 1057

§ 53. Right to a Lien; Recovery of Compensation from Purchaser.

Am. Jur. cited in Art Education Press v. Smith, 252 App. Div. 316. 299 N. Y. S. 170 (n. 8).

§ 54. Liability of Auctioneer Generally.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Legal Forms 2:50–2:53.

§ 55. Liability for Custody and Disbursement of Deposit Money.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1356.

Am Jur quoted in Hicks v Howell, 203 Va 32, 121 SE2d 757.

p. 486, n. 3. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1244.

p. 486, n. 6. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1244.

p. 486, n. 8. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1245.

p. 486, n. 10. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1244.

§ 56. Liability to Seller.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1352–2:1354.

p. 487, n. 17.

A real estate agent, who bought property from his principal for $6,800 and sold it at public auction for $8,610, was held not liable for the profit realized where it was merely shown that the agent knew the market value to be between $8,500 and $9,000, and where there was no allegation that the agent knew that one or more persons were planning to bid in an amount in excess of $6,800 on the property on the day of the sale. Buchanan v. Fritts (Ky) 240 SW2d 614.

§ 57. Liability to Buyer.

Am Jur quoted in Pasley v Ropp (Mo App) 334 SW2d 254, 80 ALR2d 1231.

State Secur. Co. v Svoboda, 172 Neb 526, 110 NW2d 109.

Am Jur cited in McElroy v. Long (CA5th Ga) 170 F2d 345.

Grace v. Todd, 83 Ga App 684, 64 SE2d 479.

Farmers & B. State Bank v. Folmer, 217 Minn 513. 15 NW2d 13

p. 487, n. 1. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1242.

p. 487, n. 3. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1250.

p. 488, n. 5. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1238, 1249.

p. 488, n. 6. Pasley v Ropp (Mo App) 334 SW2d 254, 80 ALR2d 1231.

Anno: 80 ALR2d 1238.

Where the theory of purchasers of a tract of land at auction sale was that the auctioneer guaranteed the title, in view of the words in the advertisement of sale that "the purchaser makes the price, the owner makes the deed," and where at the conclusion of the sale the purchaser entered into a written contract with the owners of the property, the court affirmed the direction of a verdict in favor of the auctioneer, Anno: 80 ALR2d 1243.

p. 488, n. 7. Pasley v Ropp (Mo App) 334 SW2d 254, 80 ALR2d 1231.

Anno: 80 ALR2d 1239, 1251.

p. 488, n. 9. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1239.

p. 488, n. 10. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1251.

§ 58. — Effect of Failure to Disclose Principal.

Am Jur cited in Farmers & M. State Bank v. Folmer, 217 Minn 513, 15 NW2d 13.

Gessler v. Winton, 24 Tenn App 411, 145 SW(2d) 789

p. 488, n. 12. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1251.

The purchaser of stolen goods at an auction can hold the auctioneer responsible to him for the title when the auctioneer was operating for an undisclosed principal. Oliver v. Eureka Spring Sales Co 222 Ark 94, 257 SW2d 367.

p. 488, n. 13. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1250.

p. 488, n. 16. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1242.

§ 59. — Effect of Manner in Which Contract Is Signed.

Am Jur quoted in Gessler v Winton, 24 Tenn App 411, 145 SW(2d) 789

p. 489, n. 19. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1243.

p. 489, n. 1. Anno: 80 ALR2d 1243.

§ 60. Liability to True Owner.

Forms: 2 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 2:1360, 2:1361.

Am Jur quoted in Eureka Springs Sales Co. v Ward, — Ark — 290 SW2d 434.

Am Jur cited in United States v Union Livestock Sales Co. (CA4 W Va) 298 F2d 755.

Pasley v Ropp (Mo App) 334 SW2d 254, 80 ALR2d 1231.

State Secur. Co. v Svoboda, 172 Neb 526, 110 NW2d 109.

Morin v Hood, 96 NH 485, 79 A2d 4.

p. 489, n. 2. Pasley v Ropp (Mo App) 334 SW2d 254, 80 ALR2d 1231.

AUDITA QUERELA

§ 1. Definition and General Nature.

Forms: 12 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 12:511-12:515.

Am Jur cited in Jones v Watts (CCA5th) 142 F2d 575, writ of certiorari denied in 323 US 787, 89 L ed 628, 65 S Ct 310; Oliver v. Shattuck (CCA 10th Okla) 157 F2d 150.

RCL quoted in Robertson v Com. 279 Ky 762, 132 SW2d 69.

RCL cited in Robertson v Com. 279 Ky 762, 132 SW2d 69.

§ 2. When Available.

Forms: 12 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 12:511-12:515.

§ 3. When Not Available.

Forms: 12 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 12:511-12:515.

Am Jur quoted in Wintle v Wright, — Me —, 117 A2d 68.

§ 4. Parties to Proceeding.

Forms: 12 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 12:511-12:515.

§ 5. As Factor in Modern Practice.

Forms: 12 Am Jur Pl & Pr Forms 12:511-12:515.

Am Jur cited in Jones v Watts (CCA 5th 142 F2d 575, writ of certiorari denied in 323 US 787, 89 L ed 628, 65 S Ct 310: Oliver v Shattuck (CCA 10th Okla) 157 F2d 150.

RCL quoted in Robertson v Com. 279 Ky 762, 132 SW2d 69

p. 494, n. 18. Birmingham v Reed, 35 Ala App 31, 44 So2d 607, cert den 253 Ala 414, 44 So2d 614.

AUTOMOBILES

[For latest developments in the law of AUTOMOBILES and AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE, consult Revised Volume 5A, and the pocket supplement thereto.]